2018 Oregon Bowling Champions

Good bowling is a traditional pastime among the Confederated Tribes. A recent example: A team of five—four of the players from Warm Springs—has won the 2018 Oregon Bowling Championship—Division 4.

The team members are Chet VanPelt, Housing service specialist; Mychal VanPelt, Chet's son, who works at the Warm Springs Market. Tristan Smith, program coordinator at the Boys and Girls Club; Luis Smith from Composite Products; and Woody Wilson, who works at Madras Bowl.

Each of these bowls is in a league at Madras Bowl, some rolling on Thursday nights and some on Fridays nights.

The team that won the 2018 Division 4 Championship assembled for one weekend at the state tournament in Salem.

Holiday tradition turning 42

Back in 1976 the tribes began a tradition—the Indian Holiday Bowling Tournament—that continues from Thanksgiving Day through Saturday, November 24. As in past years, the 2018 tournament—the Forty-Second Annual—will be at Lava Lanes in Bend. Some of the featured events:

The Big Dog Challenge, the Grammaz Special, Mixed Team and Mixed Doubles, Men's A Masters Special—In Memory of Beloved Raymond Jones, the Puppy Dog Challenge, Senior Masters, Doubles and Singles, Master's Event, and Youth Bowling. The weekend concludes with the Holiday Roll-Off on Saturday at 2 p.m.

The tournament, including the youth division, are certified by the U.S. Bowling Congress. The prize fee is 100-percent returned. The tournament is organized by the Warm Springs Indian Holiday Bowling Tournament Committee: Margie Tuckta, Vice President; Austin Greene, President; and Birney Greene-Boise, Treasurer.

For information you can call Austin at 541-553-1953, Margie at 541-419-2558, or Birney at 541-553-5667. You can reach Lava Lanes at 541-318-5656. (See page 6 for details.)

Addressing the tribes' Public Safety matters

Most every crime on the reservation is in some way alcohol or drug related. Warm Springs Public Safety is developing new approaches to help address these recurring cases.

The new general manager of Public Safety is Carmen Smith, former Chief of Warm Springs Police, and more recently Chief of Burns Paiute Police.

Mr. Smith began about a month ago as Warm Springs Public Safety general manager. The branch includes Warm Springs Police, Fire and Safety, Prosecution, Parole and Probation, Victims of Crime Services, and Emergency Management.

An immediate issue Mr. Smith is addressing is to update the drug testing system at the police department. This became of critical importance because of contamination of the testing room at the police station.

In the past officers would test a suspected drug package using the previous standard method: By removing an actual sample, and applying a chemical test.

This required opening the suspected package, exposing the contents to the air in the testing room. Over the years the chemicals contaminated the room, requiring expensive cleaning.

New technology exists using a laser device that can determine the contents of a package—methamphetamine, opioids, etc.—with-

Sentencing for drug cases

The Warm Springs Justice Team is seeking community input on a draft resolution for mandatory sentencing for drug-related cases.

The community meeting will be on Monday evening, November 26 from 6-9 p.m. at the Community Center social hall. Dinner will be provided.

out opening the package and exposing the contents to the air.

The Central Oregon Drug Enforcement team has one of these, for example. Such a device would be of great value to the Warm Springs Police Department, Mr. Smith says. The cost is about $25,000, and he is working on necessary budgeting.

Long serving tribal employee retiring

Amelia Tewee knows how to make a career in life. "You look around until you find something you enjoy," Amelia was saying the other day, on the eve of her 75th birthday.

"If you like going to work," she says, "Then you'll never miss a day."

Anyone who has worked for the tribes over the past years knows Amelia. At tribal Personnel her desk was at the front, where she would greet and help employees who came by with questions. And true to her word she never missed a day.

Amelia has been with Personnel for almost 30 years, yet—as with so many others—her career began a couple decades earlier at Kah-Nee-Ta. Her first job at the resort, back in 1965, was as a cashier. Over time, because of her courteous demeanor, Amelia became the Kah-Nee-Ta Front Desk manager.

In time she moved to Kah-Nee-Ta Personnel, where she became the director, and then to tribal Personnel. Amelia will be retiring on November 30, leaving with two parties this month: One last week for her birthday, and then the upcoming retirement celebration.

Amelia has a daughter Carla, granddaughter Allee Rae, and a great granddaughter Savannah, who is 1 and a half.

With her family and pets—she has four dogs and a cat—Amelia has much to look forward. "I'm just going to take life as it comes," Amelia says of her retirement plans.

Health workers, Council review health report

Health and Human Services, IHS and Health Commissioners this week discussed the most recent Annual Health System Report with Tribal Council.

The report details the health services available to tribal members, and the most recent health statistics.

The document details tribal member health trends, and demographic information such as age groups, births by age of the mother, etc. An example of the findings:

Regarding the tribal member births by age of mother, the report finds the following: Information reported through 2000 reflected a large portion of births to very young mothers. From 2008 to present, total births to the 15-19 year old age range has continued to trend downward. The number of mothers delivering in the 35-44 age group was the highest since reporting started in 1996.

Regarding cause of death among the membership, the report finds: Accidental deaths had been the leading cause of death since the 1950s. Rates of accidental death are gradually declining.

Cancer is now the leading cause of death among members, with diabetes another leading factor. Liver disease/cirrhosis has been in decline in recent years.

Other aspects of the report will be explored in later editions of the Spilyay Tymoo.

Fundraiser for young cowboy

There will be a Spaghetti Dinner Fundraiser for Isaiah Florendo from 5 to 7 p.m. Monday, December 3 at the Simnasho Longhouse.

Isaiah has qualified for the International Miniature Rodeo Association

Finals that are coming up in January at Oklahoma City, Oklahoma.

Family and friends invite you to come and support this young cowboy, and enjoy a meal and visit. Any questions, ask Captain.

Community input on tribal hemp proposal

The Warm Springs Cannabis Project team are seeking input from the community on a proposal to produce hemp on tribal trust property, off reservation.

The team discussed the idea this week with Tribal Council, who suggested that community input would be advised before the initiation of a supplemental budget process to support the proposal.

Commissioner Pah-tu Pitt said the tribes would develop this project without an outside owner or operator. A suggested location is tribes' Schoenhagen property.

The project would involve a greenhouse, storage-drying facility and packaging.

A feature of this proposal is that the product in the future—with passage of a pending agriculture bill—could be transported across state lines.

The hemp product is not psychoactive as it contains only trace amounts of THC. The membership three years ago passed the cannabis referendum. The tribes have negotiated compact with the state, and an active Cannabis Commission, who have developed the recent hemp proposal.

Step toward restoring historic Belluschi designed homes

The year was 1943—in Europe the middle of World War II—while stateside a new kind of architecture was taking form. It was called the Modern Movement, or Modernist—using new and innovative construction technologies, an embrace of simplified form and clean lines, more practical than ornamental.

A leading figure in the movement was Pietro Belluschi, working at the time in Portland. As his name suggests, Mr. Belluschi was Italian. He moved to America at the age of 24, in 1923. He became a leading architect in Portland, and in his lifetime designed over 1,000 buildings.

The 1940s were also good for the Warm Springs Mill, a booming enterprise at the time. Robert Wilson was the operator of the mill, working with this brother Charles.

Near the mill site Robert Wilson commissioned the construction of two houses, one for himself and nearby one for Charles. The architect who took the job was Pietro Belluschi.

These building—featuring the classic Belluschi Modernist design—are now owned by the Confederated Tribes.

With some restoration work the buildings could become great and interesting assets of the tribes, said Chief Operations Officer Alyssa Macy. As an obvious example: They could become vacation rentals, generating a profit to the tribes.

There are resources available to restore historic buildings. An advocate of such an enterprise must follow a process. Ms. Macy has worked with Jason Allen of the Oregon Historic Preservation Office on some of the initial steps in this process.

Most recently, their work has brought the Belluschi houses onto the Restore Oregon annual list of the Twelve Most Endangered Historic Places.

Restore Oregon selects properties on the list based on their historic importance, urgency, viability and community support. The group has helped save 47 buildings since its inception in 2011. With this new listing, the Belluschi houses are now on their way to restoration.

Public Safety: New GM on board

As drug prevention, particularly methamphetamine, is a priority with Warm Springs law enforcement, Mr. Smith is also working on budgeting to address the pay disparity at the Warm Springs department.

This is a long-standing issue, resulting in a high turnover rate among officers. The Warm Springs Department trains younger officers, who then often leave for better pay and pension at outside departments.

An officer can gain years' worth of experience in a short time in Warm Springs, then leave for better pay and easier work at the outside department. "We lose a lot of good officers," Mr. Smith said.

"They like it here but they can't make their bills and support their family. They want to stay but can't afford it."

This is why residents often see new officers in Warm Springs. Just as they are starting to know the community, they might leave, requiring a new hire as the process starts over again. A proposal in the 2019 Public Safety budget could help address this, Mr. Smith said.

Christmas Bazaar in December

The Forty-Third Annual Warm Springs Christmas Bazaar is coming up on Saturday, December 8 at the Community Center.

Letters to the editor

Howlak Tichum

The tribes mourn the passing of longtime co-worker and friend Lynn Davis.

Ms. Davis worked more than 40 years with the Confederated Tribes. In most recent years she was the tribal Administrative Services director.

Her passing is a great loss, deeply felt by the tribes.

Their ancestors fought on opposite sides of the three-year war, which began in October 1855 in the Yakima Valley after the rape and murder of Yakama women and children. But Washines and Hamilton are friends, introduced by her passion for tracking down descendants of combatants on both sides.

After corresponding by mail for a year, Washines and Hamilton met in person for the first time.

A short documentary tells this modern legacy of the Yakama War. You can see it on YouTube: type in ‘Yakama War.’

Ride Out the Storm

The Ride Out the Storm Conference is coming to the Warm Springs Community Center on Friday and Saturday, November 30-December 1.

The conference—hosted by Living Hope, Behavioral Health and Health and Human Services—will feature Pastor Titus Upham of Browning, Montana, and Pastor Leah Smartlowit of Wapato, Washington. Worship will be by Ruth Joyce of Fountain Hills, Arizona.

The Friday session begins at 6 p.m., and on Saturday from 1 to 6 p.m. Dinner will be served at 5 p.m. on both days. Lunch will be served on Saturday.

‘He calmed the raging storm, and the waves became quiet.’ ~ Psalms 107-29.

To my fellow tribal members

My fellow tribal members, There is a better ‘us’ in us.

It seems we are ruminating—clinging to the past—We need to put our energy into accepting and moving on.

What has happened and not happened:

What we haven’t done and need to do is the hard work of diagnosing what the problems are and figure a way to overcome them.

“The most successful people, evidence shows, aren’t directly pursuing conventional notions of success. They are working hard and persisting through difficulties because of their internal desire to control their lives, learn more about their

Sharing the Story of the Columbia River

Linda Meanus speaks to students about growing up near Celilo Falls with her grandfather and grandmother, Chief Tommy Thompson and Flora Thompson. At right is Culture and Heritage’s Jefferson Greene.

A truly amazing year it’s been for Confluence’s mission to tell the story of the Columbia River through Indigenous voices. Just look at the numbers:

More than 1,000 school children reached through Confluence in the Classroom and Confluence Outdoors program.

Dozens of teachers received professional development training so they can bring Native history and culture into schools.

At least 600 people heard the Indigenous perspective through tours and Confluence Story gatherings. Five completed Confluence art landscapes, preserved for generations to come through work parties and conservation projects.

Together, we are connecting kids with a truly inclusive history of our land to create a better stewardship of our shared ecology.

We don’t see what’s not happening, but will see what will happen is we all get involved in our future. Life will get better for all of us, but more importantly, for our kids in the future.

Warm Springs needs to have a community with different sources of employment and diverse efforts to build a strong community. This will improve our chances of success.

We need to recharge our batteries and pull ourselves out of the past and into the future—‘Let’s Just Do It.’

Apology

To the people of the Confederated Tribes of Warm Springs,

I hereby apologize for the actions I was part of on your land, and my actions were uncalled for and disrespectful to everyone who takes pride in their tribal lands. I fished where I shouldn’t have been, and left trash and broken glass.

I was raised to respect others and their property, and I am sorry for not doing either, as I unlawfully trespassed and broke laws on tribal land.

I hope others around me and who know me will take this as a lesson, and not repeat it. I can’t take back what I have done. All I can do is learn from it. I have grown up with many of your children and have multiple family members working, as I have, grading logging roads. I spent my Saturdays with my father at the mill in Warm Springs as he worked.

I wouldn’t appreciate someone trespassing and littering on my land, and I would want the same consequences to happen that happened to me. I take full responsibility for every count I was charged with, and give my full apologies to every member of Warm Springs.

I hope you will accept this apology letter and know this shall never happen again. My lesson has been learned, not only by myself but the others who were with me, and they are truly sorry as well.

For all physical therapy needs

Clinic staff includes director Natalie Kiefer, Taylor and Dain Gilbert, and Alicia Oberholzer.

The Warm Springs Holistic Health clinic offers complete physical therapy services. Physical rehabilitation, greater mobility and pain relief are primary goals. For pain relief there is an acupuncturist on hand two days a week.

Clients at the clinic, a part of tribal Managed Care, are mainly seen by referral from a primary care provider. “We see everything for head to toe, and people of all ages,” said Dain Gilbert, physical therapist at the clinic.

After a medical procedure or accident, for example, a person might need therapy to return to normal physical movement. This is the service of the Warm Springs Holistic Health Clinic.

Dain and wife Taylor are the most recent physical therapists to join the clinic. The staff also includes director Natalie Kiefer, Alicia Oberholzer, Dr. Eric Mallory (acupuncturist), and patient relations technician Sonja Bryant.

Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert, Ms. Oberholzer and Ms. Kiefer are physical therapists, and Doctors of Physical Therapy. Staff members also specialize in particular areas of physical therapy, for instance Orthopedics.

Their jobs involve much listening, as the client explains his or her situation and how the person wants to improve. “We are an excited and dedicated group,” Dain says. “We are here for the community, advocating for health.”

The clinic is located by the courthouse. Managed Care developed this service to save tribal members from having to drive to Madras for physical therapy. You can reach them at 514-777-2663.

High Desert exhibit will feature renowned Native artist

The work of Native American artist Rick Bartow will be on display beginning in January 2019 at the High Desert Museum.

The exhibit—Rick Bartow: Things You Cannot Explain—will be an extensive retrospective of the nearly four decades of the artist’s work, an exploration of his extraordinary life and complex identity.

His work connects the physical and spiritual worlds, and explores the passage between the past and present.

Mr. Bartow learned from an early age to honor and embrace his father’s ancestry as a member of the Mad River Band of Wiyot Indians in California, as well as his mother who is European.

Bartow would often spend Sunday morning at church and afternoons at Native ceremonies. He was born in Newport, and had close ties to the Siletz community. He traveled extensively during his lifetime but always returned to his coastal home- stead. It was here he became one of the Northwest’s best-known artists.

Over two days they bowled Singles, Team and Doubles categories. In the end—when the scores had been tallied—the Warm Springs-Madras Bowl team had won the Team competition.

For three games they had a combined score of 2,840. The second place team was 2,683; so the margin of victory was substantial. “We had good chemistry as a team,” Chet says.

The team received a cash payout for the victory, plus plaques and championship shirts, presented in November at Madras Bowl.

Around Indian Country

Invasive fish now close to critical salmon habitat

An invasive predator is threatening to sink millions of dollars in salmon and steelhead recovery, and it's inching closer to creating a crisis on the Columbia River.

Northern pike were thought to be over 80 miles from Grand Coulee Dam and the salmon and steelhead below.

This month the Confederated Tribes of the Colville captured a northern pike in Lower Lake Roosevelt near the Grand Coulee Dam.

That means the predator fish are now less than 10 miles from the critical salmon and steelhead in the Columbia River. In addition, the Spokane Tribe just caught their biggest pike ever, measuring 47 inches and weighing 27.5 pounds.

“We are at a critical moment in time where impacts to salmon and steelhead by northern pike can be fully prevented,” said Washington Invasive Species Council Executive Coordinator Justin Bush.

The continued spread of northern pike will constitute an environmental emergency which will require swift action to slow down or stop, Bush said.

The Washington Invasive Species Council, Native American tribes, state and federal agencies, provincial and regional organizations, and others are united in this effort, but more must be done , and quickly, he said.

“Continued spread of northern pike also threaten tribal, commercial and sportfishing harvest of salmon and steelhead in Washington and Oregon.”

Official, Klamath Tribes at odds over water talks

Department of Interior official Alan Mikkelsen— he spent the week in Klamath Falls and Medford—said he will return to the Klamath Basin next month to continue water talks, but that he has no plans to reach out to the Klamath Tribes based on their last interaction.

Mikkelsen said earlier this month his last communication with the Klamath Tribes was in August during a meeting of the Tribal Council. He said he felt disrespected during the last meeting and has not requested to meet with the tribes since that time.

“When you stand in front of the general council for two hours and basically have a very difficult discussion, at some point you have to throw your hands up ... There were personal attacks made...”

Logs will be building blocks for stream restoration in Yakima basin

Modern science and centuries-old cultural ideals converged last week as a helicopter lowered logs into the nearby Little Naches River while Yakama Nation tribal members shared a ceremonial song celebrating salmon’s importance to their way of life.

Former tribal council Chairman Jerry Menninick and four others, including council Vice Chairman Virgil Lewis, followed the solemn song with praise for the “wood fiesta” stream restoration project underway as they spoke.

“I’m truly amazed at what has been accomplished this last couple of decades,” said Lewis, who worked at the tribe’s Cle Elum fish hatchery when it opened in 1997.

“I’m really proud of our staff and what they’ve been able to do.”

Yakama Nation Fisheries habitat biologists Scott Nicolai, Kelly Clayton and Ashton Bunce designed the ambitious project to continue efforts to restore historic salmon runs in the Yakima basin.

Like other projects in the basin, this one involved collaboration from several public and private groups.

If all goes according to plan, floodwaters will bury the new logs under gravel and become a permanent feature, creating habitat for fish and slowing the flow of water.

Bunce said the new spawning grounds should benefit chinook salmon, steelhead and rainbow trout, along with cutthroat and other native species, and it might even eventually bring endangered bull trout back to some of the project locations.

By creating more side channels and places to store cool groundwater, the project should create the type of colder habitats those fish prefer as river temperatures rise.

Clayton, Nicolai and others hope their innovative efforts can become a model for others, widening the scope of what’s possible as they try to restore forests and watersheds.

Additional forest restoration and the Yakama Nation’s hatcheries contribute toward shared objectives, which Lewis said align with the elders’ wishes to take care of nature and “make it like it was.”

Much remains to be done, but Menninick said progress can already be seen as salmon have returned to some of their native runs, spawning in places where there have been restoration projects.

The Nature Conservancy’s director of forest restoration and fire, Reese Lolley, praised the increased pace and scale of the work done on places like the Little Naches, in the same area where he stood watching the Norse Peak fire in 2017.

Leah Joan Conner ~ 1932-2018

Leah Joan Conner died November 15, 2018 in Pendleton, surrounded by loved ones.

She was born June 29, 1932 to Gilbert Edward and Elsie Spokane Conner in the family home on the Umatilla Reservation. Midwives to her delivery were Vera Spokane Jones and Winnie Young Chief Crane.

Leah attended District 44 on the reservation and graduated from Pendleton High, where she was vice president of the school band, playing saxophone. She was active in drama and Bachelor Girls, and was a basketball princess and Junior Altrusan.

Leah was an avid tennis player and swimmer, along with dancing and riding horses, including racing for her brother Norman. She began driving harvest trucks for local pea and wheat farmers at age 15.

Mrs. Henry Roe Cloud, wife of the BIA Superintendent for whom Leah babysat, encouraged Leah to save for college. She attended Willamette University her freshman and sophomore years. At Willamette she worked at the State School for the Blind to earn room and board.

In Salem, she also clerked in the Woolworth stockroom and worked at the Ice Arena. While a student at Willamette, Leah was selected to serve as Queen of the All-Indian 1952 Pendleton Round-Up Court. This was her second stint as rodeo royalty.

With Loretta Pinkham, Leah served as a 1948 Chief Joseph Days Indian Princess, the first time such a selection was made.

In various capacities, she met Averill Harriman, Robert Taft, Dwight Eisenhower, Harry Truman, Jeff Chandler, Dorothy Malone, Ward Bond, Lee Marvin, Eddy Little Sky, Jonathon Winters, and Peter Fonda.

Leah transferred to the Pendleton Round Up Court Queen, 1952.

University of New Mexico for her junior year as a Physical Education major, and studied Dance under modern dancer and choreographer Elizabeth Waters.

As an officer of the University of New Mexico Kiva Club, Leah remembered one time being the only woman permitted to attend a Kiva ceremony with her fellow male delegates—she wore boots and jeans.

She graduated from Eastern Oregon State College in 1966 with an emphasis in Health and Physical Education. She taught, counseled and coached at Coulee Dam High School; District 16 R Hawthorne, Lincoln and Washington Elementary Schools; and Warm Springs Elementary and Madras High School.

Meanwhile, she attained her Master of Education from Oregon State University in 1973, and a Bachelor of Fine Arts from the University of Washington in 1980, focusing on education and studio art. She also worked in Parks and Recreation for the City of Roses, Chemawa Indian School, and for the Confederated Tribes of

She became the Umatilla's first tribal member to direct the Education Department in 1981 until 1983. Prior to that, she had served as Certified Teacher in the tribes' Early Childhood education program.

She worked at the circulation desk of the Pendleton Public Library from 1984 to 1992.

Leah was the founding president of the Tiimutla Arts Council from 1981-1989. She served on the Resources and Research Committee in the planning stages of Tamástslikt Cultural Institute. Leah was devoted to the annual Tamkaliks Celebration in Wallowa, and served on the committee since its inception in 1991.

She assisted the Idaho State Commission on Arts Services, Eastern Oregon Regional Arts Council, Oregon Commission for the Humanities, Umatilla County ESD, BMCC, the design committee of the the Clock Tower Restoration, and on the boards of directors of the Nez Perce Trail Foundation and the Wallowa Homeland Project. She was honored as a Happy Canyon Volunteer of the Year in 1993.

Leah is predeceased by her parents; siblings Duane Elliott, Gilbert Cecil, Antoinette, Norman Joseph, Etta Leona, Earl Erwin and Naomi Shepherd; and children Robert Hibbs, Norma Nanette Manta, and Kimberly Conner Coleman. She is survived by her children Roberta, Brian and Dana Conner of Pendleton and Chuck Warren, Alpine, California; grandchildren Raven and Michael Manta, Pendleton; Monece and Kanim Moses Conner, Pendleton; Jonas Moses Conner, Seattle; Cody, Sierra, and Austin Warren, California; Ashley Valdez, Portland; Eliot and Gilberta Gottfriedson, Pendleton; Blake Stohr, Corvallis; Wyatt Stohr, Bonney Lake, Washington.

Among her greatest blessings were her seven great grandchildren: Kiana Manta, Michael Manta Jr., Robert Anthony Manta, Lillian Grace Wickert, Marcelline Garcia Gottfriedson, Cylus James Wickert, and Luna Love Garcia Gottfriedson.

Celebration of Life was held at the Pendleton Presbyterian Church at on Tuesday, November 20. Burial followed at Olney Cemetery. In Ms. Conner's memory, donations may be made to the Tamkaliks Celebration, PO Box 15, Wallowa, OR 97885
