Miss Warm Springs 2018 Thyreicia Simtustus

Thyreicia Simtustus likes to keep busy. She goes to college in Bend two days a week—studying to become a professional helicopter pilot—and works in Prineville on the other weekdays. Now she will have even more things to do, as Thyreicia is Miss Warm Springs 2018.

After the Pageant, her first appearance as Miss Warm Springs was at the Lincoln's Birthday Powwow, where she was well received by all.

The tribal royalty part of her new position—skill at horseback riding, for instance—will be familiar to Reicia: She was the 2017 Miss Lincoln's Birthday Powwow Queen, and the 2014 Miss Pi-Ume-Sha Princess.

Thyreicia, 19, is a 2017 graduate of Madras High School. A memorable event during her high school career was with the White Buffalos Swim and Water Polo team. During her senior year the water polo team was dominant, winning the Oregon State Championship.

Thyreicia now goes to Central Oregon Community College, where she studies in the COCC Aviation program, focusing on commercial helicopter piloting. Potential career courses with this degree, she says, could be as a Medivac, with a fire agency, or in forestry, for instance.

The course study so far has involved knowing essential regulations and technology, plus simulation flights. Her first time piloting an actual helicopter will be next semester.

She has been interested for some time in being Miss Warm Springs. "I want to be more involved with my community," she says, "and to help preserve our culture and languages."

Thyreicia is the Forty-Second Miss Warm Springs. As an ambassador of the Confederated Tribes, she will represent Warm Springs at the local powwows and community events, as well as at powwows and county fairs throughout the region.

The month of April will see the Gathering of Nations in Albuquerque, New Mexico, where Thyreicia and other royalty from many tribes will compete in the Miss Indian World competition.

Miss Warm Springs 2018 Thyreicia Simtustus is given the crown by Miss Warm Springs 2017 Katrina Blackwolf.

Positive report from CPS

Tribal Council heard a promising report this week about Warm Springs Children's Protective Services. CPS director Cecelia Collins and Health and Human Services general manager Caroline Cruz met with Council for an update on the building renovation, and the state of CPS overall.

CPS had been without a permanent director for a period time, until Ms. Collins last year agreed to stay in the position. She had been serving as acting director.

The conditions for staff have greatly improved over the past several months, she said. Cecelia came to CPS from the courthouse, where she was the juvenile prosecutor.

When she started at CPS, there were three caseworkers handling more than 200 individual files. One of the workers had 90 cases. Each case requires weekly attention, including appearances at court, so the situation was untenable.

This is being addressed, with improvement already evident. Another promising point: The foster care program now has a coordinator.

And the CPS building itself will re-open soon, wholly renovated, with the nearby Vern Jackson Home, also renovated, adding to the resources available to staff.

Co-managers discuss options for hatchery

Tribal Council and the Branch of Natural Resources met last week for a two-day summit with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, discussing the condition and future of the Warm Springs National Fish Hatchery.

There are fundamental questions facing the hatchery, as well as significant recent improvements to the facility.

The first day of the meeting was for in-depth review and discussion. The second day included a tour of the hatchery.

The facility is on the Warm Springs River a few miles from Kah-Nee-Ta. Because of the location, water temperature at the hatchery is an ongoing issue.

The temperature issue has come to the forefront in recent years: In 2014 the summer heat required emergency removal of fish to a cooler facility, as the water temperature in the Warm Springs River at the hatchery site reached the mid 70s.

The following year the fish were moved in order to allow workers to upgrade and expand the cooling system at the hatchery.

Then last year the work involved a major electrical system expansion. The hatchery is one of the largest Wasco Electric energy customers.

Another recent improvement at the facility is the development of lamprey passage.

About the water: The temperature can be effected by nearby hot springs, plus a buildup of silt behind the fish-intake weir. With years of debris and silt buildup, the pool behind the weir is shallow, creating warmer temperatures.

The tribes and U.S. Fish and Wildlife are partners in the management decisions of the hatchery.

The management plan, though, needs to be updated. The five-year plan of 2011 has expired, and the sides will be working toward a new agreement, addressing issues that have been developing, and continue to evolve.

The fish hatchery opened in 1978, thirteen years after the completion of the Round Butte dam.

Some time after completion of the dam—among other factors—the tribes petitioned the federal government to address the loss of salmon and steelhead in the region. This led to the eventual funding, planning and construction of the Warm Springs National Fish Hatchery.

Longhouse closed for a time

The Agency Longhouse has been closed for the past few weeks, and will remain closed possibly through March. Chief Operations Officer Alyssa Macy and Warm Springs Housing Authority director Danielle Wood earlier this week updated Tribal Council on the situation.

Executive Management closed the longhouse after at least two areas inside the building tested positive for the presence of methamphetamine residue.

Additional areas were tested, including kitchen area, and results were positive. The only area that did not turn up positive was the main entranceway of the building. The person or people responsible were likely using the drug in areas of the longhouse where they had some privacy, Ms. Macy said.

The smokehouse behind the longhouse may also be contaminated. Due to unfinished wood used in the structure, if positive, it would likely have to be demolished, she said.

The level of contamination indicates that the person or people had been using the drug in the longhouse for some time, said Ms. Wood.

At Housing, she contends with the hazardous and costly problem of methamphetamine contamination of the Housing units. The residue of the drug is toxic to others who enter the building, affecting the nervous system.

Question of value with Buy-Back

The value of certain allotments on the reservation—properties that could be sold back to the tribes through the Land Buy-Back program—was a point of discussion at Tribal Council last week.

Council met with appraisers from the Office of Appraisal Services, an office of the Department of the Interior. Appraisers from the office are working with tribes and the BIA to implement the Buy-Back component of the Cobell settlement.

One-hundred and five reservations, including Warm Springs, are identified in the 10-year Cobell Land Buy-Back process.

The Office of Appraisal Services last year used a process called ‘mass appraisal’ to come up with fair market value calculations for more than 340 tracts on the reservation.

Acquisition offers to the allottees will be the fair market value, as determined by the Office of Appraisal Services.

Council members and

staff last week expressed some concern about the fair market value figures that the office had calculated for at least some of the tracts.

The mass appraisal process is defined as: “The process of valuing a universe of properties as of a given date using standard methodology, employing common data, and allowing for statistical testing.” In this process, details of hundreds or even thousands of land transactions from the surrounding region are collected.

The information is then applied to a certain tract, with adjustments if necessary, in order to determine its fair market value. Valuation factors can include acreage, road access, timber, urban rating, etc.

Another appraisal process is ‘site specific,’ defined as: “An appraisal process that analyzes one tract at a time, based on the physical and economic characteristics of the subject property compared to similar properties.”

In some cases the mass appraisal figure for a tract can be significantly different—much lower, for instance—from the figure derived from a site specific appraisal. The goal then is to reconcile the figures.

The plan has been to mail offers to more than 300 allottees as early as this week. The Office of the Special Trustee, and the Warm Springs Land Buy-Back representative Randy Scott have suggested delaying the mailing until some fair market valuation questions have been clarified.

The appraisals that were done last September, though, are valid for nine months; so there is a time element. Council will address the issue again soon.

Veterans Memorial Park Committee working on funding

Individuals, businesses and other organizations can take a true part in the Warm Springs Veterans Memorial Park.

Personalized, engraved bricks—honoring Warm Springs veterans—will be incorporated into the memorial park pathway and central memorial feature. These would be perfect for family members of the veterans.

The memorial park committee has different size and style bricks to choose from: The 4x8 bricks are $150, and the 8x8 bricks are $250. You can have just words on the brick—the veteran’s name, branch and years of service for instance—or add a military design.

The committee members to speak with about the bricks are Johnathan Courtney, Tamera Calhoun, Charles Tailfeathers or Dan Martinez. You can reach Mr. Courtney at: Coujw196@gmail.com

The memorial park committee met with Tribal Council this week for an update. The group has the preliminary drawings for the memorial and park, and are now working toward design engineering blueprints.

The committee, working with the community development director, last year secured a large grant from the Spirit Mountain Community Fund. The tribal capital fund and the bricks will add to the needed funding.

Veteran and family volunteers are already planning to help with the work, with Warm Springs Construction ready to do the site preparation work.

The design of the memorial, by architects of the Museum at Warm Springs, includes an elevated mound, and walkways leading up to the central feature. Seven flags of the military branches, large basalt pillars with veterans names, a central fountain and flame feature, a bronze Warrior, and the Soldier’s Cross add to the memorial.

Note from Warm Springs Sanitation

Warm Springs Sanitation has reported an increase of tires and hazardous materials such as motor oil and hydraulic fluid at the tribal landfill transfer stations.

They remind folks that tires cannot be left at the transfer stations, and must be taken to the commercial entrance to be disposed of.

There is a cost to dispose of tires. The tribes pay an outside disposal company for this, and the prices have increased.

If anyone sees non-Warm Springs residents using the landfill and transfer stations, please report it to Russell Graham at 541-553-4943, or call the Warm Springs Police Department.

First Tribal Health Scholars learning at clinic

The Tribal Health Scholars at the clinic—Lynden Harry, Kaliyah Iverson and Enrique Ramirez—are seeing first-hand the work of health professionals.

Over the next several weeks they will spend Monday mornings at the Warm Springs clinic, learning about a variety of health careers. During the final weeks of nine-week program, the students will choose an area where they want to focus.

Lynden, Kaliyah and Enrique are seniors at Madras High School. Each of them already has an interest in a specific health-care field: Lynden wants to work in the Physical Therapy field, Kaliyah in Dentistry, and Enrique in the Nursing field.

Enrique plans on going to Portland State University in the fall. Lynden and Kaliyah have not yet committed to a college, though schools are interested in offering them scholarships. Kaliyah just last week received a Dean’s Scholarship offer; and various schools have shown interest in offering Lynden a basketball scholarship.

This is the inaugural year of the Tribal Health Scholars program, sponsored by the Northwest Native American Center of Excellence, Madras High School, On Track, and the Indian Health Service.

The Center of Excellence, at the Oregon Health Sciences University, works to address health care needs by increasing the Native American voice in the health professions.

Dove Spector, program coordinator, is a mentor for the Tribal Health Scholars, providing them with resources and knowledge about college, and how best to pursue higher education to achieve their dreams.

Dr. Erik Brodt, director of the Northwest Native American Center of Excellence, summarized the program goal:

“American Indian people face significant health disparities, further jeopardized by a shortage of health care professionals who come from these communities. We aim to change that.”

COCC Native program promoting students

Michelle Cary joined Central Oregon Community College last fall. She is the Native American Program coordinator at COCC.

Michelle, a Seneca-Cayuga member, worked for more than 20 years as a second-grade teacher, mostly at the elementary school in Prineville.

She went to college at the University of Oregon. Interestingly, at the U of O she had a partial football scholarship: She was the stats girl for Ducks football.

At COCC with the Native American program, she works to help ensure a successful college experience for Native American students. This work begins with high school students who are thinking about going to COCC, and lasts through the entire college experience.

With the First Nations Club, the program hosts many events through the year. These include the annual events like the Salmon Bake in June, plus special cultural enrichment speakers and activities. Most recently were the screenings of Our Spirits Don’t Speak English: Indian Board School, and the upcoming Boys with Braids event (see page 6). Speakers at Boys with Braids will include Wilson Wewa and Allison Schmiedel.

The COCC Native American program works on the Good Road, and STRIVE. The Good Road is a college preparation program at Madras High School, and the alternative schools in Warm Springs and Madras.

STRIVE is the Summer Training to Revive Indigenous Vision and Empowerment program. STRIVE allows students to spend several days at COCC during the summer, getting ready for the start of the school year.

The goal of STRIVE is to provide cultural and academic support and give young Native American students leadership skills. A grant from the Meyer Memorial Trust helps to fund these programs.

Michelle is at the COCC campus three days per week, and spends Mondays at the COCC Madras campus. If you would like to speak with her about COCC, you can reach her at 541-318-3782. Or email: mcary@cocc.edu

Important notice to tribal hunters

The 2017-2018 hunting season has come to an end for off-reservation and on-reservation subsistence hunting. The Wildlife Department is now gathering hunter harvest data and all tribal members who have issued tags for the 2017 tribal member subsistence hunts need to report as soon as possible.

Tribal Council resolutions 12,378 and 12,365 states:

Required reporting species hunting tag reporting requirements: Special species hunters, whether successful, unsuccessful or did not hunt, must complete and return harvest/hunting reports (the bottom portion of the tag) to the BNR Wildlife Department within 15 days after season closure.

General hunting tag reporting requirements: The bottom portions of all tags issued for the season must be filled out and returned to the BNR Wildlife Department by Feb. 15, 2018, unless specified otherwise, regardless of whether the hunter was successful, unsuccessful, or did not hunt. Information from these harvest/hunting reports assists in game population monitoring and management.

Tribal Council Resolution 12,378 states: Failure to report results in loss of hunting/fishing privileges for the 2018 fishing and hunting seasons.

Harvest and hunting information is important for the department in determining wildlife population sizes, herd compositions and hunting pressure. In addition, this information helps determine where there are and are not animals, which helps focus habitat restoration efforts on the reservation. For off-reservation harvest, these results help the department and tribal staff in developing future off-reservation area hunts and management goals within the state game management units. Your continued support and participation in hunter reporting are greatly appreciated.

February food tip of the month

Carbohydrates are one of your body's main sources of energy, and about half of your daily calories should come from them.

They're the comfort foods we crave when we're feeling down or stressed: pasta, fries, white bread, cookies are examples.

But these simple or refined carbohydrates cause rapid spikes in blood sugar—with ups and downs in mood and energy—and a build-up of fat, especially around your waistline.

The key is to choose the right carbs. Complex carbs such as vegetables, whole grains, and naturally sweet fruit digest slower, resulting in stable blood sugar and less fat accumulation.

You'll not only feel healthier and more energetic, you could also shed a few pounds. Complex or 'goo' carbs include whole wheat bread, brown rice, oatmeal, spinach, tomatoes, beans, nuts and whole fruit.

Boys with Braids

Learn the cultural importance of why Native males wear their hair long. Too many young Native boys experience bullying or discrimination due to their long hair. Often parents and their young boys struggle to find the correct words to answer the question, "Why do you have long hair?" A variety of guest speakers will share their personal experiences and how they overcome these situations.

Longhouse

The problem is especially dangerous to developing children, and those with weakened immune systems.

Clean-up cost of the Agency Longhouse will be several thousand dollars, and will take several weeks. The cloth on the benches in both rooms will have to be removed, and walls and floors will be sanitized.

Meanwhile, the Community Center and HeHe Longhouse will be made available, whenever possible, for family and community events that would usually happen at the longhouse.

It is possible that those responsible for the contamination are homeless, such as people who have been evicted by Housing for meth use in a Housing unit, Ms. Wood said.

The locks at the Longhouse have since been changed and the windows are secured. Tribal Council members were understandably disturbed by the news that the longhouse, a religious center for many members, had been used for drug use.

Ms. Macy said the situation is leading to a wider community discussion on an ongoing meth epidemic on the reservation. Use of the drug appeared to have slowed down a few years ago, but now is back, apparently as bad as before.

Councilman Jody Calica suggested that management come up

A community meeting will be held this coming Thursday, February 15, at the Community Center Social Hall with a strategy to address the problem.

Ms. Macy said she has already started on this, talking with community members at large, and Culture and Heritage. Other partners in the strategy will be IHS, Social Services, Public Safety, Behavioral Health, plus recovering addicts, and others.

The situation with the longhouse is terrible, she said, but it could be a chance to begin more open discussion of the problem. “At some point we need to hit bottom,” she said. “I hope this is that point.”

Danielle said there is a meth prevention work group that meets twice month, and they are looking for more input, especially from recovering addicts. “They are the ones who know what it took for them to stop,” she said.

Councilman Raymond Tsumpti said the longhouse leaders need to be involved in process, as there will be changes to policies of use of the longhouse. The court system, and Parole and Probation should also be brought into the discussion.

A community meeting will be held this coming Thursday, February 15, at the Community Center Social Hall to discuss the results of the testing in the building, and to provide an opportunity for community members to learn more about current efforts to combat the drug. Community participation is encouraged.

Warm Springs is not the only reservation dealing with this problem, Ms. Macy said. The Yakama Nation Tribal Council issued an extraordinary order this month, announcing increased public safety measures on their reservation. This is the Yakama declaration:

Yakama measure

Persons engaged in unlawful activities on Yakama lands are on official notice through a Yakama Nation Tribal Council Resolution that could result in immediate exclusion, jail time, fines, suspension of all Treaty-reserved hunting, fishing and gathering rights, and banishment from the Yakama Nation with forfeiture of per capita payments.

The Yakama Nation Tribal Council, in asserting its sovereign authority over Yakama lands and people, will impose harsher punishments and faster consequences against the recurrence of illegal activities and crimes occurring on the Yakama lands.

Washington State Patrol’s refusal to actively patrol the Yakama Reservation since the Tribe’s successful retrocession through PL-280 last year, mixed with rampant crime in the small town of White Swan, prompted the Tribe to take immediate action to halt illegal activities and crime here.

On Hollywood Boulevard

Dave McMechan/Spilyay

This Warm Springs Construction crew is working on Hollywood Boulevard, in the area between the Kot-Num Road intersection and Kuckup Street. Construction is building the curbs and sidewalks, and will begin road paving in a few months, when the paving plants are open, said Leslie Cochran-Davis, of Ventures-Construction. Tribes to co-host Eagle Watch 2018

The Confederated Tribes will again co-host Eagle Watch, a tradition that began in 1996.

The tribes, Portland General Electric and Oregon Parks and Recreation host the event, coming up the weekend of February 24-25 at the Round Butte Overlook Park.

A highlight each year at Eagle Watch is the Native dance and drum demonstrations by the Quartz Creek Drummers and Dancers, and the Wasco Dancers.

Eagle Watch is a chance to learn about birds of prey.

This is a fun, free and family weekend, when visitors can see up close a golden eagle and a great horned owl.

Visitors can view wild golden and bald eagles, as well as other birds of prey that live at Lake Billy Chinook.

Birds of prey experts will be on hand; so visitors can find out what research is going on in the state, and learn how to make a backyard more inviting to the birds.

There will be the Central Oregon Eagle Watch art contest winners, and kids will learn how to build a bluebird house or bird feeder.

Lunch is provided by PGE and Earth2O. Any donations support the Madras High School JROTC program.

Indian Fry Bread will be available for sale, plus some great prizes, a silent auction and souvenirs, all proceeds going directly to the Oregon Eagle Foundation.

JR Beaver, Smokey Bear and Larry the Light Bulb will be there on Saturday. Contact information at Erin Bennett, 541-546-3412 ext. 229 - oregonstateparks.org

The Warm Springs Health and Wellness Center Employee Appreciation Committee is having a food drive to benefit the Warm Springs Food Bank at the Presbyterian Church. The community is asked to donate non-perishable food items. There are donation boxes placed in each pod at the clinic. They are taking donations until March 30.

The Thirty-Fifth Annual Traditional Powwow at Heritage High School in Vancouver, Washington is coming up Saturday, March 3. Grand entries are at 1 and 6, with a hand-drum contest during the dinner break.
