Council weighs options as mill closes

The Warm Springs Forest Products Industries mill is no longer a viable and solvent enterprise.

The WSFPI mill cannot resume operation, and the enterprise is now going into court-supervised receivership.

This will involve the sale of the WSFPI assets in order to mitigate the financial loss.

The Confederated Tribes are WSFPI's largest creditor, with loans outstanding to the tribal Credit enterprise, and the tribes' business investment fund.

WSFPI also owes the tribes for past due reservation timber sales. The timber is a trust asset, and has funded the Senior Pension and per capita.

WSFPI and the Confederated Tribes last year agreed to a re-payment schedule to bring the stumpage payments up to date. WSFPI missed its most recent scheduled payment, and the BIA had to issue a cease and desist order to prevent further extraction of the timber.

WSFPI also owes the logging companies, and non-tribal entities such as the lumber sale company VanPort International. The Yakama Nation is also owed for logs sold to WSFPI. Some of the mill employees are also apparently owed for earned vacation time.

The sale of some assets—logs that are currently on the ground in the woods—will happen quickly, as these assets are perishable.

Tribal Council took action to pursue receivership for WSFPI on Monday of this week, on advice of legal counsel.

The mill has not been in operation for the past several weeks. The initial closure was intended to be temporary, until the logging roads were usable.

Tribes' truck stop in design phase

The tribes' truck stop project is now in the design phase. The Gaming board is working with BBT Architects on the design.

BBT Architects, based in Bend, designed the Warm Springs Eagle Academy, and the Madras Performing Arts Center, among several other school buildings.

Some other design projects by BBT Architects: the Mt. Bachelor West Village Lodge; the Village at Eagle Crest; the COCC Redmond Technology Education Center, among many other projects. (You can see examples of their work at bbtarchitects.com)

When the design is finished, the Gaming board will hire a contractor, and work will begin soon after. The target opening date for the truck stop is March of 2017, said Jeffrey Carstensen, Indian Head Casino general manager.

The truck stop will be located at the tribes' 10-acre trust property at the Madras industrial park, just off Highway 26.

The truck stop will create between 40 and 60 new jobs, and will generate significant new revenue—a conservative estimate of $2 million per year—for the tribes. The new jobs will have tribal member preference, following the policy at Indian Head, Carstensen said.

The Twenty-Sixth Tribal Council approved the project last year, on recommendation of the Gaming board. The casino board and management then worked at acquiring a bank loan, approved earlier this year.

The tribes' property at the Madras Industrial Park—acquired in 1977, as part of the then-viable mill operation—has not been used in several years. The Gaming proposal calls for development of a truck stop with gasoline service, a restaurant and convenience store, among other amenities.

Veterans Welcome Home

The Eugene Greene Sr. American Legion Post and Auxiliary Unit 48 in late March hosted the First Annual Welcome Home Vietnam Veterans Parade and Expo.

The parade and expo were part of the local recognition of Welcome Home Vietnam Veterans Day. The event saw veterans arrive from around the region.

The American Legion Post 48 and the Auxiliary spent months planning and fundraising for the day of recognition and appreciation.

New Tribal Council; No on Constitution changes

The membership on April 4 elected the Twenty-Seventh Tribal Council of the Confederated Tribes of Warm Springs.

The Tribal Council usually certifies the results shortly after the presentation by the tribal Election Counting board. For the April 4 vote, though, there was some delay, due to a debate as to who would represent the Seekseequa District.

Lee Tom will be one of the Seekseequa representatives. Meanwhile, Tribal Council was planning to meet on Wednesday morning of this week (after print time for this publication) to determine the second Seekseequa representative.

The situation meant that Council had not yet certified the election results as of Tuesday, but the unofficial results—as presented by the Election Counting board—are available. The results show:

For the Agency District the top vote winners are: current Council Chairman Austin Greene with 211 votes; Val Switzler with 177; and Carina Miller with 158.

For the Simnasho District the top vote winners are: Councilman Raymond Tsumpti with 170 votes;

Charles 'Jody' Calica with 129; and Ron Suppah with 121 votes.

For the Seekseequa District the top vote winners were incumbent Councilman Scott Moses, who ran as a write-in candidate with 51; and Lee Tom with 48.

Seekseequa held a district meeting on Monday evening, but the matter remained unresolved on Tuesday. So Tribal Council was planning to reconsider the question on Wednesday.

The situation is unusual. Disputes such as these have traditionally been handled at the district level, rather than at Tribal Council, said Arlita Rhoan, elder and counting board member. Warm Springs Chief Delvis Heath also said this was a question for the district.

Twenty-Seventh Council

The election results mean that Agency and Simnasho each elected two non-incumbent members; and Seekseequa elected one new member.

The new members are Carina Miller and Val Switzler for Agency; Charles 'Jody' Calica and Ron Suppah for Simnasho; and Lee Tom for Seekseequa.

Ron Suppah served on previous Tribal Councils, including as Chairman; and Jody Calica served as secretary-treasurer for several years.

Carina Miller works at the Re-Use It Thrift Store. Val Switzler is the director of the Culture and Heritage Department.

Lee Tom has many years of experience in construction, housing, land-use and agriculture.

Council approves fishing regs

Tribal Council this week approved the 2016 regulations for ceded lands and the usual and accustomed fishing sites.

The ceded lands salmon regulations (Council Resolution 12,151) apply to Sherars Falls (open year round), and the remainder of the Deschutes; the Hood and John Day rivers; and other ceded lands and usual and accustomed places.

The Branch of Natural Resources monitors the compliance with these regulations. Contact Natural Resources for details on the salmon regulations, 541-553-2001. These are Treaty-based subsistence fisheries available to tribal members.

Crayfish

Council also approved regulations, as presented by the Branch of Natural Resources, for the commercial harvesting of crayfish.

These regulations are based on the study, “Life History, Population, Dynamics and Management of Signal Crayfish in Lake Billy Chinook,” and apply only to commercial harvesting.

Annual Spring Yard Sale

The Community Center and Warm Springs Recreation will host the 2016 Spring Yard Sale in May. The sale is set for May 14, all day at the Community Center front lawn. For information call the center at 541-553-3243.

Guide fishing

Another set of regulations applies to the tribally owned fishing guide services. Regulations apply to guided, non-tribal member fishing on rivers that border the reservation.

Lamprey

Another set of regulations apply to the harvesting of lamprey.

Tribal members can harvest lamprey at Willamette Falls based on the Treaty of 1855. No state authorization applies. The Branch of Natural Resources provides the oversight.

A regulation for this fishery include the requirement to carry a tribal enrollment card. Harvest is allowed from “the date the flashboards are placed by PGE, roughly June 3 to July 31.” Harvest is limited to the east side of Willamette Falls by hand or with hand powered tools. Harvest is open Friday, Saturday, Sunday and Monday, sunrise to sunset.

Whitney Jackson (signing in) was among the Warm Springs people who arrived on Monday evening for the Cascade Locks City Council meeting. The matter at the city council was a Hood River County proposal, Measure 14-55, that would block water bottling operations in the county. The company Nestlé has proposed developing a water bottling plant at Cascade Locks, using water from Oxbow Springs, a publicly owned water source. Opponents say the water plant would harm natural resources such as fisheries, while opponents say the project would create jobs and not significantly impact the resources.

OHSU community health visit to Warm Springs

The Center for Healthy Communities at the Oregon Health Sciences University made a site visit to Warm Springs this week. The OHSU Center for Healthy Communities is committed to addressing the health promotion and chronic disease prevention needs of American Indians, Alaska Natives, and other underserved communities. They accomplish this through community-based participatory research, and through training, dissemination and evaluation activities. They visited Warm Springs on Tuesday of this week, with the Center for Community Health project officer from the Atlanta-based Center for Disease Control. The OHSU Center for Healthy Communities has a research project, and training programs that includes the Warm Springs Reservation. The Center for Disease Control (CDC) representative was interested in visiting with key tribal community representatives. The goal is to obtain a community perspective of the projects and training programs at Warm Springs. The Center for Health Communities delegation includes Dr. Bill Lambert, Dr. Stephanie Craig Rushing, and Michelle Singer. Ms. Singer (Navajo) is the project manager of Native STAND—Students Together Against Negative Decisions. Dr. Craig-Rushing is director of the Northwest Tribal Epidemiology Center, and also project director of STAND. Also on hand was Tracey Hardy of the Center for Disease Control. During the visit to Warm Springs, the OHSU delegation were planning to visit Health and Human Services offices, the Community Counseling Center, Health and Wellness Center and Prevention.

The Warm Springs Eagle Academy, and Museum at Warm Springs were also on the list of sites. The Center for Health Communities is located within the OHSU-Portland State University School of Public Health at OHSU in Portland.

The center is supported by a cooperative agreement from the CDC and Prevention Research Centers (PRCs) program. Funded since 2004, the Center for Healthy Communities is one of 26 CDC-funded PRCs nationwide.

Controlled burn on rez to demonstrate UAS program

Eagle Tech Systems is planning a controlled burn on the reservation. This activity will be in conjunction with the tribes' Unmanned Aerial Systems program. An exact date for the controlled burn-UAS project is not yet set, and will be based on the prevailing weather conditions. But a target date will be set probably during the month of May. Eagle Tech Systems is a subsidiary of Warm Springs Ventures, the economic development enterprise of the Confederated Tribes. For the controlled burn, Warm Springs Fire Management will conduct training for "aerial ignition" with the fire crews. This will be followed by an unmanned aerial vehicle flight to demonstrate how unmanned aerial systems can help combat wildfires. Unmanned aerial systems (UAS) can provide the bird's-eye view firefighters need to make critical, real-time decisions, while also safely monitoring the fire overnight, said Aurolyn Stwyer, director of the Eagle Tech Systems program. She and Ventures have been working with federal agencies to explore UAS use in wildland fire-fight. The interested agencies include the Department of the Interior, Bureau of Indian Affairs, U.S. Fish and Wildlife, U.S. Forest Service, Oregon Forest Service, Bureau of Land Management, FEMA, National Park Service, and the Bonneville Power Administration. If you are interested in learning more about the upcoming controlled burn project, you can reach Stwyer at 541-553-3565. ## To our family

It has been a year since we lost our son, brother, uncle, nephew and father. It is time for us to start moving on and thanking all of you for your prayers and generous donations from our families.

It was hard to let him go but to watch the suffering he went through I knew I couldn't be selfish and make him fight any longer.

Our lives have changed forever. He may not of been an important person but to know what he did on his journey through life, people came and shared how he touched their lives—the people who prayed from the north of Washington down to California and throughout the nation, his job was complete.

Sometimes that is all we have to hold on to when you go through your darkest hour.

I love you all for what you did for us in our time of need. I have not forgotten any of you. I think of what we lost—a person who cared for all of you in his own way.

Thank-you all for being there at the hospital and when we brought him home: Jason, Aldwin Moots, James Mims, Ronnie, Fudd, Richard, Willie, Roger, Garrett Sr., Birney, Markus, Beeps, Janice, Pepper, Manny, Nun Nah, Jetts, Aldwin, Luther, Erland, Sally, Ambrosia, Lila, Glen and Dwayne.

Thank you Jefferson for singing his grandma's song at the feast, and Cassie for relaying my message to him.

Thank you Auntie Millie for the outfit, and Jeremy and crew for digging his grave. Thank you Annie and Sharon and the crew. Thank you Erland for dressing him, and Jetts for always helping me his #1 babysitter. If I forgot to mention you, it isn't intentional. We were blessed to have you all with us. Our loss is his peace, no more pain and sadness.

Love,
Smoke, Terrance, Michael, Lucille.

Free 12-point kid inspection

What parent doesn't have questions? Is your child's development on track? Will their smile last a lifetime and can they hear and see okay?

Healthy Beginnings can help you answer these questions, because health and development from birth through age 5 is critical to your child's success.

Next Friday, April 22, Healthy Beginnings will bring its 12-Point Kid Inspection to Madras, available to Warm Springs families.

At these screening clinics, each child receives nearly $3,000 worth of assessment services at no cost to the family. There are no eligibility requirements. All families are welcome to attend.

Healthy Beginnings screens young children in hearing, speech and language, motor skills, cognitive development, vision, health and safety, dental, behavior and nutrition, information regarding early literacy and car seat safety is also provided.

Access to professionals and trained volunteers in all these essential core areas is available at the time of the screening.

At this screening will be the Spot Vision Screener, a device designed to help screeners quickly and easily detect vision concerns on children 6 months and older.

Parents and children birth through 5 meet one-on-one with as many as 12 health and development professionals. Families are encouraged to attend regardless of insurance coverage.

Referrals are made for any child identified in need of additional services with community resources provided to all families. Healthy Beginnings can even provide information and assistance with Oregon's health insurance application process.

According to the Center for Disease Control, nearly eight in every 10 children miss a developmental screening. To receive adequate preventative care, the CDC recommends that all young children have developmental screenings at least three times prior to entering kindergarten.

Healthy Beginnings is a unique program available only in Central Oregon. The program works to assure parents that their children are developing appropriately; or if needed, the program makes referrals for in-depth evaluation and further treatment.

Parenting information and community resources are provided free as well.

Every family attending a Healthy Beginnings screening receives extensive information on the health and development of their child. In addition, early literacy information and kindergarten readiness as well as parent education are also provided.

Appointments are being accepted for the Friday April

In loving memory

On October 7, 1973 a young boy was brought into this world as Jesus Ortega Madrid Jr., later changing his name to the infamous Jesse Daniel Greene.

Jesse and his sister Sonya Madrid and brother Levi Greene II were all raised by their late grandfather Levi Greene and his wife the late Dorla Greene on their Sidwalter Flat ranch.

He was introduced to ranching at a young age and worked alongside his grandfather, helping with everything. He was taught at a young age gun safety and how to hunt and fish. This would prove to be the beginning of his love of hunting and fishing.

He was happy every hunting and fishing season, ready to catch the big one. Ready to find his buddies to go on an adventure. His love of nature would be cemented by his love of saving nature, shown through his hard work through Fire Management throughout the many years.

Unlike fire, though, Jesse was very forgiving. He didn't look for trouble. He avoided it as much as any normal person does. He loved to live guilt free.

When he could learn new and exciting things, he did. He loved art from a young age. He liked to draw, and anywhere he could express art he went with ideas ready for a project. He also made sure his goals in life were met, and one of his goals from a young age was finding his father, which he had a chance to do before his father died back in 2010.

Let's not forget he also lost his mother Georgie Ann Keo Greene at a young age in 1984.

On his journey down to New Mexico he was able to fulfill his main goal of meeting his father Jesus Madrid Sr., along with many uncles, aunts and cousins. He had two other brothers, Roger Madrid and Jesse Madrid, who he wasn't able to meet. He never forgot them though.

They were a part of his thoughts, and we keep the Madrids—in Arizona, New Mexico and beyond—in our thoughts.

Jesse also was set to marry his fiancé Natalie Kirk, in whom he found love, comfort and great family. He finally felt "spoiled" for once in his life. We keep the Kirks in our thoughts—the Jesse we all knew would like that.

Jesse was from a huge family. Along with the Greenes, let's not forget he was a Keo-Queahpama descendant.

As we remember Jesse, let's remember how he had open arms for the world. He never looked at your missteps. He always focused on your good deeds. He never saw a child as a problem but one who needed guidance, and if he could he did. Sometimes it was helping a niece or nephew out on the river, or encouraging a smile.

His children were the beginning of his memory and not the end. He didn't have a mean bone in his body when it came to kids. In his eyes they were the most innocent. He tried being the best he could. We must remember his children. He wouldn't have it any other way.

Jesse wasn't just anyone. He was a father, a brother, uncle, friend and provider. His laughter will be missed but not forgotten. He will live through those he taught and loved.

His selfless acts will be remembered above all. We lost a fine man on March 5, 2016, but he will never be forgotten... Remember...

Fish Conservancy litigation puts regional salmon fisheries at risk

The member tribes of the Columbia River Inter-Tribal Fish Commission expressed disappointment and frustration at the filing over federally funded Columbia Basin hatchery programs.

The tribes believe that the misguided attack disregards constitutionally protected promises made to them by the U.S. to replace fish runs that were damaged by the construction and operation of federal hydroelectric dams.

The lawsuit further delays NOAA's Endangered Species Act consultations and seeks to halt funding for hatchery programs that restore salmon that were lost due to the construction and operation of Columbia River dams.

These programs, which support tribal and non-tribal fishing, are key to the Yakama Nation's program to sustain the ancient tribal fishery on the Klickitat River and are an important tool in restoring natural runs of salmon in the Klickitat, Wenatchee, Umatilla, and Clearwater river basins.

"Lawsuits like these are expensive distractions from the important work of salmon recovery, and they jeopardize the livelihoods of tribal and non-tribal fishing communities," said Jeremy Wolf, chairman of the Columbia River Inter-Tribal Fish Commission.

"The lawsuit is based on the flawed logic that hatcheries caused the decline of wild salmon abundance, and wrongly asserts that simply closing hatcheries will increase wild salmon abundance. In the tribes' experience, that path only leads to fewer fish in the rivers and does virtually nothing to improve the condition of natural runs."

Wolf added, "The tribes have demonstrated with their own successful programs how carefully managed hatcheries can rebuild abundant naturally spawning runs in our rivers and streams. Those truly interested in recovery are better served by putting their efforts into restoring the wild rivers that salmon need."

Tribal hatchery programs have been an important component of salmon recovery efforts throughout the Columbia River system in recent decades.

While not all of those programs will be directly impacted by the litigation, tribal programs on the Klickitat and Yakima rivers in Washington could be impacted.

"Columbia Basin salmon were not decimated because of hatcheries. The Columbia Basin has hatcheries because natural fish were decimated," Wolf said. "The Fish Conservancy litigation won't do anything to help the fish, but it will certainly hurt the most vulnerable fishing community: tribal members who rely on these programs. Litigation like this perpetuates the myth that all hatchery fish are bad and cannot be used in recovery."

"We should not allow a tiny special interest group with a narrow agenda to distract the rest of us from the big picture of refining hatchery practices and working together to rebuild abundance."

FFA student excels at variety of skills

In his first year with the Future Farmers of America, Wesley Beymer earned three proficiency awards, the most of any freshman in FFA at Madras High School.

The awards were in the categories of forage production, forestry, and beef production.

Wessley earned the forage proficiency certification for a crested wheatgrass and mixed seed planting project at his grandmother Pinkey Beymer’s ranch.

The forestry proficiency certification was for operating a log loader during a Natural Resources hazardous fuels reduction project at HeHe.

And the beef production proficiency is for work that Wessley does with his herd of cattle. He started raising cattle with 4-H, and has sold his steer at the county fair.

The money he earns from these sales are going toward his college fund. As a high school freshman, Wessley has not yet decided on plans for after college. “I might have a ranch,” he says, but there is plenty of time to think about it.

Wessley’s parents are Waylon and Tiffany Beymer, owners of Chilkat Logging and Excavation.

Wessley’s younger brother Shain, in the seventh grade, is also raising livestock on the family’s 120-acre Sidwalter ranch. Shain is in the new Discovery FFA program, through the Jefferson County Middle School.

Around spring break this year, Chilkat helped to sponsor an FFA trip to Indian Ag Council at Oregon State. At the high school the FFA program has about 25 to 30 students. And about 10 of the students, including Wessley are from Warm Springs.

Letter to editor

Fisheries legacy

Historically, the legendary “Bridge of the Gods” area was the ancestral homeland of the Wasco Tribes. The traditional fishery was enormous and one of the greatest fishing sites on the Columbia River, where millions of salmon migrated annually, including to the Oxbow Springs tributary.

The area is where many Wascopam families caught their subsistence salmon for the year, but in 1938 the great ancient Wasco fishery was inundated by the backwaters of the Bonneville dam, which was catastrophic.

Entire fishing villages were engulfed by the slack water pools. Only memories remain of the once great fishery and the millions of salmon that migrated and provided the first salmon and the way of life that the Wascopam depended on since time immemorial.

This historic area is too important to ignore any longer. The children and future generations must know where they came from. CTWS needs to pay tribute to our own legacy, which provided a way of life and the brightest salmon for countless generations.

It needs to be commemorated annually. A “Bridge of the Gods” powwow could generate revenue to vendors, etc., at Warm Springs or Cascade Locks.

Awe-Na. Respectfully,
Anthony Littleleaf

Tribes, lawmakers make river housing tour

Warm Springs Tribal Council Chairman Austin Greene and other tribal leaders from the region met in March with federal lawmakers regarding tribal housing at the Columbia River.

They toured four Zone 6 in-lieu and treaty fishing access sites, the visit highlighting the tribal housing crisis at the river.

On hand were U.S. Rep. Earl Blumenauer and Sen. Jeff Merkley.

From the Columbia River Inter-Tribal Fish Commission were CRITFC executive director Paul Lumley, and commission chair Jeremy Wolf.

tribes, joining Council Chairman Greene were Yakama Nation Council Chairman JoDe Goudy; and Umatilla Chairman Gary Burke.

The tour was at the request of the two Congressional leaders. They wanted to see first-hand the housing conditions at the fishing sites.

Many tribal members along the river suffer in sub-standard living conditions, as a consequence of displacement by the construction and operation of the federal Columbia River dams.

The loss of tribal villages and homes has been a contentious issue for decades.

The tribes continue to insist that as long as the dams exist, the federal government has a continuing obligation to mitigate the impacts caused by the dams.

This includes the loss of villages and housing. Congress appears ready to fund some solution.

The tribes and CRITFC meanwhile are working to develop a plan as to how the situation could be remedied.

Election: No on Constitution changes

The membership this week also considered a proposal that would have made 15 changes to the Tribal Constitution and By-Laws.

This was a secretarial election, conducted by the BIA.

The BIA election board was to meet on Tuesday afternoon (after print time for this publication) to certify the results. The BIA team was up until early Tuesday morning counting, as there were 15 separate question sheets for each ballot.

Reportedly, more than 560 tribal members submitted ballots. So the number to be counted—15 times 560—was substantial.

Based on the unofficial results, none of the proposed changes received a majority of votes. The proposals ranged from eliminating the districts in the Council elections, to removing the Chiefs from life-time service on the Council.

There was a salary provision for the Council members, ranging from $60,000 up to $80,000 a year for the Chairman.

Summary of Tribal Council

April 5, 2016

1. Roll call: Chief Delvis Heath, Chief Alfred Smith Jr., vice chair Evaline Patt, Chairman Eugene Greene Jr., Carlos Smith, Kahseuss Jackson, Scott Moses, Reuben Henry, Raymond Tsumpti. Minnie Yahtin, Recorder.
2. Certification of Twenty-Seventh Tribal Council:
  - Following the review of Tribal Council election results, there was a discussion regarding a Tribal Council member qualification according to the Constitution, By-Laws and Ordinance 44.
  - A motion was made by Scott to have the Seekseequa District vote on the Chief's concerns during a district meeting. Second

- by Reuben.
- Decision to hold off on the certification until this meeting is held, then bring it back Council. By majority consensus: table the election certification until Wednesday, April 13.
4. Tribal Attorney update on Warm Springs Forest Products Industries:
  - A motion was made by Raymond approving Mr. Kennedy's proposal. Second by Carlos. Question.
  - Chairman: the motion was made by Raymond and second by Carlos to adopt tribal attorney Al Kennedy's April 13 memo for consideration for four steps, and I would advise the tribal attorneys to bring the resolution with Mr. Kennedy's plan. This is an awfully hard decision to make, as we look after tribal mem- bers. We heard from the community members present here as well as concerns about tribal members' jobs.

- Chief Delvis talked about jobs, and we have been working with Human Resources, our Chief Operations Manager and with advisement from the Secretary-Treasurer how we will work with the plan going forward as far as employees are concerned; so I wanted to say this is just my closing thoughts.
- With that the vote: Evaline/yes, Carlos/yes, Kahseuss/yes, Scott/yes, Reuben/yes, Alfred/yes, Raymond/yes, 8/yes, 0/no, 0/abstain, Chairman not voting. Motion carried.
- Follow up will be on Monday, April 11 at 1:30 pm.
5. With no further discussion the meeting adjourned at 5:15 pm.

Truck stop: location is key for success

The financial feasibility study shows the truck stop would be a great business opportunity for the tribes:

About 1,000 people work at the Madras Industrial Park, and many more travel by on Highway 26.

Daimler Trucks North America, the largest truck manufacturer in North America, announced recently the company is going to develop an $18.7 million truck proving grounds at the Madras industrial park. This is expected to create another 30 jobs at the industrial park.

The tribes' property is just past the entrance (above) to the Madras industrial park. On the 10-acre site now is a building that was once used for lumber storage.

WSFPI: no real option to re-open

However, in order to re-open, WSFPI would require a loan of up to a $1 million.

The proposed re-opening might have been for just 60 days, at which point Tribal Council unanimously agreed that another loan investment would be impossible.

The receivership process will involve the appointment of the receiver who will liquidate the assets.

The petition for receivership will be filed in Tribal Court, probably this week. A judge pro tem will oversee the receivership process.

Looking toward the longer-term, the tribes can continue to harvest reservation timber, which can then be sold to third parties at market value.

There are a number of business models the tribes can follow, in order to bring new revenue to the tribe.

End of an era

The tribal membership voted in 1966 to purchase the mill from Jefferson Plywood. The enterprise was very profitable for decades, paying substantial dividends to the tribes.

In more recent years, the

Warm Springs part of novel The Killing of Ishi

James J. Callahan Jr., of Bend, is a self-taught expert on Ishi. Ishi was the last member of the Yahi, a group of the Yana Indians of California.

Callahan's fascination with the story of Ishi has led him to create his own fiction novel based on the historical facts. And Warm Springs plays a part in the story, The Killing of Ishi.

Callahan is now retired. His career had been in health and plant safety with Pacific Corp. By chance his job also brought him to Warm Springs, where he taught the ONABEN business course.

After he retired, Callahan found he had free time on his hands, and he decided to write a book.

The subject that interested him the most was that of Ishi, and the fate of the Yahi Indians. So Callahan decided this would be the historical source for the novel.

Cover of the novel. The book is available at amazon.com

Callahan gives a brief history: The Yahi were killed by settlers—miners, for instance—in horrible massacres. In time all of the Yahi were killed, with one exception: Ishi.

Ishi was skilled at survival in the wilderness, and lived for years in California outside of modern culture.

As Callahan explains, Ishi avoided all contact with whites because he reasonably assumed they would kill him, as they had done to his family and tribe.

At about the age of 50, in the year 1911, Ishi emerged from the wilderness. He became a kind of celebrity in the U.S., known as the “last wild Indian in America.”

Ishi ended up at the University of Berkeley, where he worked as a custodian, eventually learning approximately 660 words of English. Ishi would give demonstrations of the skills he used to live in the wilderness.

And Ishi was very famous, especially in the San Francisco area where he lived.

Callahan picks up the story in the present day. A premise of The Killing of Ishi is:

What if Ishi had not been the last of the Yahi?

What if, instead, some other Yahi tribal survivors had continued living in the wild. What if these few survivors, over time, made their way to Ochoco Mountains of Central Oregon?

Warm Springs Natural Resources becomes a part of the story, in their wolf-tracking work with the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife. The agency had set up cameras in the Ochocos, to track the wolves.

By chance, one of the cameras picked up something more, something no one ever expected:

“After filming a wolf pack led by a massive black wolf, four Native Americans were caught on camera hunting in the forest. Three of the four were male. The fourth was a young female.”

The Natives are wearing traditional clothing and carrying traditional Native hunting weapons... and so begins The Killing of Ishi.

The book is now available at amazon.com

Congress must address tribal housing crisis on the Columbia

by Rep. Earl Blumenauer and Sen. Jeff Merkley

The Columbia River is the economic heart of the Northwest, a beacon of prosperity and beauty. More than 4 trillion gallons of water are drawn from it and its tributaries annually for agriculture, industry and other uses.

It provides electricity for millions of people and powers the region's economy. Nearly 17 million tons of cargo move along its waters every year—from Lewiston, Idaho, to the Pacific Ocean. The river provides world-class outdoor recreation, bringing millions of visitors annually to its picturesque shores. Native fish and wildlife depend on its waters to sustain diverse habitats.

But the Columbia River of today came at a steep price for the first people living along its shores and fishing salmon from its waters.

The Columbia used to look very different. It was narrower and faster-moving, with massive waterfalls and rapids. It was teeming with salmon. The river formed a cultural artery, a network of places where families and nations congregated, sharing stories and history.

Western development, including the construction of the Columbia River dams beginning in the 1930s, severely and negatively impacted the vibrant cultures of tribes and bands now known as the Warm Springs, Yakama, Umatilla, and Nez Perce.

In just a few decades, as villages and traditional fishing sites were flooded, a huge part of the culture and identity of the tribes was lost forever. It has been devastating for these communities, which were never fully compensated for their losses. Today, many tribal members live at 31 small sites along their beloved Columbia in makeshift housing without proper electricity, sewers or water. They're living in severe poverty — ironically next to the massive, expensive and profitable dams that forever changed the lives of their people.

These 31 sites were constructed by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers to provide the tribes treaty-protected river access to fish, compensating in small part for the access lost through the construction of the dams. The Corps designed the sites, now owned by the Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA), to be used primarily for daily, in-season fishing access and temporary camping.

Out of both a need for housing that was never replaced, and a desire to be closer to the river where they have always lived, many tribal members now use these areas as longer-term, even permanent residences.

We've visited some of these sites. The conditions we've seen first-hand are deeply distressing and unsafe, with entire communities living in makeshift housing, reliant on limited water sources and often without electricity.

No one should live like this.

Due to unacceptable bureaucratic inertia and congressional inaction, tribal members along the Columbia River have been living this way for far too long.

We cannot continue to ignore these shameful conditions. We're dedicated to providing both immediate and long-term relief to address the urgent need for adequate housing and infrastructure. We're working with the tribes, the Corps, the BIA and our colleagues in the Senate and the House to address this problem.

The federal government should step up immediately and devote resources to improve the living conditions at these sites by constructing temporary dwellings and addressing current sanitation, safety and infrastructure needs. Longer-term, permanent housing must be built to replace what was flooded, providing compensation the tribes have too long been denied.

We have met with tribal leaders and have been profoundly affected, humbled and moved to action. Another year cannot pass without action to improve living conditions and provide more housing for the people whose culture and heritage are at one with the majestic Columbia River.
