Eclipse of the Century

This will be a weekend and Monday unlike any other in the history of the reservation.

Obviously no one knows exactly what to expect in terms of the number of people, but many are expecting a large influx of visitors.

Events start this Friday with the Community Action Team Outdoor Market. The market this Friday will be from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. outside Indian Head Casino.

Then on Saturday and Sunday the market will be at the Museum at Warm Springs from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. And on the Monday of the eclipse the market will again be at the casino from about noon to 6 p.m.

There may still be room for more vendors. If you are interested call the Action Team at 541-553-3148. The market this weekend will also have some vendors in Madras at the Jefferson County Fairgrounds.

The following is a summary of many of the other events happening around the reservation during the weekend and Monday.

There will be a festival on Saturday behind the Warm Springs Community Center: Wiffle ball and kick ball start at 9 a.m.

On Sunday at 9 a.m. there will be an honoring of Warm Springs Nation Little League All Starts and final games.

Then on Sunday at 3 p.m. everyone is encouraged to take in the activities at the Warm Springs Academy. This is a space science event hosted by the Northwestern Earth and Space Sciences Pipeline.

For this there will be a Planetarium and student robotics competition, Sunday 3-5 p.m.

Then on Sunday evening at the Academy 10 p.m. to 1 a.m. there will be star gazing, open to the community. The science team will have powerful telescopes on hand for sky viewing.

On the morning of the eclipse the team will launch high altitude balloons equipped with cameras to record the eclipse.

Young people from other schools in the region will be camping at the Academy football field, where the Pipeline science team will also be camping. This is made possible through an education grant from NASA.

On Monday there will be eclipse viewing, plus the high altitude balloons on the K-8 Academy football field.

Casino, museum

Indian Head Casino will continue their Native Concert Series on Saturday through Monday, August 19-21. Performing artists include Kelly Jackson, Arlie Neskahi & Eagle's Jump, and Charles Littleleaf.

The Museum at Warm Springs will host the Artists Village on Saturday and Sunday.

New School Year Begins at Academy

First grade teacher Ramona Kaloi and students begin the 2017-18 school year at the Academy.

About 680 students returned to class this week at the Warm Springs Academy. The year began early this year, made possible by an Extended Learning Grant. "It's shown that learning time during the school year can have a dramatic effect on student success," said Academy principal and district superintendent Ken Parshall.

Classes this week are through Thursday, August 17; and resume again next Wednesday through Friday. The Warm Springs Back to School Barbecue will be on Thursday, August 31, from 4-6 p.m. at the Academy.

At Madras High School classes for freshman begin on September 6. For all other students at the high school classes begin on September 7. In other school district news:

The school district board of directors agreed this week to reinstate at the Junior ROTC program at Madras High School.

This summer it looked as if the program may have been in jeopardy. At the time there appeared to be no qualified teacher for the program, meaning it would have to be discontinue.

Now, a prospective candidate has been identified, with some aspects of the hiring process still pending. But the school board was confident enough at their meeting on Monday to reinstate the program.

Safety agencies prepare for event

The tribal public safety departments and tribal management are as ready as can be for the weekend and day of the eclipse.

An issue, of course, is that no on knows exactly what to expect.

The Warm Springs Police Department will be working double shifts, with double staff, through the weekend and Monday.

Staff will be in zones at different areas of the reservation, said Public Safety general manager Stan Suenaga. A question will be the ability of officers to get around due to the likely possibility of heavy traffic on the road-

All of the fire stations will be manned with double shifts, Mr. Suenaga said. "We're going to be prepared to do what we can to provide public safety to the reservation," he said.

The public safety agencies are asking the community to be patient during the days in question. "We're going to respond as soon as can," Suenaga said. "Our priorities as always are protection of life and property."

The Oregon State Police will also have a presence on the reservation along the highway. Tribal Public Safety has been working with the Jefferson County and Wasco County sheriffs' departments, and Emergency Medical Services in preparing for this event.

Along with these other essential personnel, tribal management will be on duty on the Monday. Other parts of the organization will be closed for the day.

Some other things to keep in mind as the eclipse approaches:

Warm Springs IHS reminds clients the Nursing Hotline is available 24 hours, seven days a week at 1-866-470-2015. You can speak with a registered nurse at any time.

The clinic will be open 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. through Friday, August 18. The clinic will e closed Saturday and Sunday, August 19 and 20. August 21-25 the clinic will be open 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. On Wednesday, August 23, hours of operation will be 1 to 5 p.m.

Sen. Wyden hosts first W.S. town hall

The future of health care, and the threat from North Korea were two of the main topics of discussion at the Senator Ron Wyden town hall meeting last week in Warm Springs.

Regarding North Korea, Sen. Wyden said a diplomatic solution is the better option than inflammatory rhetoric. If there were a way to negotiate a cessation of the North Korean nuclear program, then the trade-off could be the cessation of U.S. military exercises in the area of North Korea, he said.

Myra Shawaway asked whether it appears that the Affordable Health Care Act will be repealed.

The Senator said the defeat of the repeal effort earlier this summer was the result of many people in the country speaking out against the proposed alternative.

Tribal Councilwoman Carina Miller introduces Sen. Wyden at the start of the town hall.

Medicaid expansion under the Affordable Health Care Act has helped elders and others most in need of coverage, Sen. Wyden said.

The town hall at the Warm Springs Academy was the first by the Senator on the reservation. It was his eight-hundred and forty-second town hall since becoming a U.S. Senator in 1996, his sixty-second town hall this year.

Another topic of discussion at the Warm Springs meeting was economic development on the reservation. Kahseuss Jackson, tribal economic development director, said the reservation is far behind in infrastructure development. This prevents many areas of potential economic development, he said.

Reina Estimo of Native Aspirations asked the Senator's opinion on the tribes' cannabis economic development plan.

Sen. Wyden said that if the state voters have made cannabis legal, then it is a legitimate area of economic development.

Randy Smith brought up the long-standing matter of the tribes' water rights in the Deschutes basin. The tribal right is the senior right in the region, Mr. Smith said. Use of tribal water upstream is contributing billions to the regional economy, without compensation, he said.

Outline for tribal housing at Columbia

Years ago, the federal law that authorized the construction of The Dalles Dam recognized that tribal villages would be flooded by the dam reservoir.

For this reason the authorization provided for the construction of a replacement village. This was back in the 1950s, and construction of the replacement village has yet to happen.

A team with the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers is now working to correct the situation. They met last week for government-to-government consultation with the Tribal Council.

There is a good chance at the present time that funding for the project will be available, as Northwest lawmakers are in support. Addressing of the tribal housing issues at the river, and fulfilling the obligation from the dam construction era, are primary motivating fac-

An issue being worked out is the location of the replacement village, a main topic of the talk last week with Tribal Council.

The project began in earnest in early 2016, when the Corps of Engineers developed an inventory of 36 potential sites for the replacement housing.

Later that year the list was narrowed to three, which are the ones now being looked at. All three are on the Washington side of the Columbia. Wasco Chief JR Smith asked about this aspect of the inventory.

It just happened that the three most suitable sites are on the Washington side, the Corps officials said, as there was no preference as to state.

The guiding factors in identifying potential sites were the impact on cultural resources at the sites; availability of acquisition; and other public concerns.

The three sites are: near Spearfish Lake, closest to The Dalles; at Horsethief Lake, a little farther upstream from Spearsfish; and near Wishram, farther up the

The U.S. Corps of Engineers owns the first two sites, which from that perspective would make development easier. The Wishram site is privately owned, but for sale, and already with some infrastructure.

Development of either of the first two sites, both located close to the river, pose a high risk of disturbance to cultural resources. The Wishram site poses the lowest risk to cultural resources due to its distance from the river, the report

The Horsethief site would pose the most technical challenges for infrastructure, not a problem at the Spearfish or Wishram locations. The Wishram site is a total of 62 acres, and could include 53 homes.

The Spearfish site is 30 buildable acres; and Horsethief, 25 buildable

The meeting last week with Tribal Council was the first of three planned government-to-government meetings in Warm Springs. The Corps team is also working with other treaty tribes on the project.

According to the timeline, a final plan could be completed at the end of 2018.

First pledge drive at KWSO

KWSO is holding its first ever pledge drive, from now through Tuesday, August 22.

The public radio station, at 91.9 FM, is owned and operated by the Confederated Tribes. The station has been on the air for more than 30 years, serving the reservation community and surrounding areas.

The tribes have long supported the local media outlet, and in 2004 KWSO became part of the Corporation for Public Broadcasting Community Service Grant program.

For an individual membership, there is a one-time annual fee of $35. You can also choose a sustaining membership, and give a specific amount of money monthly, having it automatically drawn from your bank account or credit card.

The pledge drive is a chance for the community, and visitors to Central Oregon, to show their appreciation and support for Warm Springs Community Ra-

Video project gives tribal views on climate change

Native people see and experience climate change more than most. This is because of the traditions that come with the changing seasons, from root, berry and other harvests, to fishing and

In recent years members have noticed how the start of these harvest seasons have changed, coming earlier by weeks or more.

Eight tribal members have produced videos on the effects of climate change on the community, tribal culture and local environment.

"These stories address the very local impacts of climate change, and show what is happening in the Warm Springs community," the StoryCenter introduction says of the videos.

The stories address environmental degradation, loss of traditional resources and livelihoods, and health challenges related to extreme weather events.

"As a collection, the stories serve as an urgent call to action for climate change preparedness and mitiga-

This was a project in partnership with the Oregon Climate and Health Program, with the Oregon Health Authority.

Tribal members who participated are:

Brenda Scott, video title Traditions. Danny Martinez, Cycle of Life.

Karlen Yallup, Survival.

Morningowl, Neal Changing Seasons.

Edna Gonzales, Much to Learn.

Tamera Calhoun, Through the Eyes of a Native Veteran.

Scott Kalama, Water is Life.

Lorena Medina, Ready. The videos range between two and three minutes in length.

This effort is part of the Oregon Health Authority Climate and Health Program 'Resilience Plan,' released earlier this year.

The plan identifies storytelling as an important method for increasing awareness and building community partnerships to better prepare, plan, and recover from climate risks.

Creating videos that highlight the concerns of community members is one way to work together and lift the voices of people on the frontlines of climate change.

The videos were created in a workshop co-facilitated the nonprofit StoryCenter.

Each participant developed their own story, picked out their own images, and put it all together using a digital editing software program.

There was a screening of the videos last week in Warm Springs. You can see them all on Youtube at:

These are the preview summaries of the member climate change videos:

'Water is Life' by Scott Kalama:

Scott remembers when Warm Springs residents didn't give a thought to whether or not their drinking water sources were safe, and contrasts this with recent events that have suggested blue-green algae is making the tap water in the area undrinkable.

He recalls how his grandfather told him he needed to "choose his battle," and shares that he has found it, in the form of his ongoing concerns about access to clean water.

'Traditions' by Brenda Scott:

A story about the loss of traditions, the importance of ceremonies, and efforts to bring back the old ways. In this powerful story, Brenda paints a vivid picture of life in Warm Springs when she was a girl.

Horses were the only form of transportation, foods were gathered rather than bought in markets, and children were honored for their accomplishments.

Brenda sees hope in efforts within her family and within the community, to revive aspects of a vanishing way of life.

'Cycle of Life' by Danny Martinez:

Danny talks about his lifelong love of salmon fishing, which continues to be a major source of sustenance for his family and the broader Warm Springs community.

He touches on the changes he is witnessing and adapting to, as water temperatures rise, and he

Edna reminisces about her experiences as a young girl in Warm Springs, when the salmon were bountiful and every part of the fish was put to practical use.

She talks of the warnings made by elders about what would happen when the rivers in the area were dammed, and she ends by appreciating her mother for passing along so much traditional knowledge.

'Ready' by Lorena Medina:

Lorena is a young woman who works with the Warm Springs Emergency Preparedness program. In her story, she shares the challenges her step-father has faced in finding agricultural work due to changes in the seasons, and the impact this has had on her family.

She also talks about rising food prices and concerns about water shortages. Lorena ends by acknowledging she never expected to see impacts of climate change so close to home.

Heart of Oregon Corps reaches funding goal

Each morning the dedicated group of young people load up work their tools, and travel to work sites up to 50 miles away.

They work on Heart of Oregon Corps projects: Building affordable homes for low-income families, maintaining beloved recreational trails, managing forest lands for fire prevention.

As they gain skills, they gain confidence in themselves and motivation to pursue their goals.

With the support of the community, Heart of Oregon Corps has reached a capital campaign milestone to raise over a half million dollars for a new fleet of work vehicles.

The new fleet will help Heart of Oregon Corps sustain programs, helping improve economic and social vitality in Central Oregon, while increasing pathways out of poverty for young adults. A number of Warm Springs youth have succeeded through this pro-

For the funding campaign, corporate partnership played an integral role. Special thanks to the Aperion Management Group, Robberson Ford, Mt. Bachelor and Deschutes Brewery. The 100-Plus Women Who Care Central Oregon group helped purchase the industrial wood chipper in the spring of 2016.

Private foundations like the MCM Fund, MJ Murdock Charitable Trust, the Ford Family Foundation, the Collins Foundation, the Eddie Williamson Foundation, and several donor advised funds at the Oregon Community Foundation also greatly contributed to the campaign's success.

The Heart of Oregon Corps board of directors, individual community members, and local business owners also showed their strong support of the mission by providing donations and addition in-kind assistance.

Heart of Oregon Corps is the local non-profit that employs over 325 of young adults each year. The mission is to inspire and empower positive change in the lives of young people through jobs, education and stewardship.

Heart of Oregon Corps continues to empower longterm positive change during the most critical times of a young person's life.

Seventh Annual DRCI Powwow

Inmates at the Deer Ridge Correctional Institute hosted the Seventh Annual DRCI Powwow last weekend.

There was a good turnout of friends and family from Warm Springs. At Deer Ridge there are over 900 inmates, with between 30 and 40 being Native American.

On hand from Warm Springs Behavioral Health were Guy Wallulatum and Sarah Frank, among others.

Sarah had just finished another series of the Wellbriety Celebrating Families classes at Deer Ridge. She introduced the four recent DRCI graduates of the program, who spoke of the benefits of completing the course.

She is also conducting the classes at the Warm Springs Jail. If you would like more information on this program, you can reach Family Preservation at 541-615-0036.

The DRCI Powwow included the drum and songs, Grand Entry, lunch, talks and prayers, and the sweat lodge. On the menu were venison and salmon, hamburders, grilled hot dogs, corn, fry bread and huckleberries. The new Chaplain at DRCI, Ken Ball, helped to organize the event.

Nena Springs fire mostly contained

The Nena Springs fire burned across more than 40,000 acres of mostly Warm Springs Reservation land.

The human-caused fire, located in the northeast area of the reservation, destroyed 10 buildings including six residential structures, one of which had been an active residence.

The other buildings were unoccupied, or were outbuildings. Two of the structures were old enough to be considered of historical significance.

The fire started off the reservation on private land, August 8. It spread quickly to the reservation, with wind gusts and high temperatures creating extreme fire behavior.

The Simnasho community and nearby residences were evacuated. The Warm Springs Red Cross team set up temporary shelter for evacuees at the community center. By Tuesday of this week the Nena Springs fire was more than 60 percent contained. The cooler weather over the weekend, bringing some rain showers, was a great help to the fire teams.

The response effort included more than 440 personnel, including 112 firefighters. The Warm Springs Hotshots worked on the east side of the Deschutes River, making sure west winds did not spot the fire across the water.

The response included nine hand crews, three helicopters, five dozers and 32 engines. The fire was under the command of the Northwest Incident Management Team 12.

When the fire first started, there was a challenge in gathering resources, because teams were already at other fires burning around the state and region.

Sea lions driving Willamette steelhead to extinction

Native winter steelhead trout in the Willamette River could go extinct, if sea lions continue their current pace of destruction.

This message came last week from the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife.

There is an 89 percent probability that at least one species of the fish will go extinct in the near future, without some kind of intervention with the sea lions.

The sea lions congregate just below Willamette Falls at the time when the fish are moving upstream

In 2016-17, a record-low 512 steelhead made it past the falls and upstream. As recently as the 1990s, up to 15,000 of the fish were making it past the falls.

Meanwhile, Northwest congressional leaders are trying to give Oregon and Washington broader authority to kill sea lions at Bonneville Dam on the Columbia River.

This proposed law would also apply to the sea lion logjam at Willamette Falls in Oregon City.

Demolition project at campus

The tribes are getting ready to demolish eight condemned buildings in the campus area. The BIA is funding this project, an initial part of the downtown improvement plan.

Two other buildings in the area of Shitike Creek, and the old Simnasho school building are also slated for demolition.

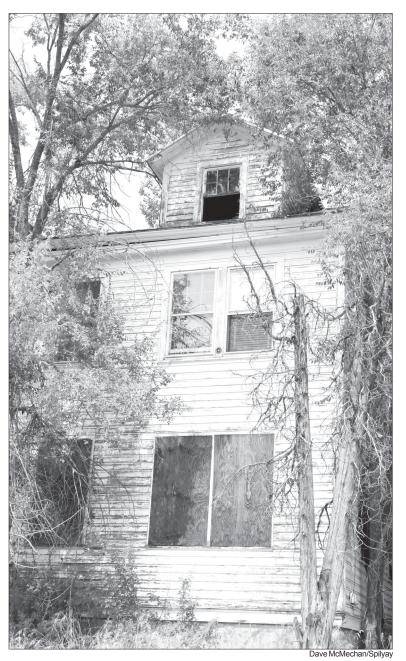

The project was put out to bid, and the tribes received a number of proposals, said chief operations Alyssa Macy.

She discouraged anyone from entering the condemned buildings, as they may contain asbestos or some other hazard.

There is nothing of value inside, she said. The buildings that are to be demolished are clearly marked with a large red Clearing the campus of the abandoned buildings is part of an overall plan that would renovate the downtown area. The most expensive infrastructure aspect of this project would be the removal and replacement of the underground water and wastewater pipes, which are very outdated.

These were installed by the BIA, so the responsibility would seem to be with the agency. This project has been pending for a number of years.

DAPL delaying artifacts settlement

The wealthy backers of the Dakota Access Pipeline have managed to drag out a dispute over the disturbance of tribal artifacts for nearly a year.

The company admitted that it disturbed the site and modified the construction path last October without informing the North Dakota Public Service Commission.

A minimum fine of $15,000—a small percentage of the $3.8 billion cost of the project—was proposed a month later. Yet the back

Yet the backers of the pipeline have refused to pay up. So the commission, apparently tired of the delay, is now offering to settle the dispute for the minimum $15,000.

The artifacts that were disturbed during construction last October are known as cairns, which are stone formations or stone features that tribes use to mark important places, including burial grounds and sacred cites.

BE PREPARED FOR THE AUGUST 21st TOTAL SOLAR ECLIPSE

Central Oregon expects record numbers of visitors coming to view the total solar eclipse and local residents should be prepared to stay off the highway and get in what you need for the days leading up to and following the eclipse.

- Get your grocery shopping done now
- Pick up your prescriptions and or medical supplies early
- Fill your gas tanks
- Get Cash (ATMs may run out or be hindered by slow internet)
- Get doctor and dentist appointments out of the way

The influx of traffic is expected to begin Thursday, August 17th and could remain busy until Wednesday, August 23rd.

With so many people traveling to our area for the Total Solar Eclipse – everyone needs to take

Cover your nose and mouth when you sneeze or cough, wash your hand frequently, and avoid FORGET extra caution to prevent the spread of illness.

With the eclipse occurring in August, one of the hottest months for Central Oregon remember to limit your exposure to the sun and stay hydrated.

BE FOOD SAFE BY practicing safe food handling. If you are camping or using coolers at home -- remember a block of ice keeps longer than ice cubes. Cold Food needs to be kept below 40 °F and hot food needs to stay above 140 °F. Watching a solar eclipse is a memorable experience, but looking directly at the sun can seriously damage your eyes. Solar eclipse glasses will be handed out at the Native Sol Event by Community Counseling on Sunday, August 20th. If you already

Eclipse: Native Sol on campus

The Native Sol festival will be on the campus area Saturday through Monday, hosted by Native Aspirations and the Health and Human Services Branch.

Native Sol starts each of the three days at 9 a.m. when the vendors are open. Tribal exhibition dances will be Saturday and Sunday at 1 p.m.;

family games and prizes at 3 p.m.; and live music at 5 p.m. On Saturday the live music is by Blue Flamez, and on Sunday by Kelly Jackson.

Native Sol on Monday will feature a powwow at 11 a.m. following the eclipse. Vendors need to register and pay the $30 vendor fee. You can register in person at the Family Resource Center with Reina Estimo. Or email: reina.estimo@wstribes.org

You can reach her at 541-615-0144 for more information. There is no camping at the Native Sol site; no campfires or fireworks. This is a drug and alcohol free event. Traffic in that area will be one way in on Wasco Street and one way our on Warm Springs Street.

Safety: Vision safety is critical

Clinic regular hours of operation resume on August 28. Walk-In appointments only from 8 am. to 5 p.m. on Friday, August 18, and Monday and Tuesday, August 21-22.

Due to the possibility of heavy traffic and long delays in travel, the clinic will be seeing walk-in appointments only on these dates. There will be no pre-scheduled appointments or same day appointments available.

Hydration: It is extremely important to drink enough water to keep you hydrated. Remember to have extra water in case of water shortage.

Vision: Watching the solar eclipse without eclipse glasses can result in vision loss. There will be a limited number of glasses available at Warm Springs Health and Wellness Center.

You can get these glasses from the Optometry Depart-

Glasses will also be distributed to the community on Sunday at the Native Sol event.
