Tribal budget season starting for 2018

Tribal Council and Management last week began the 2018 budget discussion, an early start this year to another challenging budget season.

Management and Finance presented an initial overview of how to achieve a balanced budget again next year.

A goal for 2018 is to avoid employee lay-offs, though most current non-essential vacancies would have to remain unfilled, said Secretary-Treasurer Michele Stacona.

She also presented another cost-saving idea for the tribes, involving the 5 percent employer discretionary 401(k) Plan contributions.

Each year Tribal Council approves these discretionary contributions. They are contributions on behalf of all eligible employees, whether or not an employee chooses to make his or her own contribution to the plan.

Employees are eligible if he or she has worked 1,000 hours for the tribes, or if the person is already 62 years old.

"The amount of the discretionary contributions is determined by Tribal Council, and may change from time to time," according to the summary of the tribes' 401(k) Plan. The contribution amount has been at 5 percent for several years.

Making these contributions is good when the budget conditions are right, Ms. Stacona said. But in the present budget situation, she said, Tribal Council may want to consider a one-year change to the contributions amount.

She presented three alternatives: maintaining the 5 percent, reducing to 2.5 percent, and suspending the contribution for the year.

Back to School BBQ on Thursday

The Back to School Barbecue is this Thursday, August 31, from 4-6 p.m. at the Warm Springs Academy.

Classes at the Academy resume at 8:10 a.m. on Wednesday, September 6. This year the students at the Academy started in mid August, extra days made possible through an Extended Learning grant.

At Madras High School freshman start classes on September 6. All other students at the high school start back on Thursday, September 7.

There is still time to contribute clothing for the Back to School Barbecue. The drop box is at the Family Resource Center through this Wednesday, August 30. The clothing drive is a project of the Papalaxsimisha Program at Health and Human Services.

Papalaxsimisha is recommending new or gently used clothing, shoes, new socks and new underwear for all ages. For more information contact Ervanna LittleEagle at: ervlileagle@gmail.com

Or call Jaylyn Suppah at 541-280-1933.

CPE funding plan set for October

Tribal Council in July proposed a supplemental budget that would fund the Cannabis Project Enterprise. The idea is to invest some of the carbon sequestration revenue into the construction of the CPE greenhouse. The General Council meeting on the proposal, involving the creation of the Warm Springs Financial Strategies LLC, also happened in late July.

Council has not yet adopted a resolution regarding the supplemental budget, as the carbon sequestration revenue has not yet arrived.

The revenue can be expected in October, and Council wants to wait until the money is in-hand before adopting the resolution.

The sole purpose of the Financial Strategies LLC is to provide financing for membership-approved capital improvement and economic development projects. The CPE funding proposal involves $3 million of the carbon sequestration revenue.

Carbon sequestration should net more than $10 million over a term of years, Warm Springs Ventures estimates.

Budget presentations

Tribal branches, departments and enterprises will begin their 2018 budget presentations the week of September 5-8. Council will then have a proposal by the end of September, and the district meetings will be in October.

The construction phase of the Plateau Travel Plaza is about half way complete. The tribes and Indian Head Casino broke ground on the project in April, and the completion time is early spring of 2018.

The Travel Plaza is on Cherry Lane at the Madras Industrial Park, featuring the 13,500-square-foot main building. This will house a convenience store, restaurant, some class II gaming, plus shower and laundry. The gas and diesel tanks are now in, with the canopy over the diesel island going up this week. The 10-acre site includes parking for about 70 semi trucks. There will be 30 to 40 new jobs at the plaza. Tribal Council approved the project in early 2015 after a positive feasibility report.

CPS seeking foster parents, support

The Warm Springs Children’s Protective Services is seeking community members who are interested in being foster parents. Other community involvement—donations of clothing or of volunteer time, for instance—are also very welcome, said Cecelia Collins, who is serving as CPS director.

Anyone interested in becoming a foster parent is encouraged to visit CPS, located on campus across from the Education building. For information you can reach them at 541-553-3209.

CPS does as much as possible with a limited number of staff. Help from the community can be a tremendous benefit, Mrs. Collins said. A foster home in the local community can allow the child to continue living and going to school here, instead of moving to a new community and new school, Mrs. Collins said.

There is a training program for potential foster parents, who then work with the CPS caseworkers.

Transitional house

A new project with CPS

is the creation of a transitional home for parents who are working to get back together with a child or children.

The project involves the remodeling of the Vernon Jackson Home, located by CPS. When the house is done, there will be two bedrooms, kitchen, living room, etc.; so the parent and child or children can live there during the transition period.

Native crew wins film award

An all-Native American film team won two of the top awards at the recent Portland 48 Hour Film Project.

The short film Missing Indigenous won Best Film and Best Cinematography in the Portland 48 Hour Film Project

Film producer is Isaac Trimble, and the director is LaRonn Katchia. Cast and crew are known as Team RedFawn, bringing authentic Native American and Indigenous issues to the forefront of mainstream cinema.

About Missing Indigenous:

Set in a rural reservation town, the story begins as two detectives—played by Solomon Trimble (Sam Uley of Twilight), and Isaac Trimble—investigate the homicide of a young woman marked with a killer’s deadly signature.

With the assistance of entomologist Brett Rivers, played by actor David Velarde, the detectives soon realize Brett may have a lead on this murderer’s lethal trademark.

Taking them on a mysterious journey through the dense forests of the reservation, the detectives are soon on the trail of an elusive, faceless killer.

What unfolds is a heart wrenching story of a silent epidemic, the disappearance of Native American and Indigenous women.

You can see the director’s cut at the website: drive.google.com/file/d/0BxRO3-I-X9SqYVdQZGdFcUw1akk/view?usp=sharin

The back story

Native American women are murdered at more than 10 times the national average. The true number of these missing indigenous women is unknown.

While many of these cases go unsolved, and are forgotten or ignored by American governments, these women are more than just statistics: they are mothers, sisters, grandmothers, aunts and daughters.

Missing Indigenous captures the emotion that continues to burden the families and communities affected by the loss of these women.

Bringing an all Native cast and crew together was paramount in making the emotional connections in representing the authenticity of Native American people, LaRonn Katchia said.

As Missing Indigenous gains exposure throughout the industry, he said, team RedFawn remains humbled by authentically and accurately representing Native American lives, communities, and realities through film.

As the team prepares for Filmapalooza, held in Paris, France in March 2018, they plan to enter Missing Indigenous into other film competitions and festivals.

They invite you to share in and experience this remarkable and ground-breaking achievement. Their gofundme account is at: gofundme.com / SendaFilmTeamtoFrance

48 Film Project

Team RedFawn describes the recent festival:

The 48 Hour Film Project is a wild and sleepless weekend in which a team makes a movie—write, shoot and edit—in just 48 hours.

On Friday night, teams draw a genre from a hat. They are then given a character, prop and line to include in their films.

On Sunday night, in a wild dash to the drop off event, the film is turned in—and teams celebrate. The film is then screened at a local theater in front of an audience of filmmakers, friends and families.

The 48HFP is the world’s oldest and largest timed filmmaking competition. The 48HFP is all about creativity and fun. It’s also about community.

For years the 48HFP has been helping local creative people connect to make films. These connections go beyond filmmaking—taking part in the 48 helps people find friends, collaborators and jobs. There are even some couples, including married couples, who met through the 48.

Open committees meeting

An open joint tribal committee meeting is coming up this Friday, September 1 at the Agency Longhouse.

The meeting, hosted by the Land Use Planning Committee, will be most of the day, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The agenda includes committee updates, Sutton Mountain tour, and IRMP3. Light refreshments and meal provided.

Public notice

Attention all Warm Springs and Simnasho Schoolie Flats water users:

As a public water system, we are required by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, under the 1996 amendments to the Safe Drinking Water Act, to publish the Consumer Confidence Report. Copies are available by calling the water treatment plant at 541-553-1472.

Legal help for elders

The Central Oregon Council on Aging and Legal Aid Services of Oregon are working together to offer legal services to low-income older adults living in Central Oregon including the reservation.

The services are provided to adults 60 years and older with preference to those in greatest social and economic need, with particular attention to low income, minority and frail individuals.

To schedule an appointment and to get more information, call Louise Muir at 541-475-1148. The following list of priority services will be offered to seniors:

Income maintenance, health care, food and nutrition, housing and utilities. Additional services may include correspondence, negotiations and preparation of legal documents.

Neither Wolf nor Dog opening in Madras

Dave Bald Eagle.

The Native film Neither Wolf nor Dog will open at Madras Cinema 5 this Friday, September 1.

The film stars Lakota elder Dave Bald Eagle, who passed away last year at 97.

A priority for filmmaker Steven Lewis Simpson has been to make the movie available as close as possible to Native communities.

Three of the first six theatres where the film premiered are owned by tribes.

On some occasions entire schools on reservations have gone to see the film in theatres. The film is excellent for youth, elders and all others.

Steven Lewis gives some insight into what to expect with Neither Wolf nor Dog:

During the films climax, the character Dan, played by Dave Bald Eagle, takes us into the heart of Wounded Knee.

Mr. Bald Eagle’s family connection to the massacre was even deeper than that of the character he played.

“The film is fiction but the script was thrown away at this point,” Mr. Simpson said.

“Dave then delivers the most powerful of improvised scenes. At the end of filming this scene, he said he had been holding in those words for 95 years.”

Neither Wolf nor Dog, based on the book by Kent Nerburn, is a tribute to the amazing legacy of Dave Bald Eagle.

Film critic Colin Covert says, “By the time the end credits arrive, the characters of this modest, crowd-funded feature are practically unforgettable. It’s immensely serious but no downer.”

Besides Dave Bald Eagle the cast includes Christopher Sweeney (The Veil, Chasing Mavericks), Richard Ray Whitman (Barking Water, Drunktown’s Finest), Roseanne Supernault (Maina, Blackstone), Tatanka Means (Tiger Eyes, Into The West, Saints and Strangers), Zahn McClarnon (Fargo TV Series, Mekko, Red Road, Longmire, The Son).

During eclipse

Kudos to the community members, and a pat on the back to those who worked through the solar eclipse weekend.

I am feeling very grateful for the Warm Springs community, as things seemed to go very well through the Solar Eclipse weekend from the view of the Museum at Warm Springs.

We were open Saturday, Sunday and Monday with the local vendors, arts and crafts demonstrators, pow-wow dancing, playing the guitar, all at the museum.

We enjoyed a fairly good amount of visitors through the weekend. Some people were from other countries, other states that came through the museum. It was all good, very enjoyable for all.

It was great that administration pulled together to make available camping spaces, parking space for the solar eclipse viewers. Great to see the local people directing traffic, very helpful as we didn't have to sit and wait for a long time just to get across the street or to get on Highway 26.

Just want to thank all the vendors who came here, not only to the museum but to the campus area to provide some of our culture, dancing, and good food to eat. Great huckleberry pies and fry bread.

I compliment all the talented people who shared their native talent in beading, weaving and art work. You took the time to share with

For the Years of Service

Cassie Katchia, Janice Clements and Councilwoman Val Switzler during the award presentation at Tribal Council.

Janice Clements has been a tribal community health advocate for many years. She has brought dedication and valuable experience to the tribal Health and Welfare Committee, addressing with care the matters at hand.

Her contribution to tribal community health was recognized recently with an Award for Excellence for Years of Service, given by the IHS Portland Area Office of Direct Service and Contracting. Janice accepted the award last week at Tribal Council, as presented by Councilwoman Val Switzler.

Janice has worked for the tribes in the health field longer than most anyone. She recalled how years ago, as she was getting started in the field, a priority in tribal health was diabetes.

At the time, she said, it was a little understood disease on the reservation. She studied its causes and effects, "it was a learning process," Janice said.

The tribes then received a diabetes grant, a pilot project, the first of its kind in Indian Country. And today the tribes and IHS have among the best diabetes prevention and treatment programs. Maintaining funding for this is essential to the community, Janice says.

On a family level, she said, it's especially important for members to be tested regularly for diabetes. The consequences of the disease are many, from kidney and heart problems, to high blood pressure, to name just some of ailments.

You can see the extent of diabetes in Indian Country—and the effort to address the problem—by the number of residents who are on dialysis, Janice said.

When presented with the Award for Excellence, she thanked the Portland Area IHS and the Tribal Council.

"I never expected this," she said. Of her years on the Health and Welfare Committee, "I've learned as much I could, and always tried to do my best."

the community and with visitors. Thank you all for coming together. Thank you all. Thank you who worked, put in a lot of time to make this place more organized, more enjoyable. Was great to witness the solar eclipse and tribal members top it off with the war hoops! It was a good weekend in the community.

(Except for the break-ins and thievery, that's another story!)

One of the best places to view the eclipse was at the Warm Springs Academy, where a team of scientists was on hand from the Northwestern Earth and Sciences Pipeline, a NASA-funded project youth science project. The scientists and students launched high-altitude balloons just before the eclipse. The science team brought a mobile planetarium, robotics equipment for a youth robotics competition, and several high-powered telescopes and cameras for viewing the night sky and the eclipse.

Unforgettable

To the Warm Springs Community:

My family and I were fortunate to be on the reservation for the recent solar eclipse, which was an amazing experience. But it wasn't just the sky show that touched me—it was the ground I was on and the people around me.

To see the old familiar landscape darkened by the moon's shadow, to hear people cheering down at the Academy (which was only a dream when I lived on the rez), to feel the warm embrace of our hosts and the community... it's something I'll never forget.

My adopted home was the perfect place to watch this beautiful celestial event!

In 1979, I shared another eclipse with Warm Springs—a low-key, local affair, nothing like this year's Internet-driven phenomenon. But 38 years later, the tribes were clearly ready for the hordes!

A lot of people worked incredibly hard to pull off the eclipse weekend, and every flagger, shopkeeper or craftsman we talked to was gracious and welcoming.

Most meaningful for me, though, were the spontaneous personal connections made during my two days in Warm Springs. I felt like I was beginning to complete a circle as I introduced my grown son to folks who were such a big part of my life before he was born.

You all remain very important to me, and I plan to come back for more visits and hugs when the sun and the moon and the wildfires aren't keeping everyone so busy!

Off-reservation hunting regs

Tribal Council approved this season's off-reservation hunting regulations, as recommended by the Branch of Natural Resources.

Please come by the Natural Resources office to pick up your off-reservation tags, guidelines and regulations packet.

Updated hunting information is also available on the fishing and hunting hotline at 541-553-2000.

Please take advantage of off-reservation ceded land hunting tags. These opportunities reduce hunting pressure on the reservation, which may help improve wildlife populations.

Please make sure off-reservation hunting takes place on public (unclaimed) lands. It is the hunters' responsibility to know where they are hunting, where they are allowed to hunt, what weapons they are allowed to use and what the bag limit is. For questions regarding hunting, please contact the Natural Resources Department at 541-553-2001.

Each tribal hunter may possess two tags for each hunt at a time, and may be issued additional tags only after previously issued tags are filled and reported.

Off-reservation hunting is designated for public (unclaimed) lands. Illegally harvesting wildlife on the reservation using ceded land tags or harvesting the wrong sex can have great long-term negative impacts to the tribes' wildlife populations.

Overharvesting wildlife and illegally harvesting females reduces wildlife population numbers for multiple generations. Please help protect the tribes' wildlife resources by reporting poaching violations to 541-553-2033 or 541-553-1171.

There is mandatory reporting of all hunter harvest.

Failure to report harvest results for off-reservation ceded land and reservation hunts will result in a loss of hunting privileges for subsequent tags.

Please be honest with your hunter reporting. If you are issued a tag, you have the right to hunt and harvest an animal. Harvest and hunting information is important for the wildlife department in determining wildlife population sizes, herd compositions and hunting pressure.

This information also helps us determine where there are and are not animals, which helps focus our habitat restoration efforts on the reservation.

Your continued support and participation with hunter reporting are greatly appreciated. Thank you for your participation!

Tribes open fall commercial fall fishery season at Columbia

The first significant commercial fall fishing season opened earlier this month. The public can purchase salmon from Indian fishers along the Columbia River. Other common sale locations include:

Marine Park at Cascade Locks, North Bonneville (one mile east of Bonneville Dam on the Washington shore), Koberg (east of Hood River), and Celilo Village.

Closely monitored throughout the season, the Columbia River fall tribal fishery is adjusted as the run progresses to ensure that the fishery remains within the harvest limits.

The limits were established under the U.S. v. Oregon fisheries management agreement. The agreement aims to protect, rebuild, and enhance upper Columbia River fish runs.

Indian and non-Indian harvest guidelines outlined in the management agreement help to ensure sustainability of the resource.

"The tribes played a major role in rebuilding fall chinook to harvestable populations and are now putting these salmon on the market through a carefully managed and sustainable fishery," said

Jaime A. Pinkham, executive director of the Columbia River Inter-Tribal Fish Commission.

"Our commitment to the salmon has made the tribes leaders in regional salmon recovery efforts and we are dedicated to use the best available science in the management of all our fisheries practices."

The tribal fishery is protected under treaties with the federal government signed in 1855, when the Warm Springs, Yakama, Umatilla, and Nez Perce tribes reserved their rights to ceremonial, subsistence and commercial fishing at all usual and accustomed fishing places in the Columbia river basin.

"Salmon is fundamental to the culture and identity of all the tribes in this region, and have played a significant role in the regional economy for thousands of years," said Pinkham.

"By enjoying sustainably harvested Indian-caught salmon, everyone has the chance to be a part of this ancient tradition."

Youth, Tulalip helping improve huckleberry habitat

When Inez Bill’s father died 15 years ago, she wanted to gather huckleberries for his funeral, so she headed up to Mount Hood.

“It was devastating,” Inez re-members. “I would probably need at least 12 gallons for my father’s memorial. There was not enough. We didn’t even pick a gallon of berries.”

Inez is a member of the Tulalip tribe. Traditionally, the tribal mem-bers ate huckleberries—at home and in ceremonies—brewed tea from the leaves, and used the juice to dye their clothes.

Huckleberries were abundant thanks to forest fires, which opened up wetlands and meadows and made space for short, shrubby plants that need the sun—plants like huckleberry bushes.

But for decades the Forest Ser-vice has tried to put out fires as fast as possible. So there isn’t much huckleberry habitat left.

That’s why the Tulalip Tribe, like Confederated Tribes of Warm Springs, is working with the Forest Service to recreate open patches in the forest.

Cathy Whitlock, a professor at Montana State University, looks at tree rings and lake sediments to study the history of fire. She says fire records don’t track the climate in the wet forests of western Wash-ington and Oregon, which means people were setting forest fires.

“People were using fire for food-gathering and improving the berry-collecting,” says Whitlock, the director of the Institute on Eco-systems at Montana State. “They were using it to improve travel, for

What the Tulalip are doing to-day is a little different:

It’s a hot, dry August morning, and a group of teens is gathered on the slope of a mountain not far from the Skykomish River. They’re wearing sunglasses and gardening gloves and grazing on huckleber-ries while they await instruction.

The Tulalip Tribe is working with the Forest Service to maintain a patch of huckleberries in the Mt. Baker-Snoqualmie National Forest.

“We had a forester come through with a chainsaw and cut a bunch of the saplings here,” Holly Zox tells the teenagers. She’s a botan-ist, ecologist and contractor for the Tulalip Tribe.

The teenagers’ job is going to be to pull those dried-out saplings down the hillside: “What we’re go-ing to do is go up, form a fireline, and pass it all down so that we can pile it up and free those huck-leberries,” Zox tells the kids.

The land the teens are trying to clear is federal land; it’s part of the Mount Baker-Snoqualmie Na-tional Forest.

Today’s brush-clearing is part of an agreement between the For-est Service and the Tulalip Tribe signed five years ago. The agree-ment is based on the 1855 Treaty of Point Elliott, which reserves the Tulalip’s right to hunt and gather in unclaimed lands.

“The tribes see their treaty right as more than just the ability to gather,” says Libby Nelson, who helped negotiate the agreement. The tribe’s members also, she says,

“want to be part of the steward-ship as they had been for thou-sands of years.”

The agreement allows the tribe to keep some clear-cut Forest Ser-vice land open for huckleberry habitat. “Logging is kind of do-ing what prescribed burns and tra-ditional burning used to do to keep certain areas open and from hav-ing the conifers overtake these ear-lier forest stages and meadows,” she explains.

Controlled burns are still on the table for the future—but for now, the tribe is focusing on clearing the land with chainsaws—and teenag-ers. This isn’t just a chance for the kids to get involved in main-taining land for huckleberry habi-tat. It’s also an opportunity for them to taste the berries—often for the first time.

“I thought it was just a regular old blueberry and then I tasted it,” says 14-year-old Martel Richwine, a member of the Tulalip Tribe.

“I was like, ‘Wow, this is more delicious than a blueberry.’ It had that little pop kind of like those little boba balls. It just has that little pop of that nice, sweet juice that you have.”

Now that the Tulalip can access this huckleberry grove, tribal elder Inez Bill says she has all the huck-leberries she needs. Today, she and a coworker are brewing huckle-berry tea.

“Knowing that we have an area that we can go into and to plan for future generations to have this area set aside for our use,” Bill says, that’s really what the Treaty of Point Elliott was all about.

Lummi Tribe declares state of emergency after salmon spill

The Lummi Nation declared a state of emergency on Thursday after thousands of farmed salmon spilled into tribal treaty waters in Washington.

Tribal fishermen are trying to catch as many of the Atlantic salmon as possible. The goal is to protect native fish species from being eaten or exposed to dis-eases, Chairman Timothy Ballew II said.

“The tribe has not received con-firmation that the Atlantic salmon spill has been contained, so we have to assume that the invasive fish continues to spill into these waters, putting the spawning grounds for native salmon species at risk,” Ballew said.

The fish came from a fish farm operated by Cooke Aquaculture in the Deepwater Bay off of Cypress Island. In a statement last week, the company said “several thousand Atlantic salmon” escaped from holding pens, but a spokesperson subsequently said that the figure may be far higher.

The state is also encouraging people to catch as many of the fish as possible. As the name implies, the farmed Atlantic salmon are not native to the Pacific Ocean.

“The Atlantic salmon bring with them pollution, virus and parasite amplification, and all that harms Pacific salmon and our waters of Washington,” said Kurt Beardslee, the director of the Wild Fish Con-servancy Northwest.

New web system for Academy parents

The Warm Springs Academy is now using a web application called PickUp Patrol. The application makes it easier for parents to make changes to the students' regular after-school dismissal plans.

Previously, parents may have written a note or made a phone call to the office to let staff know about dismissal plan changes.

For example, the student may be getting picked up in stead of taking the bus; or the student may be staying after for an activity.

Now, the parent can simply sign into PickUp Patrol from a smartphone or computer and submit the changes there.

The Academy is suggesting all plan changes now be submitted through PickUp Patrol.

PickUp Patrol is Convenient: You can make changes days, weeks, or even months in advance.

Automated: Reduces classroom interruptions and helps the school to better track who is going where.

Safe and Secure: You will receive a confirmation e-mail each time you submit a plan change for your child.

The school has a flyer and other information on the new system. If you have any questions, contact the Academy at hgonzalez@509j.net

Or call 541-553-1128.

Community note...

St. Charles Health Systems invites the community to a '4 the Health of It' event on Thursday, September 7 at the Warm Springs Community Center social hall. This will be from 3-4:30.
