A focus on reservation infrastructure

Planning for the future of the reservation infrastructure can be overwhelming: Tens of millions of dollars are needed in the very near future. And the needs are basic: Drinking water, sanitary waste disposal, housing.

Understandably, the tribes do not have the financial resources to address these needs; so planning for the infrastructure of the tribes can be overwhelming. Yet there is cause for hope:

"We have the staff in place who are dedicated, who want to make this a better place to live," said Alyssa Macy, Chief Operations Officer.

None of the improvements can happen overnight: The predicament has been decades in the making; solutions likewise will take time.

Earlier this year tribal management began organizing a 'funding summit.' Invitations went to all major players in the region who may have some resources—financial, advisory, or otherwise—to assist the tribes.

The summit happened last week at the Fire Management conference room. By coincidence—underlining the seriousness of the situation—the Agency area was experiencing its water crisis.

Joining the tribes for the funding summit were the Environmental Protection Agency, Housing and Urban Development, Indian Health Service, the BIA, the Oregon Department of Environmental Quality, representatives from Sens. Wyden and Merkley's offices and Gov. Brown's office, and Business Oregon.

Water response

Tribal Council has approved the expenditure of $300,000 for the emergency repair of the 14-inch water main break under Shitike Creek.

The tribes sought requests for proposals, and chose Gelco of Salem as the contractor. The construction company this week is repairing the break.

A cause of the problem with the leaking pipes—a smaller but still problematic break happened last week in the Miller Heights area—is the failing pressure reducing valves.

There are many of these valves and some of them are not functioning properly. This causes too much pressure in the lines, resulting in breaks.

As Gelco this week was working on the main break at Shitike Creek, there was a loss of water Tuesday into Wednesday in the campus area.

Since the main line break was identified, tribal staff has been working to restore the system—even with a temporary fix—as quickly as possible.

Residents were on the boil water notice for many days.

The team working to address the problem determined a near-term solution was to replace failing pressure relief valves within the current valve boxes.

This proposed fix will give operators the ability to control pressure into the system. This is not a permanent fix. A long-term solution will have to wait until the emergency condition is passed.

Indian Health Service engineers have looked into the potential long-term valve fix involving completely replacing the vaults and valves with new valves.

IHS is taking the lead on doing the environmental paperwork for the total replacement of the valves.

IHS has also been taking a key player on the permanent fix to the Shitike Creek crossing.

Work was already underway to assess the geotechnical characteristics of the creek to support design for a replacement water main.

The work included soil borings and test pits within the creek bed to assess subsurface conditions. The geotechnical report is expected this month.

In discussions between the tribe and IHS, the idea was raised of possibly having the main line crossing be at the Shitike Creek bridge to avoid having to work in the river, and to deal with the ever changing patterns of the Shitike Creek and potential environmental impacts.

There have been many generous donations, including bottled water, towels and baby shampoo. Indian Head Casino donated ice.

The Emergency Response Department, located at the former elementary school, has distributing thousands of gallons of safe drinking water.

The tribes hired Gelco Construction, based in Salem, for the emergency repairs to the domestic water line under Shitike Creek.

The Gelco crew showed up Monday morning, mobilizing the equipment and piping.

This required a water shut-off on Tuesday into Wednesday of this week. A minimum of 36 hours was the estimate for the duration of the water shut-off.

Earlier, the Warm Springs Utilities staff completed work to minimize water outages to the community. This led to the expectation that the shut-off would be limited to the campus area only, not to every hook-up south of Highway 26, as had been previously projected.

Pi-Ume-Sha Treaty Days marks a half-century

Next week will be the 50-year milestone of the Pi-Ume-Sha Treaty Days, as the very first Pi-Ume-Sha happened in 1969.

Honoring veterans was one of the reasons for the first Pi-Ume-Sha: In '69 many young tribal members were serving in the Vietnam War.

The Treaty was signed in 1855 on June 25. The actual anniversary this year will be next Tuesday—celebrating 164 years since the signing.

Then on Wednesday before the powwow is the Pi-Ume-Sha Health Fair, hosted by Community Health. The theme this year is Just Move It!

Then on Thursday the Museum at Warm Springs will open the new exhibit Resilience, examining the boarding school experience. of Native American students. Phil Cash Cash will also give a talk at the museum next Thursday morning, also talking about the legacy of the boarding schools.

The powwow then starts next Friday evening, June 28. There will be the dance competitions, parade, rodeo boxing and more (see page 6 for more).

The Warm Springs Outdoor Market will be open during Pi-Ume-Sha.

Inspiring speech at COCC commencement

Taw ‘TJ’ Fultz of Warm Springs was a featured speaker last weekend at the Central Oregon Community College graduation ceremony.

TJ got his Transfer Degree in Education in December, and walked with the other recent graduates on Saturday.

Michelle Cary, director of the COCC Native American program, recommended TJ as a graduation speaker to Andrew Davis, director of Student Campus Life at COCC in Bend.

Andrew agreed, and asked TJ if he would like to give a speech at the commencement.

TJ had gone to Mariah Stacona’s graduation ceremony recently at Northwest University in the Seattle area, where he heard the student speakers.

This gave him the idea for his speech at COCC.

“Mostly I talked about my journey, where I come from, and lessons from my mom,” TJ says.

His mom is the late Rita ‘Patches’ Roybal-Marchand.

TJ works as the Prevention coordinator in Warm

Recent COCC graduate TJ Fultz

Springs. Here are some of the comments he made at the COCC commencement:

Good morning everyone. My name is Taw Foltz. Most people call me TJ, which is kind of funny because even though it’s only one letter less, it’s much easier for others to pronounce and far easier for them to remember.

I stand before you today as do my fellow students, a college graduate. Though each of us has our own personal journey, I am going to give you a glimpse of mine. When I was a freshman in high school I dropped out. In the fall of the next year I returned, and with help from a few friends and teachers from Madras High School, I was able to graduate.

My college journey started back in 1998 at COCC. I come from a small town located on a remote Indian Reservation, you may have heard of it, Warm Springs, or for many Kah-Nee-Ta.

I was raised by a single mother, Patches was her name. I want to bestow upon you four life lessons that I learned from this wonderful woman that I continue to practice every day.

Lesson one: My mother told me that hard work and dedication can take you far in life, as long as you are humble and stay the course.

Life is going to try its best to knock you down and make you feel like giving up.

I was reminded recently by a professor (Dennis Lynn) in one of his ‘weekly reflections’ he so eloquently wrote a few weeks ago, that rings true to lesson one.

The quote states “This too shall pass” which to me means that no matter what you are given each day, good or bad, will come and go repeatedly with time.

Remember, even when things are bad, they will get better, and when things are going good, they will disappear as well. You have to remember your core values and beliefs and stay true to yourself.

Lesson two: Patches taught me that kindness and respect go hand in hand and that in order to get respect you must first learn to give respect.

As you navigate through life remember to follow the Golden Rule which is the principle of “treating others as you would wish to be treated.”

When you respect someone it gives them a sense of self-worth and could change their lives for the better.

Lesson three: My mother taught me to take chances in life and to not be afraid to make mistakes.

Parade on the Fourth

The Recreation Department will host the Fourth of July Parade, this year with the theme, Oohrah—Honoring Marines.

Parade line-up will be at 9 a.m., judging at 10, and the parade start at 11. The parade goes from the campus to the Community Wellness Center, where there will be a barbecue and family games.

Infrastructure: Water just one of the pressing needs

For the tribes, on hand were Council members, management and Finance, Health and Human Services, Utilities, Managed Care, Emergency Response, Sanitation and others.

There were four main topics of discussion: The domestic water system, the wastewater system, solid waste management and the landfill, and housing.

Because of the water crisis, the first topic to be addressed was the water delivery system. Yet the wastewater, solid waste—residential garbage service—landfill, and housing discussions were equally concerning. Some examples:

Russell Graham, tribal Sanitarian, talked about the landfill and collection system. To address issues surrounding these services, Graham estimated that more than $35 million would be needed over the next ten years.

Sanitation has three garbage trucks serving the reservation—and only one of them is working. The trucks are beyond their lifespan—they’re 2001 models—and the two that are not working would be too expensive to repair.

Mr. Graham has a staff of just three, while eight are needed. The landfill itself is a wholly separate and potentially much more serious problem, Graham said.

One problem is the illegal dumping of hazardous waste on the reservation. Some of those responsible are from off the reservation, traveling from as far away as Bend and The Dalles in order to leave their hazardous waste.

With no protective lining, there is evidence of leaching below the landfill; and the groundwater is only 18 feet below the surface. The drinking water treatment plant is not that far away from the landfill, another concern.

Chico Holliday, wastewater manager with Utilities, discussed the wastewater system. There was a break recently below the Warm Springs Jail. Some may have thought this was related to the drinking water system, but it was unrelated Mr. Holliday said.

The wastewater pipes are terracotta, an earthenware material that is no longer used for piping, Holliday said. “These are museum quality pipes,” he said.

With the Shitike Creek drinking water break happening at the same time as the wastewater break, Housing and Construction pitched in to help Utilities, Holliday said.

The ideal solution would be to replace the terracotta pipes with actual sewer pipes, he said.

Danielle Wood, Housing Authority director, gave the update for her department. The waiting list for Housing is at 415 people, she said.

There are a total of 312 units—tribal, HUD, tax credit units and the trailer park—so the number of people on the waiting list is actually more than the number of units.

Housing contends with methamphetamine contamination in some units. The staff has become skilled at the decontamination process, Ms. Wood said. But it’s expensive: Up to $20,000 per unit. There are 37 units that are not available due to contamination.

Alyssa Macy gave the update on the domestic water system. The goal for now is begin replacing the plant, located on the Deschutes River, in the year 2022.

This is a narrow timeline, with the $31million to $40 million price being the biggest hurdle.

The potential funding agencies expressed their willingness to help, within their own capacities.

‘Resilience’ examines boarding schools

Warm Springs Agency boarding school, circa 1890.

The Museum at Warm Springs will examine the Indian Boarding School experience with a new exhibit opening this month.

The exhibit is Resilience: The Boarding School Experience of Warm Springs and beyond.

Boarding Schools have had lasting impacts—both good and not so good—for many Native Americans.

With Resilience you will see and hear first hand observations from some who have lived the boarding school experience.

Some memories will be heartfelt, poignant, sad, bitter, but most important, it will be the truth, as remembered by the students, now parents and grand parents.

In the decades past, families were not given the choice for their children to attend boarding schools. Over time, it became a choice, tribal high school students are now opting to attend boarding schools, finding positive learning experiences. You will see and hear their memories as well.

You will not want to miss this meaningful, candid account of Boarding Schools, then and now. Resilience opens next Thursday, June 27.

Returning to Spirit

On the morning of the opening of Resilience, the museum will also host a visit from Phil Cash Cash, speaking on ‘Healing from historical trauma and the board school experience.’

This will be at 10 a.m. on Thursday, June 27. For information contact Tamera Moody, museum Education coordinator, 541-553-3331.

Tribes, partners dedicate Dunstan Homestead Preserve

About seventy-people people were on hand for the official dedication of the Confederated Tribes' Dunstan Homestead Preserve.

The tribes and Branch of Natural Resources welcomed guests from the Nature Conservancy, Bonneville Power Administration, Fish and Wildlife and other partners to the dedication.

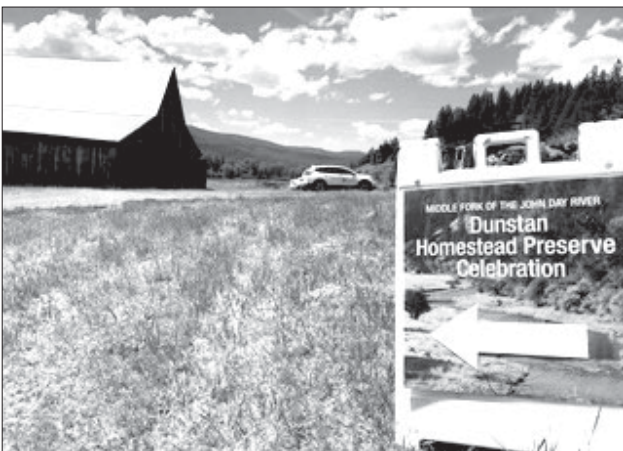

Tribal Councilman Wilson Wewa Jr. gave the invocation; and Warm Springs Chief Delvis Heath, Councilwoman Brigitte McConville, and tribal Fish and Wildlife Committee Chairman

Bruce Jim were among the speakers.

The Dunstan Homestead Preserve is a 1,200-acre critical habitat along the upper reaches of the Middle Fork of the John Day—an area at the heart of Chinook salmon spawning and rearing territory.

The Nature Conservancy donated the property to the Confederated Tribes, for management by the Branch of Natural Resources. The BPA provides reparation funding for the habitat restoration.

With the addition of the Dunstan Preserve to the tribes' existing properties, nearly 3,000 acres of important fish and wildlife habitat are now permanently protected along the Middle Fork John Day, as managed by the Branch of Natural Resources.

The 14-inch line break under Shitike Creek created the current serious water crisis in Warm Springs. Tribal Utilities last week also had to respond to a six-inch line break along Highway 3, near Miller Heights. This lead to a water shut-off for tribal buildings and residents in the area. Another result was a reduction in water pressure in the campus area.

A Jefferson County Veterans Expo is this Thursday, June 20 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at 860 SW Madison Street in Madras. Oregon House approves cap-and-trade

The Oregon House of Representatives this week approved an economy-wide cap-and-trade program.

This is a program that Warm Springs tribal members have spoken in favor of in Salem.

The Confederated Tribes participate in a similar program that was established in 2013 in California.

The tribes’ carbon sequestration program—established by Tribal Council, the Branch of Natural Resources, and Warm Springs Ventures—has generated significant revenue for the tribes.

Oregon would be the second state, after California, to adopt a cap-and-trade program, designed to limit greenhouse emissions.

The Oregon bill has been contentious. The vote in the House was 36-24 in favor. Gov. Brown has said she would sign the bill.

Earlier this year, Kiahna Allen testifies at an Oregon House committee on cap-and-trade.

Under cap-and-trade, the state puts a limit on emissions, and auctions off pollution permits, or ‘allowances,’ for companies that exceed the limit.

The Confederated Tribes entered an agreement with a petroleum company in California. For compensation, the tribes agreed to manage areas of reservation forest land to reduce the level of carbon in the atmosphere.

At the state Capital earlier this year, Kiahna Allen of Warm Springs was on the first panel to testify on behalf of cap-and-trade.

The tribes already see the effects of global warming, Kiahna said.

Toots, berries and salmon, have all been effected, she said.

Under the House bill the amount of greenhouse emissions in the state would be reduced by at least 45 percent below the 1990 level by the year 2035.

Prison for fatal accident

A Warm Springs man will spend nearly six years in prison for driving drunk, speeding along a dark road at night without headlights and striking and killing two young men on the Warm Springs Indian Reservation.

In a plea deal, Harold Blackwolf Jr. will spend the time in federal prison after pleading guilty to two counts of involuntary manslaughter in the Sept. 28, 2017, crash and one count of illegally possessing a gun.

Warm Springs’ public safety general manager Carmen Smith says 25-year-old Nathan Youngman and 22-year-old Eric Boise were killed in the crash.

In court, Blackwolf apologized and promised to spend time in prison working to become a better, sober person.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Paul Maloney says Blackwolf had been drinking at a friend’s home earlier that night and left the scene afterward, ditching his car and fleeing.

Investigation into fatality

The body of a missing Camas man was found over the weekend on the reservation, nearly a month after he was reported as missing.

Ryan Webb, 44, was reported missing after he left his home on May 7 to possibly go camping in the Mount Hood National Forest area, Camas Police said.

Investigators reported that his cellphone and bank activity had been inactive since May 14.

Webb was found deceased inside of his vehicle near Timothy Lake. Authorities do not suspect foul play, though the investigation was continuing.

Law enforcement agencies working on the case include Warm Springs officers, Clackamas County, and Camas, Washington. Cause of death was not yet determined.

Native Artists featured at gallery in Sisters

Three celebrated Native American artists are the feature at Ravens Make Gallery in Sisters.

Their artwork will be on display, and the artists themselves will be on hand.

Terrance Guardipee, Jason Parrish and Roger Perkins will be at the Gallery this Friday through Sunday, June 21-23.

The event will focus on demonstrating and considering the varying styles of Native American paintings over the past 150 years.

Mr. Guardipee is Blackfeet; Mr. Parrish is Navajo; and Mr. Perkins is Mohawk.

Terrance works in the Ledger Art genre. This approach first occurred in the late 1800s during the early reservation days.

He not only paints upon antique ledger pages, Terrance was the artist most instrumental in reviving this narrative art form in the 1990s.

His works can be found in numerous museums

Antelope Hunt by Jason Parrish

throughout the United States, including the Smithsonian.

Additionally, Terrance creates large collages and paints in modernist styles, ranging from Fauvism to Expressionism to Pop Art.

Mr. Parrish paints in the Santa Fe School tradition, which began in the 1930s.

A 'less is more' conceptual approach describes his desert scenes of Navajo life. Jason's second showing this year at the juried International Watercolor Exhibition at the Grand Palais on the Champs Elysees of Paris demonstrates growing international recognition for his works.

His piece, Antelope Hunt, just received a National Award that will be announced by the presenting organization June 15.

Roger Perkins founded Pow Wow Pop Art. His reasoning for altering old black and white photos of Native Americans into colorful, often humorous perspectives:

"For years, we've had these iconic photos staring out at us, reminding us of what we were and won't ever be again. That gets depressing. We have a now! We have a future! It needs to be colorful, energetic, humorous, and positive."

The artist reception on Friday, June 21 is from 5 to 8 p.m.

A panel discussion on the concepts of traditional, contemporary, and possible future directions will begin on Saturday at 1:30pm. Sunday, hours are 11 – 3. This event will be offered at Raven Makes Gallery, 182 E Hood Ave, Sisters, Oregon.

Around Indian Country

At Grand Coulee

It's been nearly 80 years since salmon and steelhead made it past Chief Joseph and Grand Coulee dams in Washington's Upper Columbia Basin. It's long been a goal for tribes to see the fish return to the blocked waters where they once spawned.

A team of researchers presented their findings last week to the Northwest Power and Conservation Council. In short, they said, salmon can survive in the upper reaches of the Columbia Basin, and fish passage needs to happen at the two dams.

For the second part of the study, the tribes would test salmon reintroductions in the area. One big thing to study could be how invasive northern pike affect salmon above Grand Coulee Dam: The predatory fish tend to eat pretty much any fish they come across.

At Grand Ronde

The Confederated Tribes of Grand Ronde plan to purchase the shut-down Blue Heron paper mill as well as more than one mile of land along the Willamette River further upstream.

Purchasing the lands would give the tribes access to the river for fishing and room for potential commercial development.

Tribal officials have said there are no plans to build a casino in Oregon City, if the tribes conclude this purchase.

The more than a mile of land along the Willamette that Grand Ronde is upstream from Willamette Falls.

The Blue Heron property is also being developed by the Willamette Falls Legacy Project.
