Tribes face crucial infrastructure needs

At the present time the essential infrastructure on the reservation—the domestic water system, the wastewater treatment plant, tribal building heating and cooling systems—require tens of millions of dollars of investment.

This fact was clear this week, during the water break that impacted many households, tribal departments and businesses.

The break happened by an area that broke just six weeks ago. Utilities, management and Council took steps to address the problem in the quickest way possible.

However, the water system is old, to point where replacement parts are hard to find. This contributed to the delay in fixing the break.

The Utilities staff is to be commended for tireless work during the emergency, said Alyssa Macy, Chief Operations Officer.

An important thing to consider, Ms. Macy said: There have been no significant capital infrastructure improvements for the past several decades. “We are now literally paying the price for decades of deferred maintenance,” she said.

Management, Council and Utilities have been working on how the tribes might address this situation.

They are exploring grant possibilities—with some significant success this year—plus assistance from the Indian Health Service, BIA and others.

These funding sources will come to the table to help, Ms. Macy said, “But there is no way we can have someone else pay for all of this. The tribes will have to invest as well.”

Management and Utilities are developing a comprehensive assessment of how much might be needed for all essential improvements—the water system and tribal building HVAC, for instance. A preliminary estimate may be in the range of $40 million.

Regarding the water system in particular, “We really need to have a user fee,” Ms. Macy said.

Meeting on KNT in Dec.

Tribal Council and Management plan to meet with the membership in December regarding the future options for Kah-Nee-Ta.

Tribal Council will meet on November 14 with Secretary-Treasurer Michele Stacona on the available options. There is the possibility of working with an outside investor to re-open Kah-Nee-Ta Resort, Ms. Stacona said.

She will discuss the options this month with Tribal Council, who will then meet with the membership for discussion.

Kah-Nee-Ta shut down in early September after a potential outside investor was not able to secure the needed financing to take over management of the resort. An issue is security to a lender, as the land cannot be used as collateral for a loan.

The tribes are paying for security and maintenance at the resort, as the leadership and members weigh the options for the future. The cost of the needed security and maintenance is an estimated $720,000 a year.

There were more than 120 employees at the resort before its closure. In its early years—the Lodge opened in 1972—Kah-Nee-Ta was the premier resort in Central Oregon. This market is now much more highly competitive, requiring a major investment in the Kah-Nee-Ta.

Honoring the tribes' Living Treasures

The Museum at Warm Springs chose five members—from a diversity of backgrounds and occupations—as the tribes' Living Treasures.

One thing they share in common: Knowledge, and commitment to perpetuating the culture of the Confederated Tribes. This is also at the core of the Museum at Warm Springs mission, and its legacy for future generations.

The Living Treasures are Redine Billy, Geraldine Jim, Foster Kalama, Arlita Rhoan and Maxine Switzler.

They were announced at the conclusion of the Treaty Conference in October, part of the museum's Twenty-Fifth Anniversary.

The museum board appointed a special committee to nominate and select by consensus the five Living Treasures. Each recipient received an award, and will present a public program at the museum during the coming year.

“Many aspects of Warm Springs cultures are most effectively taught and passed down by working directly with tribal members who are considered the living memory of the tribes, said museum executive director Carol Leone.

“Language, dance, canoe culture, storytelling, basket weaving, regalia making, fishing, food gathering and ceremonies encompass some of the activities that are passed down and perpetuated through their teaching.”

The Living Treasures

Redine Billy

An accomplished artist, Redine Billy graduated from the Institute of American Indian Arts in Santa Fe, New Mexico.

She was chosen as a Living Treasure because of her beautiful beadwork, and knowledge of making regalia.

She has made dresses and beadwork for many of her grandchildren, nieces, nephews and others who have wanted to participate in social dancing or powwow dancing.

Billy's Jingle Dresses are sought after by many in the Northwest.

Geraldine Jim

Geraldine Jim is a former member of the Accessions Committee at the Museum at Warm Springs.

As a member of the committee, she helped select cultural treasures, artifacts and tribal member heirlooms for the museum's permanent collection.

Geraldine helped build the museum's collection of exquisite items.

Ms. Jim was selected because she is a master artist in her beadworking and craftsmanship.

She treasured as an elder with traditional knowledge and stories.

Funding headway for Business Incubator project

The Small Business Incubator project with the Warm Springs Community Action Team has made great headway in raising needed funds for this fascinating endeavor.

Chris Watson, chief executive officer of the Community Action Team, says the team is very close to the target goal of just over $1 million.

The project will involve moving the historic Old Commissary building to a site just off the highway.

After full renovation, there will be space for new businesses. The artists group Tananáwit will have a spot at one end of the building, Mr. Watson said. A café will be at another end.

The Community Action Team business coach will have space on the upper floor of the building, along with other community business people. Additional features will be an outdoor food court pavilion, and a separate building to house a commercial kitchen.

A leading architecture firm,

Hacker Architects, is generously donating their services. Hacker is one of many organizations that have assisted in bringing the plan to reality. “I'm so grateful to all of our funders,” Mr. Watson said.

The plan is to move the building in the spring. The renovation will take several months, at which time the businesses can move in, with the grand opening the first part of 2020.

One of the spots in the building is committed to Tananáwit. The Community Action Team and the Business Incubator team, headed by Marissa Ahern, will then weigh the other proposals.

Parade Sunday for Vets

A focus of this year's Warm Springs Veterans Day Parade is youth—Kids Marching for Veterans. The parade organizers have “Thank You, Veterans” flyers that young people can fill out for the parade.

The form includes the phrase “The Veteran I am Marching for Is...” with space where the young person can fill in the name.

This way our youth will gain a better knowledge of our veterans and the meaning of Veterans Day, said Rosemary ‘Mushy’ Alarcon, a parade organizer.

The Confederated Tribes, Veterans of Foreign Wars Elliott Palmer Post 4217 and Ladies Auxiliary are hosting the 2018 Veterans Day Parade, Sunday, November 11.

Parade line-up will start at noon by the former elementary school. The parade will start at 2 p.m., going to the Agency Longhouse for lunch and ceremonies. This open to the public.

ponent of vehicle safety design, and is part of the federal Motor Vehicle Safety Standards. These standards help ensure that the safety equipment in the vehicle performs as designed by the manufacturer.

“It’s so important for auto glass to be installed correctly,” Jonathan says. “An incorrect installation is not only unlawful but also compromises the safety of all the passengers in the vehicle, and can cause the air bags in your vehicle to malfunction.”

Having a certified professional conduct auto glass installation and repair on your vehicle helps to ensure the safety of your family.

“Our auto glass tools are of the highest professional quality,” Jonathan says, “and feature the Equalizer Equipment Manufacturer durability requirement. You can rely on our training, equipment, tools and methodology for professional auto glass installation.

“We take pride in going the extra step to ensure your auto glass installation is safe, enjoyable, and of high-quality service.”

New tribal program targets opioid abuse

A new program at Health and Human Services will address opioid abuse and addiction on the reservation.

Two grants—the State Opioid Response (SOR), and the Tribal Opioid Response (TOR)—will fund this program for two years. Health and Human Services general manager Caroline Cruz oversaw the successful applications for these grants.

Ms. Cruz hired Misty Kopplin as the program manager to oversee the implementation, hiring and strategies of the opioid response.

TJ Foltz is a college intern for the program. He attends Central Oregon Community College. And Janell Yahtin, a VISTA worker, was hired through a state grant.

The grants will also fund the hiring of positions such as a recovery mentor, and family preservation staff.

An important first task of the opioid response team will be the compilation of data focusing specifically on the incidence of abuse and addiction among tribal members.

This involves working with IHS, Community Health, law enforcement, the courts and other service providers. The information from the various entities will be brought together in a single report that will give a picture of the problem as it exists on the reservation.

Abuse of opioids is an epidemic in the United States, and statistics exist that detail the problem nationally: For instance, an estimated 200 people die every day in the U.S. as a result of opioid overdose. That was about 72,000 people in 2017.

The problem on the reservation may be different, prompting the creation of the Warm Springs opioid response team.

bers for having the courage to get up in front of our people and share your stories. And to Eagle Thunder for the Grand Entry and Round Dance song.

This is the first time having an event like this for our civil servants—the fire fighters. This is also the first time I’ve seen some of my past co-workers or their families in a long time. It reminded me of a reunion if you will.

We also had visiting tribes and agencies participate:

The original Warm Springs Forest Crew and Hot Shot Crew. The members of the 1994 Prineville Hot Shot Crew. Yakama Nation. Umatilla Tribe. Grand Ronde Tribe. Burns BLM.

I hope this event has added to some of the families healing process. I know some families are in mourning and were not ready to come out and participate in the event. Our prayers and well wishes for you and your family.

I would also like to let the people know, If I left anyone off of the list, I went with the information I had! And if you weren’t mentioned here I apologize.

Respectfully, Luther Clements.

OPB broadcast examines contemporary Native art

A new documentary on Native art will begin airing this month on Oregon Public Broadcasting.

The first hour-long episode of Native Art Now! will be air at 11 p.m. on Tuesday, November 13. A re-showing will be at 4 a.m. on Thursday, November 15.

Native Art Now! presents personal perspectives from internationally acclaimed Native modern artists. They artists work in paintings, photographs, prints, sculptures, glass and fabric art.

The show is an enlightening, thought-provoking documentary examining the evolution of contemporary Native art over the past 25 years.

Native Art Now! is a collaboration of WFYI Public Television in Indianapolis, and the Eiteljorg Museum of American Indians and Western Art, home to one of the nation’s best collections of contemporary Native art.

The film contains compelling visuals of the intriguing styles and mediums of contemporary Native art, along with thought-provoking interviews with the artists themselves.

What distinguishes contemporary Native art from traditional contemporary art? “About 15,000 years,” explains Jennifer Complo McNutt, curator of contemporary art at the Eiteljorg.

“Contemporary Native artists have knowledge about their ancestors, traditions and lives that spans thousands of years. That changes the way you see the world.”

Every other year since 1999, the Eiteljorg Museum’s nationally renowned Eiteljorg Contemporary Art Fellowship has recognized leading Indigenous artists in the U.S. and Canada.

Each round, the fellowship has offered grants to a new group of five contemporary Native artists in order to support their art and artistic endeavors. A retrospective exhibition, also called Native Art Now!, was exhibited at the museum earlier this year.

In addition to the art exhibition and documentary film, the Native Art Now! project also included a major book (still available through the Eiteljorg Museum).

“Contemporary Native art challenges conventional notions that Native American art is limited to particular styles or materials or focused on particular eras,” said Eiteljorg president and CEO John Vanausdall.

“Instead, they reveal how thought-provoking contemporary art can be and how relevant it is to issues of today.”

OSU honors former Warm Springs Extension educator Clint Jacks

Clint Jacks has bene inducted into the College of Agricultural Science’s Diamond Pioneer Registry for Agricultural Career Achievement at Oregon State University.

Mr. Jacks—a former long-time worker at Warm Springs OSU Extension—was recognized for the many years of dedicated service to OSU, agriculture, leadership, and a continued life of service to his community.

As a young person, Clint served in the Peace Corps in Cameroon, Africa for five years. Upon returning to the U.S. he attended Oregon State University, where he earned his Bachelor’s degree in Farm Crops and a Master’s Degree in Soil Science.

He then joined the OSU Extension Service at Warm Springs in 1971.

At Warm Springs, Clint was responsible for agricultural and natural resources programs in addition to 4-H youth development.

In the late 1980s, he coordinated the development of the Agricultural and Range Management plan that was long used in the management of Warm Springs Tribal Natural Resources.

In addition to providing educational programs about natural resources, Clint developed programs to cultivate leadership skills among youth and adults of the Warm Springs Reservation.

On a broader scale, Clint provided leadership to the Central Oregon Cattle and Natural Resource Tour, an annual educational event that spanned 10 years in the late 1980s through the 90s.

He also cooperated with all of the central Oregon Ag Extension agents in planning and delivering the Living on a Few Acres series that started in 1986 to target new farmers just getting started in agriculture.

Thirty-three years later, though the educational format has changed, this program continues to be very successful and remains a vital resource for new farmers in central Oregon.

Clint became the chair of the Jefferson County Extension Office in Madras in 1982 and was tasked to bring about better coordination and cooperation with the Warm Springs Extension Office.

The cooperation fostered by Clint continues today. The model he used for interaction with his colleagues at Warm Springs has been adopted for use in OSU interactions with other Oregon tribal groups.

In 1993, Clint was awarded the Cooperative Extension System Award for Diversity that honored his long history of effort in promoting an environment where diversity is valued and appreciated both in Jefferson County and Warm Springs.

Clint’s dedication to celebrating diversity in his community extended to developing programs for the Hispanic population of Central Oregon, and he encouraged faculty and staff to take Spanish classes to better help with education and outreach efforts.

Clint spent time chairing the Extension Offices at Warm Springs, and Jefferson, Deschutes, and Crook counties, as well as serving as superintendent of the Central Oregon Ag Research Center, sometimes serving in multiple roles at once.

One of the secrets of Clint’s success is that he believes “it is imperative to engage special expertise and viewpoints of a wide range of individuals representing diverse interests.”

Clint’s dedication and involvement in his community did not end after his retirement. After retiring Clint continued to support diversity through his 13 years of work with the Bean Foundation and other organizations. His advocacy and financial support through the Bean Foundation helped to support the fledgling Open Campus Juntos program in Jefferson County which has grown exponentially across the state.

George Neilson, who serves with Clint on the Bean Foundation Board of Directors, said “Clint is one of those rare citizens who is intelligent, well spoken, discerning, reserved, yet, a profound force in building this community in which he lives.”

George also said that “Clint’s contacts with the youth and adults of agricultural community from his experience as the County Extension agent and his work with 4-H leaders and students give him a breadth of relationships that are very uncommon for the average citizen. While the Foundation goes about its business, often we will hear the response ‘What does Clint think?’”

“The by-product of his deeply ingrained relationship and work within the community is the acceptance of his judgement and wisdom both within the community and on our Board. Clint is a quiet giant.”

Arelene Boileu, a past 4-H Agent at Warm Springs, says that a core group of Extension faculty and staff “turned her life around... I learned so much from

“ He did so much for the Warm Springs community. ”

Rosanna Sanders

Clint, and am so thankful to have him in my life. He let me do things with 4-H and learn, so I could then help my people.”

Rosanna Sanders, Education program assistant with Warm Springs Extension, grew up in Warm Springs, and remembers attending 4-H meetings with Clint Jacks as a leader.

“I remember my older sister and I being in the Warm Springs Rocking 4-H Club growing up. I remember a lot of camping trips with Clint Jacks.

“We would hike forever with packs on our backs. We had to learn how to navigate using a compass, we learned survival skills, hiking skills with weight on our back, how to set up camp, and we always had a blast with Clint. He did so much for the Warm Springs community.”

Clint’s lasting impact on the world around him is a testimony to his dedication to a life of service to Oregon State University and to his community.

Resolutions of Tribal Council

Baseline referendum

Whereas the Confederated Tribes of the Warm Springs Reservation of Oregon (“Tribe”) is a federally recognized Indian Tribe; and,

Whereas on April 25, 2016 Resolution 12,157 which change the rules for determining blood quantum for automatic enrollment by adding the 1980 census to the list of baseline census years for determining the Confederated Tribes blood quantum of applicants for automatic enrollment was passed; and,

Whereas three Simnasho District representatives believed that Resolution 12,157 did not take into consideration the consultation of the tribe’s membership; and,

Whereas the three Simnasho District representatives invoked Article VI of the Tribal Constitution and By-Laws to call for a tribal referendum on Resolution 12,157 for the vote of the membership; and,

Whereas the Tribal Council believes that the question of whether to approve Resolution 12,157 should be submitted to the vote of the membership per Article VI of the Tribal Constitution and By-Laws; now, therefore,

Be it resolved by the Twenty-Seventh Tribal Council of the Confederated Tribes of the Warm Springs Reservation of Oregon, pursuant to Article V, Section 1(f), (l) and (u), and Article VI of the Tribal Constitution and By-Laws that the following question be submitted to a Referendum of the eligible voters of the Confederated Tribes of the Warm Springs Reservation of Oregon to be held on February 15, 2019:

Shall the Confederated Tribes of the Warm Springs Reservation of Oregon (“Tribe”) authorize the Tribal Council to amend the policy with respect to Amended Article III, Section 2(a) of the Tribal Constitution and By-laws, in so far as the quantum of blood is concerned, shall be as follows:

In determining the quantum of blood of the Confederated Tribes of an application for enrollment, all the Indian blood of enrollees of the Confederated Tribes as shown on the census roll of 1940, 1960, or 1980 shall be included as the blood of the Confederated Tribes; and,

Any prospective enrollee whose name did not appear on the 1940, 1960, or 1980 roll shall be considered to have the same blood quantum as his or her full brother or sister whose name did appear on the 1940, 1960, or 1980 census roll. If there was no brother or sister on the 1940, 1960, or 1980 census roll, the enrollee’s blood quantum will be determined by the blood quantum of his or her ancestors whose name or names appeared on the 1940, 1960, or 1980 or prior census rolls; and, determining the blood quantum for the purpose of automatic enrollment be approved?

Should Resolution 12,157

WHEREAS, Warm Springs Tribal Human Resources Department has proposed to Tribal Council certain amendments to the Health Plan, as set out in “Group Health Plan Amendment #4”, attached to this resolution and marked Exhibit “A”; and,

WHEREAS, The proposed plan amendments, if approved, would become effective January 1, 2019, and would represent a 15 percent increase in employee payroll deductions in recognition of the rising costs of health care; and,

WHEREAS, The Tribal Council agrees with the proposed Health Plan amendments set out in Exhibit “A” and wishes to authorize the Chairman or the Secretary-Treasurer/CEO or their designee, to sign and execute Group Health Plan Amendment #4; now, therefore,

The USDA Farm Service Agency encourages agricultural producers to vote in the 2018 county committee elections. County committees are unique to the Farm Service Agency, serving as a direct link between agricultural committees across the country.

Committees are a critical component of the day-to-day operations of the FSA. They are composed of three to 11 members who serve three-year terms. Farmers and ranchers who are elected to serve apply their judgment and knowledge to help with the decisions necessary to administer FSA programs, ensuring the needs of local producers. Ballots went out this week to eligible voters, and must be returned or postmarked no later than December 3.

Yakama gas tax case at Supreme Court

Leaders of the Yakama Nation are asking for Indian Country’s support, as the U.S. Supreme Court weighs its first tribal case of the current term.

Oral arguments in Washington State Department of Licensing v. Cougar Den happened last week, with the Justices appearing to be divided on the question.

The outcome will determine whether the 1855 Yakama Treaty—which specifically guarantees “free access” to public highways—protects tribal citizens from the state of Washington’s fuel tax.

“This should be a concern to all treaty tribes,” said David Washines, the chairman of the Yakama Nation General Council.

The tribe is not a party to the litigation, and won’t be able to defend the treaty before the justices. That task is instead left to Adam G. Unikowsky, a Washington, D.C., attorney who has won all seven cases he has argued at the Supreme Court, according to his law firm.

Despite that winning record, Indian Country is up against a formidable foe. Instead of asserting a trust and treaty responsibility to the Cougar Den, a fuel company on the Yakama Nation that is being subjected to the tax, the federal government is siding with the state of Washington.

According to a summary of last week’s proceeding, provided by the Native American Rights Fund: “Justices Kagan, Sotomayor and Gorsuch dominated the questioning of the Washington State Department of Licensing attorney Noah Purcell, with Justice Kavanaugh asking a few questions as well.

“These justices kept returning to the theme of the tribes’ bargained-for right to transport goods to market on highways off-reservation. For example, when the department asserted that it could impose the tax at issue because it is non-discriminatory, Justice Kagan questioned why that mattered:

“‘It does seem to me that from the Yakama’s point of view, and they’re, after all, the people who entered into the treaty... this tax is burdening exactly what they bargained to get, which is the ability to transport their goods without any burdens, without a tax.’

“Justice Kavanaugh similarly questioned whether the state’s non-discriminatory imposition of the tax mattered by emphasizing the tribes’ bargain:

“‘But... the effect was that, in taking your goods to market, which was the promise, in exchange for a huge area of land, an area of land the size of the State of Maryland that was given up by the tribe, that you could take your goods to market. And this burdens, as Justice Kagan said, this burdens substantially their ability to take goods to market.’”
