2017 Best Traditional Recording

James Edmund Greeley first played a Native flute about 20 years ago. Charles Littleleaf had given James' dad Hamilton Greeley a flute, but James was the one who wanted to give it a try.

"It took me three days before I figured out the primary scale," James says. And after that he never looked back.

He learned different techniques from other flute players, developing his own advanced style of play-

In time he became known among Native flute makers, who would ask him to test their new flutes, and make suggestions for improvements.

People would give James flutes as gifts. He now has 17 of the artfully crafted instruments, plus two bone whistles that he made himself.

About two and a half years ago James began working on what would become the album Before America. He recorded the songs at the Portland studio of Ibori Records.

The song titles are in Native languages, Sahaptin and Hopi. His music gives melody to the themes stated in the titles (here in English): Celilo Falls, POW Chief Joseph, Salmon Feast, The Ones that Went on, as examples. James spent a couple of months with his dad's language and history books, translating the titles into the Native languages.

After two years of work, he released Before America in 2016. The album this month won the Best Traditional Recording at the 2017 Native American Music Awards.

The award was especially nice because of the amount of work that went into making Before America, James says.

Ballot asks about Rec district

Voters in the Warm Springs precinct received ballots recently for the November 7 election.

There is one question on the ballot, about a funding proposal for the Madras Aquatic Center Recreation District.

The recreation district is the same as the Jefferson County 509-J school district, including Warm Springs.

The measure would impose a $0.40 per $1,000 of assessed real property value. The property of the reservation is not subject to the tax and would not be affected.

The measure would provide funding for the recreation district to continue its year-round recreation operations and services.

If the measure does not pass, the recreation district general fund would be reduced by about 45 percent. This would require elimination of the out-of-water recreation programming, swim teams, water polo and some safety personnel.

Tribes, review panel visit restoration projects

The Ceded Lands of the Confederated Tribes are an area of more than 10 million acres, from the Cascade Mountains in the west to the Blue Mountains in the east.

With the Treaty of 1855 the tribes kept the right to use the land in the usual and accustomed ways, like fishing, hunting and gathering.

Through the Natural Resources Branch, the Confederated Tribes manage significant land holdings throughout the Ceded Lands for the restoration and maintenance of native habitat. The John Day Basin is an example.

In the basin the Oxbow restoration project restored a large area of what was a badly damaged river area. There are many other examples: meadow restoration, and cooperative work with private landowners, for instance.

The tribes work with the Bonneville Power Administration on funding these kinds of projects. The BPA provides funding as mitigation for the loss of fish, wildlife and native plant habitat.

Commissioned by the Northwest Power Planning Council, an Independent Scientific Review Panel reviews the tribes' restoration projects, determining their level of success, the use of best available technology, and other criteria.

The Natural Resources Branch, Fish and Wildlife Committee, Tribal Councilman Ron Suppah, and tribal natural resources attorney John Ogan met recently with the Independent Scientific Review Panel. State and federal resource officials were also on hand.

The meeting was an on-theground inspection of two examples of tribal habitat restoration projects in the John Day Basin.

The review panel wanted to learn how the tribes work with the local communities and landowners during restoration projects. How to prioritize future projects, based on past success, was another point of interest.

The group toured one of the tribes' meadow restoration projects. This work involves restoring the meadow while improving the quality and quantity of water flowing into the John Day.

The other project the group looked at was one the tribes are doing cooperatively with a private landowner. The owner is a fourthgeneration cattle rancher.

Goals of this program are to have the owner continue a successful cattle ranch, while making improvements for fish and other wildlife, such as by keeping cattle out of the creeks.

Power & Water hosting tours of the hydro dams

by Jim Manion Manager, Power & Water

The Deschutes River has been connected to our livelihood since time immemorial. It has provided us with food and drinking water, has driven our economy, and is the center of our culture and society.

The Deschutes is also a source of pride for us, and a way we share our way of life with our neighbors and all Oregonians. It is a gift the Creator gave to take care of us and for us to take care of.

Our Work on the Deschutes

Our work is focused on clean energy, healthy rivers and healthy sustainable fish runs.

Clean Energy: For almost 20 years we've been a co-owner of the Pelton Round Butte Hydroelectric Project, which includes the Pelton, Round Butte and Reregulating

Along with Portland General Electric, we own one-third of the Pelton Round Butte generating facilities and 100 percent of the generating facilities at the Reregulating

These dams provide clean, renewable electricity to 150,000 homes, including those in our community, and has created revenue for

Healthy Rivers and Healthy Fish: In addition to providing a clean energy source, our work and partnership on the Deschutes also comes with an important stewardship responsibility: to keep the river healthy and restore fish passage for generations to come.

The dams were built in the 1950s and '60s with the best of intentions, for maintaining the river's natural health—including wild salmon and steelhead runs.

But the dams didn't work entirely as intended. Fish were unable to pass, and water temperatures below the dams were too cold in the spring and early summer and too warm in the late summer and

To address these concerns and help bring back the fish, we worked with PGE, the community, regulators and environmental organizations to come up with long-term

One of those solutions is the Selective Water Withdrawal Tower. completed in 2010. This tower creates currents that guide young salmon and steelhead into collection facilities so they can be transported downstream around the dams. In addition, it mixes water from the surface and bottom of Lake Billy Chinook so water released below the dams more closely matches what the water temperatures would be like if the dams weren't there.

The tower has already shown early success, with adult fish returning to the Deschutes for the first time in 50 years.

Come See What it's all About

While we still have a ways to go, the impact of our long-term success is well worth the effort.

It's also worth seeing the tower and the system for yourself, to understand how it works-what it does and doesn't do-and how we're using good science to monitor this work.

We invite you to tour the facility, see how we produce power, learn how the tower works and hear more about how our science and efforts are improving the health of the river. We've set up two tour dates for you to choose from: Monday, November 27, or Tuesday, November 28.

Biologists and others who work on the project will be there to show you how it works and answer any questions you may have.

To sign up, please contact Warm Springs Power and Water Enterprises at 541-553-1046, by Monday, November 13, to reserve a spot on one of the tours.

We look forward to seeing you and to talking with you about this important project for our commu-

Buy-back program outreach event

The first community outreach event of the Warm Springs land buy-back program is scheduled for Tuesday, November 7.

There will be two sessions, both at the Housing Authority community building, located at the Greeley Heights subdivision.

The first session will be from 3 to 5 p.m., and the second from 6 to 8 p.m. Randy Scott is the program coordinator of the Warm Springs buy-back program. He is transferring from land services to the buy-back program. His office will be at the Media Center.

The buy-back program implements the land consolidation component of the Cobell Settlement, which provided $1.9 billion to purchase fractional interests in trust or restricted land. The purchases will be made only from willing sellers at a fair market value.

On other reservations, the program has been successful. At 48 other locations, the buy-back consolidated more than 730,000 fractional interests, restoring more than 2.1 million equivalent acres of land to tribal governments.

Consolidated interests are immediately restored to tribal trust ownership for uses benefiting the reservation community and tribal members.

Returning fractionated lands to tribes in trust has enormous potential to improve tribal community resources by increasing home site locations, improving transportation routes, spurring economic development, easing approval for infrastructure and community projects, and preserving traditional cultural or ceremonial sites.

"The Tribes look forward to working with the program to create cultural, residential, governmental and economic opportunities by consolidating fractionated lands for the benefit of our tribal community," said Tribal Council Chairman Austin Greene Jr.

The Tribes will be better equipped to manage our lands both on and off reservation," Mr. Greene said. "Land is important to us for the continued sovereignty of the Confederated Tribes of Warm Springs, Wasco and Paiute people."

Fractionated interests in property make development or improvements difficult, because of the number of people with an in-

The fractioning process began decades ago, when allotment were first being granted. Over the years with each succeeding generation, the heirs' to the original allottee inherited fractions of interest

It is common for a person to have a very small percentage interest in a particular allotment, in common with many others.

The land buy-back program would give fair market value to each individual who has an interest in an allotment, plus $75. The $75 is an added incentive for people to participate in the program.

Leadership Corner

A Message from Ken Parshall

Superintendent

Working together across the district

What an honor it is to serve as the new superintendent for our school district. I am enjoying getting to know our students, the talented team of teachers and staff and the families and community partners who support us. Before the school year started, I made a great big ask of our teachers. I asked them to start working together beyond the walls of their own schools. I asked them to reach out to other schools to help create a more unified learning experience for our kids. I am so proud of how positively they have responded. Our team is taking ownership of student success not just in their own classrooms, but in classrooms across the halls, across town and in Warm Springs.

Our community supports education

I've also been struck by the support of local residents, as well as business and community leaders who are stepping up alongside our teachers to support education. From alumni volunteers like the "Chain Gang" to others who donate time, expertise and services to our schools, we feel fortunate to have the community on our side.

We're making progress, but attendance is key

We are making great strides with freshman on track to graduate and student growth at all grade levels. We're proud, but know we still have a lot of work to do. One of the biggest challenges we face is attendance. Unfortunately, 25% of our students are chronically absent. That means that 1 in 4 students misses more than 10% of school days each year.

We need to change that. My big ask of JCSD families is that they do everything they can to make sure kids come to school every day. Our teachers are working hard to improve learning and we can only be successful if students are in the classrooms. Attendance matters and we can't make a difference without help from our families.

Thank you for your continued support. I look forward to meeting more of you and seeing more students cross the graduation stage each year, ready to take on college, work or trade school.

Ken Parshall, JCSD Superintendent

Buff Elementary students do the right things

Every month, five students from Buff Elementary are honored with the Principal's Award for doing the right things...even when no one is watching. They follow the school's three rules: Be safe, Be respectful, Be responsible.

"We talk about integrity in our assemblies and these are the students who work hard to be kind, help others, and do their job in the classroom, cafeteria, hallways, and at recess without being reminded by the adults," said Buff Principal Billie White.

Warm Springs K8 Academy families help make learning better

The Warm Spring K8 Academy team has been partnering with Warm Springs families to grow stronger connections. With funding from the United States Department of Education, the WSK8 team has been working to create new ways for family members to get involved and be part of their children's education.

"While families are always welcome at our school, we are opening our doors every month outside of school hours to welcome families," said Chris Wyland, assistant principal for WSK8. "We know that when families are engaged, our students learn better."

According to WSK8 Principal and district Superintendent Ken Parshall, each monthly family night has a different theme. September family night was a back-to-school barbeque and October was Open House.

"It's a good way to get parents to come in and see and meet the teachers of their children in the school. It also will help parents get connected and know they are part of the WSK8," wrote one parent on an evaluation form at the October open house event.

"I always feel welcome here and my boys love this school. Every day, they always have good stories."

JCSD students experience the joy of learning outside

JCSD students from grades 5 and 6 just got back from outdoor school where they learned about science up close and personal. Thanks to Camp Tamarack in Sisters, Oregon, the kids spent three days and two nights with 600 campers their age from other schools throughout the state. They spent time exploring nature and experiencing hands-on science learning while building social skills and learning to work and live in a community setting.

"Our second year of outdoor school was a tremendous success. The experience is one that both the teachers and students will benefit from for the rest of the year," said Mark Hubler, fifth grade teacher at WSK8. "The Camp Tamarack staff was accommodating and treated our students with respect and care. The students were exposed to scientific topics that were presented in an understandable way. The community building activities we engaged in during camp, have had a positive impact on our classroom teaching."

Shop is making a dream come true

The idea of the Smith's Trail Gift Shop is really about love of family, and hard work.

Shop owner Juanita Miguel-Lopez will host the grand opening of Smith's Trail this Wednesday, October 25, through the early afternoon. There will be cake and finger food, and door prizes.

The shop is at the Warm Springs Plaza, 3240 Walsey Lane, down the sidewalk from the casino.

Juanita works at the store parttime. She has another job driving taxi in Redmond. The taxi shifts are 12-hours, five and sometimes six days a week.

Helping out at the Smith's Trail are her husband Jose, who also works in landscaping, and Juanita's friend Martika Saludo.

There are all kinds of items at the Smith's Trail Gift Shop: jewelry and clothing, kids' toys and games, novelty items, to name just some. Smith's Trail also has candy and drinks, and they serve homemade lunches on the days when Juanita has time to cook.

The inspiration to open the shop came from Juanita's mom, Sherri Smith. "She was my best friend in the world," Juanita says. "The whole idea of the shop is about her."

Juanita and Jose at the Smith's Trail Gift Shop.

The purple color schemes at the Smith's Trail are because Sherri's favorite color was purple. The butterflies and hummingbirds are inspired by her mom.

The store logo is from the artwork, The End of the Trail, her mother's favorite.

The End of the Trail logo, as created by Juanita and Terrebonne artist Beth Hoffman, is on the back wall, on items for sale such as water bottles; and on Smith's Trail bags of huckleberry candy and jars of huckleberry jam.

Juanita lost her mom a few years ago. Juanita went through a time of mourning when she was hardly able to leave the house. Then her mom visited a friend in a dream, telling the friend it was time for Juanita to get back to living her life. With that dream something changed, and Juanita has been working mostly non-stop since then.

"I wouldn't have the store if hadn't been working so hard," she says. And the more she works, the more opportunities keep happening, "and each one is better than the one before," Juanita says.

Grant allows W.S. Extension to continue Ag program

The Warm Springs agriculture program at OSU Extension received a grant that allows the program to continue for another four years.

The $80,000 grant is through the Federally Recognized Tribes Extension Program, as sponsored by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. Indian Ag Country is a partner in the program.

OSU and FRTEP funding have been an important part of Warm Springs Extension programming for about 20 years.

The grant program supports Extension education on federally recognized Indian reservations and tribal jurisdictions.

The program seeks to continue the College Land Grants' mission of inclusion—providing education and researchbased knowledge to those who might not otherwise receive it. The grant is competitive, and all recipients must re-apply every four years.

For the first time in the program history, 36 additional Indian colleges received permission to apply for the grant.

Due to increased competition, several established programs were eliminated, while seven new ones were funded.

To align with current grant priorities, this renewed grant in Warm Springs focuses on community health and food security issues through gardening education, food production and establishment of fruit orchards and berry crops.

Scott Duggan is the project director for Warm Springs Extension, and was the and principal investigator for the grant.

He spent several weeks preparing the grant, and says the support from the Confederated Tribes is greatly appreci-

"I am grateful our application made the cut and received a positive review by USDA," Mr. Duggan said.

"OSU Extension appreciates the support of our tribal partners and looks forward to the next four years of providing agricultural programming on the Warm Springs Reservation."

If you would like more information about this topic, please contact Scott at 541-553-3238. Or email: scott.duggan@oregonstate.edu

Important for members, employees to know about insurance

Many children in Warm Springs qualify for the Children's Health Insurance Program, or CHIP.

Parents or guardians are required to enroll children in this program, or Warm Springs Managed Care may deny any coverage taking place outside clinic.

Funding for Managed Care comes from Indian Health Services, and those funds are turned over to the tribe to manage under guidelines of the Indian health system. These funds are limited for treatment outside IHS.

A program many people are eligible for is the Oregon Health Plan. You can enroll year-round but do remember to renew annually. Even if you work, if you are a student or a single person, or have been de- and hospice services. Part B covers nied for being over income limit, outpatient services. Part D covers you should apply.

Native Americans who are eligible for Indian Health Service, who are also eligible for Oregon Health Plan are required to apply for that coverage, as it comes at no cost to the patient. Assisters are available at the Health and Wellness Center to help clients sign up.

Medicare insurance is administered by the federal government through contracted private insurance companies. It provides health insurance for Americans aged 65 and older who have worked and paid into the system through the payroll

Medicare Part A covers hospital

You can enroll in Medicare Part A and/or Medicare Part B online at socialsecurity.gov

You can also enroll by calling Social Security at 1-800-772-1213. The nearest Social Security office is in Bend at 250 NW Franklin Ave.

ShakeOut drill in Warm Springs

The Great Oregon ShakeOut earthquake drill happened in Warm Springs at 10:19 a.m. on October

ShakeOut drills were successfully conducted at the Family Resource Center, and at the Warm Springs Media Center.

KWSO featured social media messaging that week about the ShakeOut, and also what to do during an earthquake.

On the air a message about the drill was followed by an Emergency Alert System message giving guidance about the drill.

The goal of the ShakeOut is to encourage families, individuals and organizations to be prepared to survive and recover quickly from big earthquakes—wherever you live, work, or travel.

In most situations, you will reduce your chance of injury if you:

Drop where you are, onto your hands and knees. This position protects you from being knocked down, and allows you to stay low and crawl to shelter if nearby.

Cover your head and neck with one arm and hand. If a sturdy table or desk is nearby, crawl underneath it for shelter. If no shelter is nearby, crawl next to an interior wall, away from windows.

Stay on your knees, bend over to protect vital organs. Hold on until shaking stops.

If you are in bed when an earthquake occurs, stay in bed. Roll onto your stomach and cover the back of your head and neck with a pillow and use a hand to hold that in place.

If you are driving during an earthquake, slow down until you can safely pull over and stop. Avoid parking near overpasses, big trees, power lines, bridges and buildings. Stay with your car with your seat belt on until the earthquake is over.

The Peaks of Central Oregon

This is the conclusion of the Indian legend, The Peaks of Central Oregon, as recounted in Indian Legends of the Pacific Northwest, by Ella E. Clark.

Black Butte and her husband were still resting when the bridge fell, and they stayed there at the head of the Metolius River. Green Ridge, the husband, still lies there pouting.

There are plenty of deer on Green Ridge. The plants and seeds Black Butte carried took root. We still go there to dig bitterroot, kouse, Indian potato and looksch. We go there to gather huckleberries, service berries, little blueberries, and pine nuts.

Almost all the plant foods Indians like grow on Black Butte.

Three Sisters

South of Black Butte and Green Ridge is the mountain group called the Three Sisters, Klah Klahnee. The Three Sisters were once the biggest and highest mountain of all.

The Let's Talk Diversity Coalition is one of six regional Health Equity Coalitions in Oregon. The coalition offers a four-part cultural awareness training. The next training, Experiencing P o verty and Its Effect on Health, will be on Thursday, November 2 from 9 a.m.- 3:30 p.m. To learn more about registering, visit: letstalkdiversity.net

It could be seen for many

One time the earth shook for days, and the mountain boiled inside. It boiled over, and hot rocks came out of the top of it.

Flames and smoke rose high in the air. Red-hot stones were thrown out in every direction.

Many villages and many Indians were buried by the rocks. When the mountain became quiet again, most of it was gone.

Only three points were left, that is why it is called Klah Klahnee, for that means "three points."

You can still see the black rocks all around the base of the three mountains.

Warm

Mount Jefferson

South of the Three Sisters is Broken Top. Our grandfathers called it Tluskhna-me Pahto. That means "dirt mountain."

South of Broken Top is Bachelor Butte. Our old people called it Tkh-tkh-ee, which means "grasshopper mountain."

Three-fingered Jack, north of Black Butte, they called Little Khla-tee-wap-thee.

Mount Jefferson they called Big Khla-tee-wap-thee. That means "slide down and get stuck in the mud." That's what happened when people rode up the mountain in the spring-the horses slid down and got stuck in the mud.
