Need to address landfill problem

For years the Dry Creek Landfill has been used for illegal dumping, including dangerous and toxic chemicals, and the problem has now reached a level of serious concern. The issue has come to the attention of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, and the need to plan for a long-term solution is now at hand.

The tribes may need to develop a new landfill on-reservation, and decommission the Dry Creek landfill. Another option would be to have a transfer station, and transport solid waste to some other landfill, such as Arlington. Either option will be expensive, and identifying the funding options will be a priority.

Tribal Sanitaral Russell Graham, Utility director Travis Wells, and Chief Operating Officer Alyssa Macy reported on the situation last week at Tribal Council.

The worst-case aspect of the condition of the Dry Creek landfill is the chemical contamination, Mr. Graham said.

If snow or rain can leach chemicals in the landfill—including lead and mercury—for instance—into the groundwater, he said.

The landfill was not designed to contain toxic chemicals, and the groundwater is at risk, Graham said. Closing and securing the existing landfill might cost over $800,000. The EPA can force a solution to the landfill, if the tribes were to take no corrective action.

Some other points: The landfill may need to be fenced all the way around, and closed during non-business hours, Ms. Macy said. There would be need for more staff, a challenge in this budget climate.

Tribal code

Under the current provisions, there is little disincentive for a person who wants to dump illegally on the reservation, Mr. Wells said. Instead of a $200 fine, maybe $5,000 would help address some of the problems, he said.

Second wave of Land Buy back program

The second wave of offers from the Warm Springs Land Buy Back program is now under way. The program marked the second wave offers on May 17, and the offers are good through July 16.

Respond to the Land Buy Back program, located in the Market Center, or call Randy Scott, program coordinator, or Tiffany Yallop, outreach coordinator, 541-497-0997. The Buy Back program team met last week with Tribal Council for an update on the program.

The team includes Mr. Scott and Ms. Yallop, Field Survey Trust Officer Charles Jackson, Office of Appraisal Services deputy chief appraiser Iris Crismin, and regional supervisor Rens Stanford.

Through the Buy Back proogram, fractional interests in allotments are purchased from the tribal member owner, on behalf of the Confederated Tribes.

The first wave of offers saw a benefit to the tribes, and to the individual owner of the fractional interests.

The first wave allowed for the purchase of a total of $29 fractional interests from 161 separate owners, covering 1,260 acres of tribal land.

These interests are now with the tribes. A total of $27,123,000 was expended on these purchases.

There is still close to $3 million available for the second wave. The total allocated for both waves was almost $4 million. The total figure would cover the cost of the purchase of every fractional interest on the reservation: Clearly, this scenario would not occur, as many owners choose not to sell. But the full funding was available just in case.

Another benefit to the fractional interest owners was informational, said Mr. Scott. Some of the owners were not aware of some aspects of their interest—the location of the land, and potential or probable uses, for instance.

The Buy Back program provides many of the owners with this information, allowing them to make an informed decision about whether to sell, or how best to plan for the future regarding the interest.

As the deadline was approaching for the wave one offers, the Buy Back office saw a number of people making inquiries. This could indicate interest among some to take advantage of the second wave of offers, Mr. Scott said.

Interim Public Safety general manager

Jim Soules, a former Chief of the Warm Springs Police Department, is now serving as the general manager of the Warm Springs Branch of Public Safety. Tribal Council last week took action regarding the Public Safety general manager position, in a vote of five in favor, two abstain. Mr. Soules began work this week, on an interim basis until a permanent general manager is hired. Mr. Soules served as the Pineville police chief for 22 years, before retiring in 2003. He later served 15 months as police chief in Warm Springs. Mr. Soules, 67, has also served as president of the Oregon Association of Chiefs of Police.

Interim Public Safety general manager

Jim Soules, a former Chief of the Warm Springs Police Department, is now serving as the general manager of the Warm Springs Branch of Public Safety. Tribal Council last week took action regarding the Public Safety general manager position, in a vote of five in favor, two abstain. Mr. Soules began work this week, on an interim basis until a permanent general manager is hired. Mr. Soules served as the Pineville police chief for 22 years, before retiring in 2003. He later served 15 months as police chief in Warm Springs. Mr. Soules, 67, has also served as president of the Oregon Association of Chiefs of Police.

Landfill: need for change

Other topics came up during the discussion: Illegal use of the Dumpsters at the longhouse, and drug usage abuse of the Schuler station. Barrels of oil are being left at the site, which becomes filled with trash within two weeks of being cleaned out. Council dismissed staff to develop a series of recommendations for review in the near future.

Due to contamination caused by illegal dumping in Warm Springs, oil and other hazardous materials will not be accepted at the Dry Creek Landfill, or any transfer stations until further notice. Oil and other household hazardous waste need to be taken to Madras Sanitary Service.
