Working toward education agreement

The Education Committee, Tribal Council and the school district continue working toward a new long-term education agreement.

The current agreement expired this summer, but will be the controlling document until the sides reach a new agreement.

There are currently three versions of the tribal-509-J education agreement: one by the Education Committee and Tribal Council, one by the school board, and the current expired agreement.

The challenge will be to come to a mutual agreement, as the tribes’ and school district’s versions are very different.

The tribal version includes specific goals and proposed accomplishments, whereas the school district version is not specific.

There are some good aspects of the tribal version that could be implemented, said school board member Laurie Danzuka. Some aspects, though, would need to be reviewed by the district legal counsel, as the district is held to standards regarding, for instance, the use of class time.

The Education Committee and Tribal Council have placed an emphasis on language and culture as part of the school experience for Native students.

At the school district board meeting this week, the board appointed Laurie Danzuka and Tom Norton to the team that will work toward a new agreement.

The tribal parties are the Education Committee—Jaylyn Suppah, Pah-Tu Pitt, Deanie Smith and alternate Ervanna Little Eagle—and Tribal Councilwomen Carina Miller and Val Switzler.

The BIA is also a part of the education agreement process. The Warm Springs Agency has an acting superintendent, Body Shaw, BIA deputy regional director. A permanent superintendent is expected to be on board in August.

Tribal Council and the Education Committee met last week with school district superintendent Rick Molitor. All parties to the conversation agree that some change is needed to improve the graduation rate among tribal.

Finding agreement on how best to achieve that goal will be a focus of the talks toward a new multi-year agreement.

Program removes thousands of horses

The tribal horse removal program is in its fifth year. During that time, the program has removed thousands of excess and unwanted horses from the reservation.

“If the horse removal program was not implemented in 2011, there would be an estimated 11,628 horses on the reservation today,” said Jason Smith, director of tribal Range and Ag. Instead, there are now 3,886, a difference of 7,742 horses.

Smith and Bobby Brunoe, Branch of Natural Resources general manager, gave an update on the horse removal project last week to Tribal Council.

Without the horse removal program, the number of excess horses on the reservation would be 23,388 by 2020, according to the Range and Ag estimate.

The near-term goal for the program is to remove another 1,000 horses from the reservation, during 2016-17, then level off horse removal to about 350 per year. This would reduce the reservation horse population to about 1,500, a manageable number, Smith said.

For comparison, the Yakama Nation has no removal program, and there are 20,000 horses on the Yakama Reservation, causing serious environmental damage.

The Tribal Council stated their continued support for the removal program, as a way to greatly improve fish, deer, elk, other wildlife and native plant habitat on the reservation.

Another benefit has been the creation of dozens of jobs, said Tribal Councilman Ron Suppah.

An aspect of the reservation horse problem began in 2006, when the federal government stopped funding for horsemeat inspection.

“Since then the horse market has been flooded, and the prices for all horses have dropped dramatically,” Jason said. “The consequences of this policy change have been devastating, both economically and environmentally, to tribal nations throughout the country.”

Another unintended consequence of the federal policy is increased neglect and abandonment of horses, he said.

According to a report by the Government Accountability Office: “Clearly, the cessation of domestic slaughter has had unintended consequences, most importantly perhaps, the decline in horse welfare in the U.S.”

So instead of protecting horses, the federal policy has had the opposite effect.

Bobby Brunoe said an issue to keep an eye on is the idea to ban the exporting of horses from the U.S. for slaughter purposes.

On the Job with YouthBuild

Eight young people from Warm Springs are working with Heart of Oregon YouthBuild.

They are building houses in Madras. Heart of Oregon has developed a great working relationship with the tribes. In time they are hoping to build new homes on the reservation. Meanwhile they are planning a clean-up project in Warm Springs in early September.

The homes they build in Madras are for Habitat for Humanity families. YouthBuild has completed 16 houses so far, with the goal of finishing 25 by the end of the year. Each house takes about nine months to complete.

Cannabis project Commission on board

The Tribal Council last week appointed the Cannabis Commission of the Confederated Tribes of Warm Springs. The commissioners will take office August 1, and will serve three years.

Tribal Council appointed Ronald Roome as the commission chairman; Shana Radford as vice chair; and Starla Green as commission secretary.

Mr. Roome is an attorney from Bend. He has served as a judge pro tem in the Warm Springs Court. He is a former member of the Oregon Liquor Control Commission, the body that regulates the cannabis industry in Oregon.

Shana Radford is the health liaison of the Warm Springs Health and Human Services Branch. She has a Master’s Degree in International Law and International Relations. Ms. Radford is a member of the Umatilla tribes.

Starla Green is in law enforcement with the Warm Springs Police Department. She also has experience in food handling regulation, experience helpful in cannabis regulatory compliance. Ms. Green is a member of the Confederated Tribes.

A selection committee—including Tribal Council members, the secretary-treasurer, and the Public Safety general manager—made the recommendation to appoint these three individuals to the newly-formed commission.

They will be the policy-making and oversight body for the tribes’ cannabis production program.

Unexpected result of WSFPI closure

The closure of the Warm Springs Forest Products Industries mill had consequences beyond just putting people out of work.

One consequence involves the successful enterprise Warm Springs Composite Products.

Composite Products is located adjacent to the mill structures. Unfortunately, the two enterprises shared the same power and water utilities systems.

The mill is now in receivership, and not in operation. If the mill does not re-open, then Composite Products eventually would need to have its own separate power system, said Jake Coochise, Composite chief executive officer.

There have been power outages recently with the overall system, he said, causing some problems for Composite Products.

The solution—establishing a new power system at Composite—will have a financial impact on the enterprise. The water system—the same pump that serves the mill also serves Composite—is another issue that would have to be dealt with.

Jake and Composite Chief Financial Officer Chuck Carrier gave the update last week to Tribal Council. Tribal Councilman Austin Greene said he appreciates the patience at Composite Products, as the Tribal Council works through the WSFPI receivership process.

An enterprise shut-down, such as happened with WSFPI, is new to the tribes, and there are unknown aspects, Chairman Greene said. Meanwhile, he said, an update on the receivership process is coming up later this month. The update could provide some insight in how to deal with the power matter at Composite Products.

Native Aspirations helping youth, community

Young people and their crew leaders are working around the reservation on many community projects:

From clearing and cleaning around the Simnasho Longhouse, to cutting and edging in the Sunnyside neighborhood.

From building a shed at the Family Resource Center, to cleaning up used fire-works from July Fourth, to working on the fields around the Community Center:

These are just some of the many projects of the Native Aspirations Soaring for the Future work program.

Native Aspirations

A statement in the Warm Springs Health and Human Services Branch mission reads:

“... The people have the need, and have expressed the desire, for the community to provide better support to its members through high quality healthcare, elimination of substance abuse, and support of families.”

This was the foundation for the creation of the Warm Springs Native Aspirations Soaring for the Future work program.

The Warm Springs Native Aspirations Soaring for the Future work program builds capacity within Warm Springs’ workforce by providing training opportunities for youth, 14-18 years of age, and college students.

In designing the program, the Health and Human Ser-

Dave McMechan/Spilyay

A Native Aspirations Soaring for the Future work crew built a shed at the Health and Human Services building. The mentor for the project was Nathan Brown. He and Donminic Nelson are the crew leaders for the first-year workers.

vices Branch looked at how to create ways for the youth to bond with their families, schools, peers and community through community service projects, mentoring and work experience.

What concluded from these discussions are the program-created avenues to gain work and life skills to assist in building a foundation for a healthy workforce, in addition to healthy community members.

For instance, each participant throughout their training within this program has an opportunity to be exposed to education in some of the following areas:

Cultural diversity, finance, career planning, injury prevention, conscious discipline, Pharmacology education and prevention; and other health related topics.

Native Aspirations’ work experience partners are:

Culture and Heritage, Family Preservation, Health and Human Services’ Prevention, Fire Management, Early Childhood Education Center, Vital Statistics, Human Resources, the Utilities Department, OIS, and the Senior Program.

Surveying with the Native Food Sovereignty Project

Did you know that the Warm Springs community was once a stable and self-sufficient land where tribal members could provide for themselves by gathering traditional food and game, gardening, farming, and raising animals?

The Tkwatat waq’ishwitai Food Sovereignty Project is a way to assess the food system on the reservation by asking various questions pertaining to agriculture, traditional foods, and the local community’s food habits.

We are working with many local residents to get their perspective on the local food system, and trying to find the source behind all the health issues that are beginning to rise in Warm Springs.

We have been doing surveys and one-on-one interviews with locals.

We have a Facebook page and we will be at the Warm Springs Outdoor Market every Friday staffing a booth.

These surveys and interviews will begin to point us in the right direction to fixing these various health issues.

We will be doing multiple surveys over the course of this summer, as well as a community dinner to allow us to ask more in-depth questions in a shorter amount of time.

We will be uploading all the dates, surveys and results to the Tkwatat waq’ishwitai Food Sovereignty Project Facebook page.

This project is a collaboration between OSU Extension 4-H and the Native Aspirations Program.

For more information, call us at 541-553-3238. Thank you.

Ellise and Jackie.

Big changes

There have been some big changes for Native Aspirations. Some of the main ones are:

Forty hours of health related training.

Every employee in Native Aspirations attended 40 hours of health related training. This was a requirement of the program, because the dollars that funded the program are health related dollars.

The training was held during the first week of work, and the theme of the training was ‘Trauma.’

The training covered topics like historical trauma, grief, domestic violence, and trauma and the brain.

At the training the mentor groups also had time to start planning their community service projects.

Work crew: A majority of first-year workers (the 14-year olds) spend half of their time in the program on a work crew, working on a number of community improvement projects.

They spend three and a half weeks on the work crew, and three and a half weeks at a worksite.

The main focus of the community improvement projects are Elmer Quinn Park, the Stick Game barbecue area behind the Community Wellness Center, and the baseball and softball fields.

The works includes cleaning, weeding, reseeding, table and bench repair, painting, etc.

Other projects include fuel reduction at elder homes in rural areas, street and sidewalk clean up, playground clean up, etc.

Mentoring: Native Aspirations hired seven high school age mentors, and three college worker mentors, completing eight weeks of one-on-one mentoring with every youth in the program.

Each mentor is assigned between nine to 11 other youth in the program. The mentors spend 30 to 60 minutes each week with those youth, as well as doing job shadowing at their job sites for 20 hours each week.

Community service projects: Each mentor group also completes a community service project. Each group member must complete 10 hours of work towards that project.

The location of Native Aspirations Soaring for the Future Work Program is at the Health and Human Services Branch administration, 1144 Warm Springs Street.

The point of contact are Reina Estimo and Amanda Henderson.

Summer meals program for young people

Nutritious meals are provided free of charge to all youth 18 and younger, thanks to the Summer Food Service Meal Program.

Breakfast is served at the Warm Springs Youth Center in the Boys & Girls Club from 8:15-9 a.m.; and lunch from 11:45 to 12:30.

Parents, please remind your child to clean up after themselves after they eat –take any leftovers or containers to the garbage cans.

A thank you for Oxbow work

Hello, everyone! We had a great fish salvage event at the Oxbow, and I want to thank everyone who helped out with the event. It was really a great team effort.

We probably moved over 20,000 fish, mussels, crayfish, frogs out of the river, slough ditches, and Ruby Creek. People worked so hard to get as many of the fish as possible. There was great weather, and there were no any injuries to my knowledge.

We accounted for all data sheets from the event. There was some urgency with the net seining, so most of those fish numbers were not recorded, as too much time would have elapsed to perform the counts as the nets were gathered.

We did rescue 18 adult Chinook and one Jack, and one adult dying.

Emily Davis did a great job working with other agencies and staff to gather and release mussels during the past couple weeks, and her numbers are not yet reflected below. Thanks again to the mussel crews.

We had three different departments from the tribes' Branch of Natural Resources, the Malheur National Forest's aquatic crew with two shockers, all available staff from the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife with four shockers and gear, and the Bureau of Reclamation staff out of both John Day and Boise with their shocker.

The North Fork John Day Watershed Council sent about a dozen Oregon Youth Conservation Corps staff each day, providing essential help. And Dirk from U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service was out there with his shocker.

Even our contractors—BCI/Hanging Rock/Dry Canyon, along with Inter-

Fluve, Inc.—were out there helping by spotting fish and collecting lamprey from the mud.

One adult Chinook was saved by Will Noffke, spotting it on Thursday night in the shallows. Hopefully I am not leaving anyone out.

One more thing... there were a couple nets, an aerator, and a water bottle left behind. They are in the Shop building, and you can swing by and get them when you have a chance. If you are missing something else or left with something new, let us know and we can try to get those items back to the right place and person.

Thanks again! The project is off to a great start because of you!

UAS work starts at KNT

The tribes’ unmanned aerial systems program continues its upward trajectory. The reservation UAS program is already well-known in the state, and is gaining recognition nationally and internationally.

Two of the main focus areas of the tribes’ unmanned aerial systems program are wildland firefighting and resource conservation.

UAS inspection of infrastructoin—utility lines inspection, for instance—is another area of great potential.

A key addition will be the Miss Warm Springs Keeyana Yellowman, and Tribal Council members Lee Tom and Val Switzler help with the ground-breaking. The event also included the demonstration of a soil-collecting UAS.

Jayson Smith photos/Spilyay

Center for Excellence UAS training center at Kah-Nee-Ta. Ventures and the Confederated Tribes this month broke ground on the center, a milestone event for the reservation, and the Oregon UAS industry overall.

Excavation work toward bringing Telecom fiber to the resort, a necessary component of the UAS center, was also progressing this month. The Kah-Nee-Ta event and the Telecom work demonstrate how the UAS program will be a multi-partner program of the tribes.

The reservation is one of three FAA approved test areas in the state. Warm Springs has already conducted test flights at the ranges.

Friday evening golf league at Kah-Nee-Ta

The summer golf league is under way at the Kah-Nee-Ta course. The program will run through mid September. The league will be every Friday evening at 5:30 p.m. for anybody who is interested. For more information, call the clubhouse at 541-553-4971.

Fisheries update

Zone 6 commercial gillnet fisheries have are for July 18-22 and July 25-29.

Spay, neuter event building partnership

The Bend Spay and Neuter Project is partnering with the Warm Springs community to provide these services to pet owners on the reservation.

You can meet the Bend Spay and Neuter Project medical team at a meet and greet event coming up on Tuesday, August 2. This will include a chance to win a $100 gift card to Petco.

The meet and greet will be from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. on August 2 at the Warm Springs Housing Community Building, 2776 Quail Trail-Greeley Heights, Warm Springs.

Please note that surgeries will not be provided on that day, although a pet clinic conducted by the Spay and Neuter Project is coming up soon (see page 4).

At the August 2 gathering, you can learn how to help by volunteering at clinics. Learn more about spaying and neutering your pets.

Give feedback on veterinary services, and enjoy some free snacks and drinks.

The goal of this partnership is simple: A happy, healthy and well-behaved dog starts with getting him or her fixed.

The subject for discussion is community input on future housing concepts.

The tribes are not going into construction at this time or in the near future. For future reference there should be a plan in place.

Questions for discussion are: What kind of housing does the community want? And where to build?

Cannabis: update on greenhouse progress

Warm Springs cannabis project coordinator Pi-Ta Pitt said the candidates are excellent, and will provide the kind of strict oversight the Department of Justice and OLCC are looking for.

A Department of Justice official, Pi-Ta said, reviewed the nominee resumes, and was impressed by their backgrounds and professionalism. In other news from the meeting with Council last week:

The construction at the greenhouse site will start in the near future.

There has been some delay in the start date. Part of the delay, Pi-Ta said, is because the project organizers found a better supplier for the greenhouse.

The cannabis industry, including greenhouse technology, is changing at a rapid pace. For instance, companies that made greenhouses for intensive indoor vegetable and flower growing operations are now entering the cannabis field.

The project organizers, Pi-Ta said, want a greenhouse that will be an excellent and long-term asset to the tribes. So the delay of a few weeks is a benefit in the long run.

The work toward developing the cannabis project is carrying out the mandate of the December 2015 referendum of the tribal membership, when they vote 1,252 in favor to 198 against.

Gearing up for Paddle to Nisqually

Dave McMechan/Spilyay

Tribal Councilwoman Brigette McConville (second from right) and her Salmon King shop donated many cans of salmon and dried salmon, and gift t-shirts to the N'Chi Wana Pum Canoe Family. The salmon is for the Family during their upcoming Paddle to

The N'Chi Wana Pum Canoe Family is getting ready for the 2016 Paddle to Nisqually. The N'Chi Wana Pum family will be one of more than 100 Tribal Canoe families expected to land at the Port of Olympia's NorthPoint area on Saturday, July 30. The N'Chi Wana Pum Canoe Family has participated in the annual tribal canoe family journeys since 2010.

They will leave from the Celilo area, and then make their way over the next several days to the final destination. The Canoe Family is a program of the Museum at Warm Springs.

Heart of Oregon: building success

YouthBuild is an ideal program for Warm Springs, said Heath of Oregon Corps advocate Amorita Anstett.

Home-building projects on the reservation, she said, could help in alleviating the housing needs. Building on the reservation could also bring more Warm Springs youth into the program.

Heart of Oregon has met with Tribal Council in the past, and their presentation was well-received.

YouthBuild, COYCC

Rodger Jack is a young man from Simnasho, and works with Heart of Oregon YouthBuild.

He has perfect attendance at the classes and at work. He does this, amazingly, while commuting two and a half hours each way. Rodger learned of the Heart of Oregon Corps through a principal at the Madras High School.

He's now taking the Heart of Oregon classes on some days, while helping build a house on non-class days.

This week he was working on a house with Leonah Scott, Alyssa Culps and other co-workers. YouthBuild will host an open house for the newly-built home on Friday of this week. You can visit the house on Lincoln Court in Madras.

Heart of Oregon is a non-profit education and job skills training program. Their goal is to help young people and their communities.

Heart of Oregon has the YouthBuild program, teaching construction, electrical, plumbing and related skills. Other opportunities are the Heart of Oregon Thrift Store in Madras, AmeriCorps, the Central Oregon Youth Conservation Corps, and Camp LEAD.

Butch David is leading the Youth Conservation Corps on the reservation. They are working on the reservation on natural resource projects.

Jobs, education solution

Joining Heart of Oregon, students can earn high school credits, a diploma, job training and contacts, college scholarships, and a stipend. It is a 12-month program for youth ages 16 to 24.

The students first attend a two-week orientation at the Sisters classroom center. The school district provides transportation.

After the two-week Mental Toughness session, the students will spend some days at the classroom, and some days working on community projects, such as building houses.

After the 12 months, the Heart of Oregon workers offer their support to the youth have completed the program.

Once a young person has committed to Heart of Oregon, "They are always a part of Hearth of Oregon," Amorita said.

Heart of Oregon is a great solution for some high school students. Through Heart of Oregon a student can earn up to 15 credits in one year, about two and a half years worth of high school credits.

Rodger and Amorita gave a presentation on the program earlier this month to the Warm Springs Health and Human Services Branch.

Support for tribal fishing sites along Columbia River

Tribal fishing families living in distressed conditions along the Columbia River received major Congressional support last week.

The Oregon and Washington members of the U.S. House and Senate introduced legislation that would authorize the Secretary of the Interior to assess and improve the living conditions at federally-owned tribal treaty fishing sites.

The proposed law is called "The Columbia River In-Lieu and Treaty Fishing Access Sites Improvement Act."

If successful, the new law would call upon the BIA to assess the current sanitation and safety conditions at Bureau-owned facilities that were constructed to provide treaty tribes access to traditional fishing grounds.

The bill recommends expenditures as necessary for actions that would improve sanitation and other infrastructure such as water and sewer for the sites.

Unsafe conditions

The construction of federal dams on the Columbia River restricted tribal members' access to tribal treaty fishing grounds, and displaced tribal fishing families that lived along the Columbia River. As a result, tribal families now reside in unsafe and unsanitary conditions at multiple sites along the Columbia River.

"It is long past time that we honored our commitment to tribal members along the Columbia River and this legislation is another step in the right direction," said Sen. Merkley.

"Tribal members shouldn't have to live in unsafe or unsanitary conditions without running water or electricity. This bill will help make much needed improvements at the 31 tribal fishing sites along the Columbia River."

Jeremy Red Star Wolf, chairman of the Columbia River Inter-Tribal Fish Commission, applauded the action:

"We need to start by providing some basic human necessities such as clean water, basic sanitation, and fire safety infrastructure to tribal fishing sites along the Columbia River," he said.

"The bill introduced last week in both chambers of Congress highlights the importance of this near-term need, and lays a path for the BIA to remedy many of these problems now."

Rep. Earl Blumenauer, of Oregon's Third Congressional District, said:

"While we work to provide longer-term relief through the construction of permanent housing, this legislation calls for immediate action to improve conditions at the tribal fishing sites along the Columbia River."

"Urgent upgrades are needed for electrical, sewer, and other basic improvements to address safety, sanitation, and other conditions. The federal government shouldn't let more time pass without helping to make sure that the basic necessities of clean and safe conditions are pursued. The status quo is unacceptable."

Multiple Congressional actions, including appropriations and federal authorizations, are driving a multi-agency coalition to adequately address tribal housing conditions along the Columbia River.

Rep. Blumenauer, Sen. Merkley, Sen. Wyden, Sen. Murray, and Sen. Maria Cantwell's leadership—along with the work of their colleagues, as well as the Army Corps of Engineers, BIA, the Treaty Tribes and CRITFC—will be instrumental to improving the conditions at these sites, and addressing the needs of tribal fishers along the Columbia River.

Horses: relieving overpopulation

This would be a disaster for tribal lands, as well as federal lands that deal with the same horse problem, he said.

The horse removal program is funded through the settlement money the tribes received in a natural resources lawsuit against the federal government. The money was earmarked for horse population control.

Warm Springs is a leader in the National Tribal Horse Coalition, representing five tribes. The NTHC gives a unified voice to the tribes in advocating for the reasonable management of horse populations on reservations.

The National Congress of American Indians, and the Affiliated Tribes of Northwest Indians have both endorsed the efforts of the horse coalition.

The report last week to Tribal Council also included letters of support from Jonathan Treasure, tribal Hydrologist and Climate Change Program coordinator, and Brad Houslet, Fisheries Department manager.

Whereas the Gaming Ordinance sets forth the qualifications of the "TGRA" and the Tribal Council has established compensation for a part-time "TGRA" at the rate of $100 for half day (4 hours) and $200 Full day (8 hours) per meeting and for reasonable and necessary expenses (mileage) incurred at the government rate in connection with the performance of their official "TGRA" roles and duties; now, therefore,

Be it resolved by the Twenty-Seventh Tribal Council of the Confederated Tribes of the Warm Springs Reservation of Oregon, pursuant to Article V, Section 1(s), of the Tribal Constitution and By-Laws of the Confederated Tribes of the Warm Springs Reservation of Oregon, pursuant to Article V, Section 1(o) of the Tribal Constitution and By-Laws of the Confederated Tribes of the Warm Springs Reservation of Oregon, by adoption of Resolution No. 9983 on February 27, 2007; and,

Be it resolved by the Twenty-Seventh Tribal Council of the Confederated Tribes of the Warm Springs Reservation of Oregon, pursuant to Article V. Section 1(o) of The Tribal Constitution and By-Laws of the Confederated Tribes of the Warm Springs Reservation of Oregon, that the following persons are appointed to the Board of Directors of Ventures:

Class III (expiring December 31, 2018): Pah-Tu Pitt. Resolution 12,188.

Carlos Calica. Erland Suppah. Sharon Jones. Resolution no. 12,187.

Housing Authority

Be it resolved by the Twenty-Seventh Tribal Council of the Confederated Tribes of the Warm Springs Reservation of Oregon, pursuant to Article V, Section 1 (s) of the Tribal Constitution and By-Laws of the Confederated Tribes of the Warm Springs Reservation of Or-gon and WSTC 400.022 (2) and (6) of the Warm Springs Tribal Code, that the following are hereby appointed Commissioners of the Warm Springs Local Housing Authority:

Ventures board

Whereas Warm Springs Economic Development Corporation ("Ventures") is a corporation formed by the Tribal Council ("Tribal Council") of the Confederated Tribes of the Warm Springs Reservation of Oregon, pursuant to Article V, Section 1(o) of The Tribal Constitution and By-Laws of the Confederated Tribes of Warm Springs, Oregon, by adoption of Resolution No. 9983 on February 27, 2007; and,

Whereas Article IV, Section 3 of the Corporate Charter of Ventures provides that the selection of members of Board of Directors of Ventures shall be made by a committee, but to get the current board in place and appoint members to the board in a timely manner due to Tribes financial status. tures:

Class III (expiring December 31, 2018): Pah-Tu Pitt. Resolution 12,188.

Emergency appointment

Whereas the Warm Springs Tribal Gaming Ordinance (Warm Springs Tribal Code Chapter 260), amended and approved by the National Indian Gaming Commission on September 26, 2014 ("Amended Gaming Ordinance"), calls for a three person Commission to oversee the operation of the Warm Springs Tribal Gaming Regulatory Authority ("TGRA") and to take action on certain regulatory and licensing matters as provided in the Amended Gaming Ordinance; and,

Whereas on January 12, 2016 Tribal Council by Resolution No. 12,115 appointed Jim Soules to serve a three year term as Chairman of the TGRA Commission, Deece Suppah to serve a three year term as Vice-Chair of the Commission, and Yolanda Yallup to serve a three year term as Secretary of the Commission, however, Yolanda Yallup subsequently declined to accept her appointment, thus leaving the Commission with two active and duly appointed TGRA Commissioners; and,

Whereas Tribal Council has been advised by the Executive Director of the TGRA, Pam Douglas, that Commission Chairman, Jim Soules, was recently involved in a serious motorcycle accident and is unable to continue serving as a member of the Commission and wishes to resign his position, which leaves Commission Vice-Chair, Deece Suppah, as the only active, duly appointed TGRA Commissioner; and,

Whereas under Section 260.009(7) of the Tribal Gaming Ordinance, official action of the Commission requires a quorum of two Commissioners and, with only one active, duly appointed Commissioner in office, the TGRA is unable to take any official action required of the Commission pursuant to the Amended Gaming Ordinance; and,

Whereas Tribal Council believes that an emergency appointment of a temporary Commissioner is necessary in order to provide the TGRA Commission with the minimum quorum requirement of two duly appointed Commissioners, thus allowing the TGRA to carry out its duties and responsibilities as set out in the Amended Gaming Ordinance; and,

Whereas the Tribal Council has been advised that Bruce Stecher, a former TGRA investigator and the holder of a currently valid high security gaming license issued by the TGRA, is willing to serve as a short-term, temporary Commissioner pending Tribal Council's appointment of a new Commissioner to replace Jim Soules through the process set out in Section 260.009(3) of the Amended Gaming Ordinance; now, therefore,

Museum curator Natalie Kirk, Lillian Pitt, Roberta Kirk and JoAnn Smith at the show's opening reception just before Pi-Ume-Sha.

To the people of Warm Springs, and the staff at the Museum at Warm Springs,

I wish to thank you with all my heart for your support of my work and for the honor of your presence at the opening.

It is the highlight of my career, and what a major evening of good feelings, seeing everyone there.

Natalie did an excellent job of installing all the works and was so patient with me! The gift shop staff went way above my expectations with their support.

And Carol, Deb and Angie were always there for me, and the guys were great help as well. Thanks to you all at the Museum!

It was such a treat having my cousins cook and serve the dinner. It was a family affair to me.

My family was there, thanks for putting up with me and all my arts doings! I know I can be a pain sometimes.

Seeing the crowd of all my relatives, fellow artists, made my choice of not pushing myself as hard, a lot easier. I can relax now, knowing I put my best efforts forward for my people.

Thanks again for all your support,

With love and respect,

Lillian, Wakamu, Pitt

Around Indian Country

Sovereignty at issue in debates over genetically modified foods

Food sovereignty in Indian Country is at play as the debate over genetically modified organisms continues on legal and political fronts.

In the legal arena, the Quinault Nation of Washington joined a lawsuit challenging the sale of the first genetically modified organism in the United States. President Fawn Sharp said the Food and Drug Administration failed to consider Indian Country when it determined that a product known as AquAdvantage Salmon is safe to eat.

“Although there are obvious risks to our salmon, the Food and Drug Administration surged forward with its approval. The agency didn’t consider treaty rights,” Sharp said.

“It simply did not consider how these man-created animals, engineered to grow twice as big as natural salmon, will affect the fish provided to us by our Creator,” Sharp said of a product whose genes have been modified to make them grow faster and larger than their counterparts.

On the political front, a bill that requires the Department of Agriculture to establish standards for companies that wish to disclose their genetically engineered ingredients cleared its final hurdle in Congress last week.

The measure—derided in some circles as the Denying Americans the Right to Know Act (DARK Act)—is controversial because it overrides state labeling laws and does not recognize the authority of tribes to develop their own labeling laws.

Although labeling could occur in different forms, critics said the bill would allow companies to keep consumers a step away from information about their products by requiring them scan in codes using their phones or other devices.

Civil rights leader Jesse Jackson believes people of color and the elderly would indeed be kept in the dark at disproportionate rates due to lack of connectivity in their communities.

“There are serious questions of discrimination presented here and unresolved matters of equal protection of the law,” Jackson wrote in a July 14 letter to President Barack Obama, who is expected to sign S.764 despite objections from food groups, consumer advocates and Democrats.

Indian Country has long been worried about the issue. The National Congress of American Indians, the Affiliated Tribes of Northwest Indians and tribes in Alaska are worried that genetically engineered organisms could negatively impact the foods they rely on for cultural, economic and subsistence purposes.

Salmon are of particular concern due to the highly-migratory nature of the species.

Although AquAdvantage will be produced in Canada and raised in Panama, Sharp said the FDA failed to consider whether the fish might escape and travel elsewhere, disrupting tribal efforts to protect what is often referred to as the First Food and one that is protected in numerous treaties.

In light of the questions, the Yurok Tribe in California late last year enacted a ban on genetically engineered organisms. The resolution notes the Yuroks are known as the “Salmon People.”

“It is the inherent sovereign right of the Yurok People to grow plants from natural traditional seeds and to sustainably harvest plants, salmon and other fish, animals and other life-giving foods and medicines, in order to sustain our families and communities as we have successfully done so since time immemorial,” it reads.

Others are already working with the Northern California Tribal Court Coalition to develop similar laws.

Those efforts could be disturbed by S.764 if it becomes law because the bill fails to include a provision that would have recognized tribal authority over genetically engineered organisms.

“Consumers should have the right to know what’s in the food that they are buying and serving their family. Congress shouldn’t actively work to limit that information,” Rep. Jared Huffman (D-California), whose pro-tribal amendment was rejected last summer, said on Thursday.

The lawsuit that the Quinault Nation joined was filed on March 31 in federal court in northern California.

Bill to create commission on Native youth inches closer to passage

A bill that supporters say will improve the lives of Native youth is one step closer to final passage in the 114th Congress.

S.246, the Alyce Spotted Bear and Walter Soboleff Commission on Native Children Act, creates a panel to study ways to improve health, education and other outcomes for American Indian and Alaska Native youth. The bipartisan bill was approved by the House Committee on Natural Resources by unanimous consent last week, clearing it for consideration in the House.

“From living in dilapidated homes with scant educational and economic opportunities, Native young people experience some of the highest rates of suicide and post-traumatic stress in the country, yet they are often forced to overcome these barriers on their own,” said Sen. Heidi Heitkamp (D-North Dakota), who introduced the bill.

“It’s my hope that as the full House considers this bill, it does so with the urgency of these problems in mind. Together, we can promote the better outcomes Native young people deserve.”

“This bill will create a commission to make recommendations on how to ensure that Native children are better taken care of and given the opportunities needed to thrive,” said Sen. Lisa Murkowski (R-Alaska), a co-sponsor.

The Senate passed the measure in June 2015 by unanimous consent. It only needs to be passed by the House before it can be sent to President Barack Obama for his possible signature.

The measure is named in honor of Alyce Spotted Bear, a former chairwoman of the Mandan, Hidatsa, and Arikara Nation in North Dakota who served on the National Advisory Council on Indian Education prior to her passing in 2013. She was a well-regarded educator.
