The Natural Resources Branch hired five youth to work on projects through the summer. Seven more young people, part of the Native Aspirations program, are also working with Natural Resources this summer, supervised by Javin Dimmick and Lana Leonard. Buffy Hurtado is the coordinator of the Native Aspirations, a program of the Health and Human Services Branch.

509-J board hopes to keep MHS JROTC

The Jefferson County School District 509-J board and school officials hope to continue the Madras High School Junior Reserve Officers Training Corps program.

The board and new superintendent Ken Parshall heard testimony from the public on the JROTC program on Monday evening of this week.

The meeting room was at capacity for this topic in particular. Many in attendance were military veterans. All those who spoke were very much in favor of finding a way to continue the high school JROTC program next year.

Board members themselves are in favor of the program as well. School district board member Laurie Danzuka, for instance, has a son in the JROTC program.

Funding proposal for CP Enterprise

General Council to discuss plan

Tribal Council took a step last week toward financing the Cannabis Project, or CP Enterprise. The next important step will be the General Council meeting set for Monday evening, July 24.

In a narrow vote last week, Tribal Council approved the formation of Warm Springs Financial Strategies, a limited liability corporation wholly owned by the tribes.

The sole purpose of Financial Strategies LLC is to provide financing for membership-approved capital improvements and economic development, such as CP Enterprise. As will be discussed at the General Council, funding would be in the amount of $3 million.

The money comes through

Warm Springs Ventures and GeoVisions, as generated by the carbon sequestration project. Carbon sequestration will net the tribes more than $10 million over a term of years, according to Ventures' estimate.

For CP Enterprise the self-funding option eliminates the need to give an outside entity an ownership or revenue share in the project. In time, as the enterprise generates its own revenue, the $3 million would be paid back to the tribes.

The referendum in late 2015 asked whether the Confederated Tribes should "allow, regulate and operate an on-reservation, tribally owned cannabis cultivation and extraction facility..." The vote was 1,252 in favor to 198 against; or about 86 percent in favor.

Carrying out the mandate has proven to be a challenge. At first the tribes focused on necessary work with the state legislature and regulatory commission, the U.S. Attorney's Office and BIA. Ventures and Tribal Council then established the tribal Cannabis Commission, and on-reservation regulatory documents.

For the past year the obstacle has been financing. A partnership option is not in the tribes' best interest: This would send up to half of the revenue off the reservation, said Don Sampson, Ventures chief executive officer.

The language of the referendum would also seem to preclude an outside entity owning a part of CP Enterprise. The way to carry out the referendum, then, is for the tribes to finance the project.

In funding the CP Enterprise, the carbon sequestration revenue would be invested in economic development and new revenue, Mr. Sampson said. The process involves a supplemental budget, subject of the July 24 General Council meeting.

The process also required the formation of Warm Springs Financial Strategies LLC. By resolution (see page 7) Tribal Council approved the Financial Strategies articles of organization, and operating agreement.

At first the Council vote was two in favor, two against, and two abstain. Tribal Council Vice Chairman Jody Calica then broke the tie in favor of the resolution. His vote was to carry out the mandate of the 2015 referendum, and respect the vote of the membership, Mr. Calica said.

Native Sol adds to solar eclipse

Native Aspirations and Health and Human Services have been working on plans for a three-day event for the August 21 solar eclipse.

The Native Sol Solar Eclipse Fest would be August 19-21 at the grassy area behind the Family Resource Center, in front of the Behavioral Health Center.

There will be live music performances, with DJ K9 playing music during intermissions. Food and merchandise vendors are already signing up with Native Aspirations.

There will be family activities throughout the three days. For information you can reach the program at 541-615-0144; or stop by the Family Resource Center. Here is the agenda so far for the Native Sol Solar Eclipse Fest:

Saturday, August 19: Vendors open in the morning. Tribal exhibition dancers, family games and prizes in the afternoon; and live music by Blue Flamez in the late afternoon.

The agenda for Saturday is similar with live music by Kelly Jackson in the late afternoon. Then on Monday morning, August 21, there will be the eclipse followed by a powwow.

Some further details, as provided by Reina Estimo at Native Aspirations: Vendors need to register and pay a $30 vendor fee. Vendors can register in person at the Family Resource Center, or email: Reina.estimo@wstribe.org

No camping will be allowed. No campfires or fireworks. This is a drug- and alcohol-free event.

Range benefits from horse removal

The deer and elk populations on the reservation have improved in recent years, as the range habitat, especially winter range, has improved. This is a direct result of the Natural Resources Range and Ag horse removal program.

Range and Ag began horse removal in 2001, when there were almost 7,000 horses on the reservation. There are now about 3,500, approaching a manageable number, said Jason Smith, Range and Ag director.

Mr. Smith and Natural Resources general manager Bobby Brunoe reported last week to Tribal Council on horse removal. This will be the last year of the official program, though there will be an ongoing effort to keep the horse population under control,

Courtesy Range & Ag

This photo is from a few years ago: The problem of large roaming herds of range horses has diminished through the removal program.

Smith said.

Range and Ag will work with the reservation grazing groups to maintain control of the horse numbers, he said.

Since 2011, Range and Ag has removed an average of more than 1,000 horses per year, for a total of about 7,300 removals. This not only brought the herd numbers down, but also prevented an escalation in the horse population.

Wild herds can increase in population from 10 to 25 percent, depending on conditions. Without the horse removal program, 2017 would have seen a reservation horse population of 15,000, increasing to more than 21,000 by 2020, according to projections. This would have consumed and otherwise destroyed winter-range habitat for deer and elk.

"Since the horse removal program began the Wildlife Department has seen the vegetation improve in areas where there has been substantial horse removal, especially in the Mutton Mountains," said Andrea Karoglanian, tribal wildlife biologist.

"The horse removal program is very beneficial to the deer and elk populations, and is one essential part needed to improve wildlife populations on the reservation."

TERO convention back where it all began

Forty years ago this summer the Council for Tribal Employment Rights held their national TERO convention at Kah-Nee-Ta Resort.

This was the very first of the national TERO conventions. Forty years later the event returns to Ka-Nee-Ta.

The timing is great, as Warm Springs now has a TERO office, based at Ventures.

Wendell Jim is director, and Mary Sando-Emhoolah is the dispatcher, among her other TERO duties. The office opened last year.

The Council for Tribal Employment Rights National TERO Convention—the theme is ‘Back Where It All Began’—will be at Kah-Nee-Ta July 30-August 3.

The first day, Sunday, July 30, is for a golf tournament among the participants, and registration.

The agenda for the convention includes a posting of the colors by Warm Springs Veterans on Monday, July 30; followed by the welcoming to Warm Springs and Kah-Nee-Ta by Tribal Councilman Lee Tom.

The keynote speaker for the day will be Brian Cladoosby, president of the National Congress of the American Indian.

The co-founders of the Council for Tribal Employment Rights, and the current CTER general counsel are among the speakers.

Other agenda items for discussion are specific to the work of the TERO offices across Indian Country:

The Equal Employment Opportunity Commission (EEOC), the Office of Federal Contract Compliance Programs with the Department of Labor; the Federal Highway Administration; Laborers Union, among many topics.

The evening of the first day ends with a welcoming feast and honoring ceremony with Grand Entry, Posting of Colors, Host Drum, Host Tribe Welcome, etc.

You can see the full agenda at the website: councilfortribalemploymentrights.org

If you want more information on the Warm Springs TERO opportunities, contact the office at 541-553-3565. They are part of Ventures at the industrial park.

Drones symposium at KNT

Warm Springs Ventures, Kah-Nee-Nee and partners are planning a symposium of the Association of Unmanned Vehicle Systems International.

The event is planned for September.

The symposium is called Drones, Droids and Unmanned Systems. Co-hosts are the Ventures UAS program, Kah-Nee-Ta and the Confederated Tribes; and the AUVSI Cascade Chapter.

Details are still coming together for the event.

This will be the second time the resort has hosted the AUVSI Cascade chapter, the first time being in the fall of 2014, when over 150 participants enjoyed the hospitality and great venue features of Kah-Nee-Ta.

New event planned for fair

The Jefferson County Fair and Rodeo is coming up Wednesday through Saturday, July 26-29 at the Jefferson County Fair Complex.

There will be rodeos on the Friday and Saturday evenings.

A team from Warm Springs is planning Two-Plus-One Wild Horse Races on those evenings.

These races would be for youth, two boys plus one girl. Edison Yazzie was meeting this week with others to finalize the plans. This would be the first year of the event, and it could turn into a new tradition at the fair.

At Recreation this afternoon

Warm Springs Recreation will host the ‘Christmas in July’ Fun Run this Wednesday afternoon, July 19 from noon till 1.

The fun-run will be around the community center pathway. Ice cream afterward. Everyone welcome.

Supplemental budget

Dear Tribal Member,

On June 12, 2017 the Tribal Council authorized by motion the posting of a proposed supplemental budget in the amount of $3 million. The purpose of the proposed supplemental budget is to transfer $3 million to the Warm Springs Financial Strategies LLC for membership approved capital improvements and economic development.

Warm Springs Financial Strategies LLC was formed pursuant to the Constitution and Bylaws of the Confederated Tribes of Warm Springs, authorized by Tribal Council Resolution 12,351 on July 10, 2017.

The source of funds used for this proposed supplemental budget is a dividend from Warm Springs Geo Visions resulting from a portion of the proceeds of the carbon sequestration project.

The proposed supplemental budget has been posted at the Tribal Administration Building, Warm Springs Market, Post Office, Indian Health Services, Agency Longhouse, Three Warriors Market, Simnasho Longhouse and Seekseequa Fire Hall. Also available online:

To our Warm Springs residents,

Fire season is upon us. A lot of you have cleaned around your homes by removing tall grass and brush to avoid fires leading to your home

However, being prepared inside is at least as important: Please make sure you have replaced old smoke detectors.

Or if you do not have a detector, now is the time to install one.

Some homes have the detectors that are electric: Note that when the power goes off, more than likely the detector will like function.

The detectors that we volunteers install are good for

WSCAT reviews 2017 tax season in Warm Springs

By Leah Guliasi, W.S. Community Action Team

Since 2009 the Warm Springs Community Action Team has provided free tax services to community members. This service is part of the AARP Tax Aide program.

Between February and April of this year, five volunteers completed over 426 tax returns for community members.

This program has been very successful over the years. In 2016, for 2015 tax returns, nearly 82 percent of tax returns completed received federal refunds. Of those receiving refunds, the average person received $1,562.

Even if you are not required to file, there are many benefits to doing so. One of the biggest benefits is a tax credit, such as the Earned Income Tax Credit (EITC), which provides money to low-income working individuals.

EITC and many other credits are available, but you won’t receive the credits unless you file your taxes.

Here are some logistics of our tax program:

•We are not a tax agency. In most cases we will file your return online, but the rest is up to you.

It is your responsibility to provide us with all your forms and submit any other paperwork required by the IRS, such as setting up a payment plan or paying if you owe money.

•We can only amend returns that were filed with us: You have to go back to the person who filed your taxes if you need to make changes.

•Due to the high demand, we are by appointment only. We usually begin scheduling appointments by the end of January.

This year’s tax season was just as successful as previous years, and we will share those statistics when we receive them.

CP Enterprise: funding plan

Voting in favor, Councilwoman Carina Miller said, “The people have voted on this, and they want to get it moving.” Warm Springs Chief Delvis Heath also voted in favor.

Other Council discussion was in regard to details of Financial Strategies LLC. The limited liability aspect of the entity protects the tribes from any potential liability, as the LLC itself would be the only recourse, said tribal attorney Ellen Grover.

Financial Strategies would be managed by a management committee comprised of the Secretary-Treasurer, the director of tribal Finance, and an individual tribal member appointed by Council.

The management committee will be in charge of direct approval of any loans that comply with the purpose of the LLC. The committee will provide an annual budget report to the tribes.

Horses: limited sales market

Fish habitat and native plants also benefit from reduced horse numbers, as the animals forage through riparian areas, said Brad Houslet, tribal fisheries biologist.

Other benefits of the program have been employment and income opportunities for mermbres, job skills building, and recognition by youth of the tribal horse culture, Jayson Smith said.

The horse removal program is funded through the settlement money the tribes received in a natural resources lawsuit against the federal government. The money was ear-marked for horse population control.

In 2006 the federal government stopped funding for horsemeat inspection. The effect was the closure of the few processing facilities in the U.S., leaving Canada and Mexico as the available markets.

At the Council update last week, Wasco Chief J.R. Smith Sr. asked what would happen if these markets were blocked.

The result could be devastation to the range habitat, as there would be no option for controlling the horse population, Bobby Brunoe said. “We do think about that, and it would be devastating,” he said.

Meanwhile, there may be a chance at the federal level to reopen a domestic market, Mr. Smith. He is a member of the National Tribal Horse Coalition, and follows developments in the industry.

Taking aim again at sea lions

Congress is once again considering giving Oregon and Washington fish and wildlife officials and regional tribes broader authority to kill sea lions below the Bonneville Dam, an effort supporters say is necessary to protect 13 endangered species of salmon and steelhead.

But unlike previous attempts to rein in the marine mammals, which are protected under federal law, the legislation goes beyond killing the dozens that converge each spring on the fish logjam at the Columbia River dam 145 miles from the Pacific Ocean.

The bipartisan team behind the bill want to go much further. They also want to make it easier to kill California sea lions found on the Willamette River and its tributaries, and anywhere on the Columbia River east of Interstate 205.

If the legislation is approved, as many as 920 sea lions could be killed annually, compared with 92 under the current agreement.

The bill's supporters say they don't envision ever reaching that toll—that would be expensive and a public relations nightmare. The measure, they say, would allow them to move quickly to remove nuisance animals before they engage in a months-long feast on prized spring Chinook salmon, an industry that accounts for hundreds of millions of dollars in business in the Pacific Northwest.

In 2016, the states removed and euthanized 59 sea lions, the most in any single year since the program began in 2008 (two additional sea lions were accidentally killed).

New health care model specific to tribal member needs

The Oregon Health Authority is partnering with CareOregon to build a care coordination model for tribal members in the Oregon Health Plan fee-for-service program.

This came about in coordination with Oregon’s nine tribes and the Native American Rehabilitation Association (NARA).

In 2016 the tribes and NARA began working with the state Health Authority on the coordination effort with CareOregon.

The goal was to develop a culturally appropriate, statewide program of care coordination services for tribal members on OHP.

This care coordination is not only specific to tribal member needs, but engages directly with each tribes’ own health care clinics and systems of care.

This care coordination is not only specific to tribal member needs, but engages directly with each tribes’ own health care clinics...

They developed a new care coordination contract. And as a result: Starting on August 1, tribal members on OHP fee-for-service will begin working with CareOregon for their care coordination needs.

“We’ve worked together to ensure all Native Americans in Oregon receive the highest quality health care,” said Caroline Cruz, Warm Springs Health and Human Services branch manager. “This helps in that effort.”

CareOregon chief executive officer Eric Hunter commented: “We feel very honored to have been chosen by the tribes to provide care coordination services. We take seriously the responsibility of developing with members of the tribes a culturally responsive program that meets the unique needs of the Native American population in Oregon.”

Care coordination is hands-on engagement helping OHP members with chronic or acute illnesses access health care services and navigate health care options.

“Through care coordination, we bring each member, their providers, specialists and community resources together into a unified whole,” said Amit Shah, CareOregon chief medical officer.

“This way we can overcome the barriers to health.”

Culturally responsive care is a key element in Oregon’s health system, helping provide OHP members with better care, better health and lower costs.

Though CareOregon will soon provide care coordination services for tribal members on the OHP fee-for-service program, no one will have to change clinics or providers.

CareOregon will work with tribal health leaders to help tribal members:

- Get timely appointments with a doctor, specialist, or other providers;
- Find a specialty provider;
- Get the equipment, supplies or services they need through the Oregon Health Plan;
- Coordinate care among patients, doctors, other providers, community support agencies, tribal health center, and social service organizations
- Connect users to other resources in their community.

For more information about care coordination or the services that CareOregon provides, see CareOregon’s website: careoregon.org

The moment you left me, my heart was split in two, one side filled with memories, the other died with you.

I often lay awake at night when the world is fast asleep, then take a walk down memory lane with tears upon my cheek.

Remembering you is easy, I do it every day, but missing you is a heartache that never goes away.

I hold you tightly within my heart and there you will remain. You see, Norman Nathan, life has gone on without you, but will never be the same.

A Last Roundup

Ranching is a rare way of life on the reservation. And with every passing year the working cattle ranch is harder to find. Today there are maybe one-third as many cattle on the reservation as in decades past.

Young people move on to different things, leaving for school or a career. The older generation keeps the ranch going as long as possible, until time finally takes its toll.

This happened at the Squiemphen-Yazzie Ranch in June, the week before Pi-Ume-Sha.

At their Sidwalter ranch the family rounded up more than 200 cows and calves, and sold them all at the Central Oregon Auction Yard. It was a rare event, the sale of an entire herd of the best bred cattle.

The Squiemphen Yazzie Ranch had been in operation for decades. But with his daughters now living and working in Portland, Edison Yazzie decided the time had come to sell.

His daughters are Teri Jo ‘TJ’ and Amanda Squiemphen-Yazzie. The girls are work Pegasus Social Services in Portland.

In the fall Amanda will be going to Portland State University for a bachelor’s in Social Work. Teri is pursuing a career in the field of medical assistance.

The girls grew up on the ranch, going to school in Warm Springs and then Madras High School. After graduating they both moved to Portland.

The sisters live in the same apartment building and work at the same company.

Amanda and Teri Jo at the last roundup. In the background are the trucks that are hauling more than 200 cows and calves to the auction yard.

But they’re busy and keep different schedules, seeing each other on occasion.

TJ and Amanda were at Sidwalter in June, helping Edison collect the cows and calves for auction.

Seeing the herd leave for the last time was hard, as the ranch had given them memories and lessons of a lifetime.

“It gave us a head start in life,” TJ says. “I learned patience, hard work, and how to work as a team.” She agrees with the way Amanda explains the experience:

The cattle were the perfect tool to teach my sister and me perseverance, leadership, love, hard work, patience and anger, among many things.

This was the greatest, most cherished time of my life. I know as we retire the ol’ 10bar brand it will not be the end of the story.

I am so incredibly thankful for everything this taught me, and I am happy to say I will continue to use these tools in my future.

I am thankful for my father, who cared for our ranch all these years, and who made our ranch the best it could be.

Warm Springs climate, health story project

In partnership with several tribal members, the Oregon Climate and Health Program is proud to announce the release of eight digital stories about climate change and community health in Warm Springs.

The experiences shared in each video hold valuable insights that can help inspire local action and inform decision-makers at the state and national level.

This effort is part of the Climate and Health Program’s Resilience Plan, released earlier this year.

The plan identifies storytelling as an important method for increasing awareness and building community partnerships to better prepare, plan, and recover from climate risks.

Creating videos that highlight the concerns of community members is one way to work together and lift the voices of people on the frontlines of climate change.

The videos were created in a workshop co-facilitated by a non-profit called StoryCenter.

Each participant developed his or her own story, picked out their own images, and put it all together using a digital editing software program.

The Climate and Health Program is extremely honored to have had the opportunity to work with each participant and hopes that all community members interested in learning more can come watch the screening. Time, date and location to be announced.

JROTC: Board to revisit issue on July 31

The controversy about JROTC at the high school began earlier this month, when the school board indicated an intention to discontinue the program.

This was on a recommendation from the superintendent. What had happened was that long-time JROTC teacher Lt. Col. Larry Renfro retired from the position.

The district recruited for a new program leader with the required qualifications. The applicant who looked promising then backed out in May.

The board and staff were not able to find a replacement, leading to the recommendation to discontinue. One of the criticisms at the board meeting this week was an apparent lack of communication, even with the high school principals and remaining JROTC staff, regarding the decision.

At the school board meeting this week was a representative from the Central Oregon Chapter of the Military Officers Association of America. There are networking opportunities that could lead to finding a candidate to take the position at the Madras High School JROTC program, she said.

This and other networking sources are the approach the board and staff will take toward trying to find a resolution, said Laurie Danzuka.

Testimony at the school board meeting this week came from former and current members of the Madras High School JROTC program. Veterans and parents also gave testimony, often emotional statements as to the many benefits of the program.

The school board will take up the matter again at their meeting scheduled for July 31. The board may meet in the main room at the Madras Performing Arts Center, as the meeting room this week was not big enough for the turnout.
