Health care careers starting On Track

Their college experiences so far have been very different. Yet Lynden Harry and Kaliyah Iverson share this same wisdom: When an opportunity presents itself, you take it.

"In that way you can open many doors," Lynden says.

Kaliyah adds: "Even if you don't want to go into the medical field, go and see as much as you can. That's been our approach."

Lynden and Kaliyah this fall are each starting their second years at college—Kaliyah at Arizona State University, Lynden at the College of the Siskiyous.

And both young women are pursuing careers in health care—Lynden in Physical Therapy, and Kaliyah in Pediatric Oncology.

They both credit the same program—starting in high school and continuing this summer—with helping them refine their career choices. The program is OnTrack.

OnTrack, of Oregon Health Sciences University, is co-sponsored by the Northwest Native American Center of Excellence, the Jefferson County school district, St. Charles Medical Center, and Indian Health Services.

While at Madras High School, Lynden and Kaliyah—they were both outstanding athletes, especially at basketball—joined OnTrack. They were referred by school counselor Butch David.

At first OnTrack was almost like a school club: There were day field trips to OHSU and the Doernbecher Children's Hospital, for instance; and regular meetings at school with Katie Lenahan, OnTrack director.

They met Dr. Dove Spector and Dr. Erik Brodt, of the Northwest Native American Center of Excellence, and other professionals with the program.

In their senior high school years, Kaliyah and Lynden were especially impressed by the OnTrack trips to OHSU and Doernbecher. At OHSU they got to know doctors, nurses and other staff, learned about different medical specialties, and visited the learning center.

The Doernbecher visit was equally enlightening, and moving... It was all an eye opening experience. "I had never seen a medical facility like OHSU," Lynden says.

"I remember OHSU being so big, compared to Madras St. Charles," Kaliyah says.

And the experience gave them a better idea of what they wanted to do in life.

In the winter and early spring of their senior high school years, with fellow senior Enrique Ramirez, Lynden and Kaliyah became the first OnTrack Tribal Health Scholars.

They spent mornings at the Warm Springs clinic, learning more about various health careers, getting to know the clinic staff. And for their final weeks as Tribal Health Scholars, they each chose a particular area of focus.

Meanwhile, they were applying for college, and applying and qualifying for financial assistance. Kaliyah chose Arizona State, in part because they offered the most assistance; Lynden chose the College of the Siskiyous, where she continues with basketball as point guard for the Eagles.

The College of the Siskiyous is in a beautiful locale, at the base of Mt. Shasta. "It's a great place to be," Lynden says. "The campus is very diverse." Enrollment is about 2,700. There are aspects—the diversity of culture, the rural setting—that can almost remind you Warm Springs, Lynden says.

Arizona State, with more than 70,000 students, is one of the biggest schools in the U.S.: In choosing colleges, "My story is a little different from Lynden's," Kaliyah says.

Kah-Nee-Ta discussion

Tribal Council and Management this week discussed the latest developments at Kah-Nee-Ta. There remain investors who are interested in partnering with the tribes in the operation of the resort.

Some potential partners have already toured Kah-Nee-Ta, some more than once; while others are planning future visits, said Michele Stacona, Secretary-Treasurer.

Management shared with Tribal Council conceptual information from potential investors. The information is strictly confidential as discussions continue.

Council members said they would be interested in touring the resort, with the public possibly invited to attend.

Council was also planning to talk on Monday with board members of Indian Head Casino about any potential cooperation between the casino and Kah-Nee-Ta.

Chief operations officer Alyssa Macy gave an update on the hamlets, some of which are occupied. There will need to be contamination clean-up in some units, Ms. Macy said. All units will be tested, she said.

In order to bring the hamlets up to current standards, a significant investment would be needed, up to $5 million.

Water update

Tribal Utilities and Gelco Construction were working on the replacement of the pressure reducing valves for the Agency water system.

The old valves were not functioning properly, causing leaks in the water lines.

The work so far has been a great improvement for the water delivery system; more work will continue as parts become available.

Some of the areas where the valve work happened: the industrial park, the Catholic Church, West Hills, and Greeley Heights stations.

This work included the replacement or repair of the pressure reducing valves and other critical components. Water is being distributed through the system with improved reliability as compared to the pre-construction condition.

A next step in the process will be Public Utilities staff conducting BacT testing, and finalizing steps to have the boil water notice lifted.

Until that time, the notice remains in effect. Listen to KWSO up for updates, or check to tribal websites.

Areas impacted are the entirety of the Warm Springs Agency area including Kah-nee-ta, Wolfe Point, Sunnyside, Upper Dry Creek, Miller Heights, Campus area, West Hills, Tenino Valley, Tenino Apartments, Elliott Heights, Senior Housing, Trailer Courts, and Greeley Heights.

Team Rylan shows best of community

Rylan Davis is going into the eighth grade at the Warm Springs Academy. As friends and family know, Rylan is a wonderful athlete and bright spirit—a true winner when it comes to game time.

Earlier this year, during Academy basketball season, Rylan began feeling pain in one of her shoulders. Her parents, Leslie and Jabbar Davis, took her to the hospital for an MRI, thinking maybe Rylan had a rotator cuff injury.

The MRI showed no injury, and Rylan was referred to specialists at Oregon Health Sciences University. Then her other shoulder started hurting. Doctors said it could be leukemia; and more testing showed this to be the case.

Rylan went through treatment at OHSU, staying at the Ronald McDonald House. Her parents—Leslie works at Warm Springs Construction and Jabbar at Fire Management—would stay with her.

Rylan responded well to the treatment, Leslie said.

Courtesy Team Rylan

She will have to go to OHSU less frequently as time goes by, as she continues improving.

Successful treatment could be a three-year process. Meanwhile, Rylan will be going to school, keeping as much of her regular routine as possible.

The community has taken this cause to heart, helping the family during these past several months. Rylan's teammates and school friends have shown incredible support. Sandra Danzuka, who works with Leslie at Ventures, started by organizing a raffle; Tony Holliday put together the upcoming fundraiser basketball tournament, September 7-8, during leukemia awareness month.

Tribal Management and Council approved a rare exception, allowing employees to donate their personal time off to the Davises, so they could spend time in Portland with Rylan, during her stay there. These are just some of the examples.

"It's been overwhelming. I'm speechless and humbled," Leslie says. "We really have no words to say how much we appreciate all of this."

Rylan Davis plays for the Warm Springs Academy Eagles.

Tribes seek $12.5 million for 2017 wildfire damages

At direction of Tribal Council, the Confederated Tribes are pursuing a lawsuit to recover damages from the 2017 Nena Springs fire.

The fire burned for about two weeks across 68,000 acres, including a northeastern area of the reservation.

The tribes say a farmer, two of the farmer’s employees and the farm equipment company bear a responsibility to compensate the tribes.

The damages include the loss of reservation timber, and the use of the tribal fire fighting resources. The lawsuit seeks more than $12 million.

The lawsuit claims the farm equipment was giving off sparks, caused by a rock lodged in the intake chute. Despite the fire hazard, a worker continued to operate the machinery.

The tribes’ lawsuit says the fire caused significant damage including burnt forest and land, damaged fencing, deterioration of the soil and watershed, range and vegetation damage, damage to cultural resources and damage to fish and wildlife and their habitat.

The Tribal Council resolution, no. 12,597, is summarized in part:

On August 8, 2017 a wildfire ignited on a private ranch located just north of the Warm Springs Reservation in Wasco County, which became known as the Nena Springs fire, and then spread south and entered the reservation.

Based on the investigation to date, the Confederated Tribes of the Warm Springs Reservation understands that the origin and cause of the Nena Springs fire resulted from human activity in connection with the operation of farm equipment.

The tribes committed tribal resources to combatting and containing the Nena Springs fire. The Nena Springs fire caused damage to forest land and rangeland of the northeastern part of the reservation; and

Pursuant to Warm Springs Tribal Code Section 200.025, the Warm Springs Tribal Court has jurisdiction over the tribes’ claims against any persons responsible for causing the Nena Springs fire; and Oregon’s state courts and/or the United States District Court, District of Oregon may also have jurisdiction over the tribes’ claims against any persons responsible for causing the Nena Springs fire.

For these and other reasons the Council approved the filing of the lawsuit.

Cpt. Dr. Rachel Locker is a skilled care provider. Her years of service at the Warm Springs IHS Health and Wellness Center have combined culturally sensitive and clinically appropriate women's health care and pre-natal care.

As clinic director, Dr. Locker effectively coordinates care within the local community, and with the local hospitals.

She was honored in August with the prestigious award: Best Practices in Women's Health: Focus on American Indians/Alaska Native Women's Health.

The announcement comes from the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists.

The award recognizes Dr. Locker for her exemplary leadership and career-long commitment to the highest standards of clinic care for women.

She has done this through her praxe of Family Medicine at the Health and Wellness Center.

The award also mentions Dr. Locker's numerous impactful roles in the Portland Area Indian Health Service regionally, and the entire IHS nationally.

In her role as clinic director, she assures that the same high standards are met by all the other providers as well.

She is an effective voice within a multi-community group that has been tasked with guiding decisions for regional obstetrical and neonatal care.

For more than two decades she has been a critical and highly effective catalyst for the development and promotion of culturally appropriate training materials in support of the local and state-wide sexual assault, domestic violence and child abuse prevention and intervention efforts within the Native American and non-Native communities.

She is widely recognized as an expert in these areas in the Portland area and throughout the Indian Health Service.

Among her many professional recognitions and honors, she is the recipient of the HIS National Council of Clinic Directors Outstanding Physician of the Year Award and the Direct Services Tribes Outstanding Achievement Award for Service in the IHS Direct Care Programs.

Dr. Locker, by her sustained superior performance, career-long commitment to quality clinical care and education, and her dedication to promoting and advancing the health and well-being of American Indian women has clearly earned the distinction of being the 2019 recipient of the prestigious award of the Committee on American Indian and Alaska Native Women's Health of the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, the Haffner Award.

To my supporters,

Thank you very much for your time. Recently, I was among 15 Native American kids invited to Washington, D.C., for a national Future Farmers of America Leadership Camp.

The camp was hosted by the Indian Agriculture Council with their new Native American Agriculture Fund. It was a great opportunity, with full expenses paid.

I learned a lot about leadership and helping people. One day our group packed 6,000-plus meals for those who have no place to stay, as they are victims of natural disaster.

Having such a great opportunity led to me being unable to attend the

Sixteen signs of emotional abuse in a relationship

by Mallory Black, Diné, StrongHearts Native Helpline

No one expects to find themselves in an abusive relationship—Most relationships begin in a good way with kind words and compliments, but they can turn harmful and emotionally abusive at any time.

Emotional abuse is a type of domestic violence that often flies under the radar, but it should always be taken seriously as a form of abuse.

When emotional abuse is present in a relationship, a partner will criticize, threaten or isolate their partner as a way to manipulate and control them.

Emotional abuse can be degrading, humiliating and terrifying, often leaving long-lasting scars on one’s spirit and self-esteem.

So, how do you know if you’re in an abusive relationship? What can you do when a loved one is being emotionally abused? Let’s start with recognizing the tactics of emotional abuse.

Signs of emotional abuse

In an intimate relationship, emotional abuse can look like when a partner:

- Constantly calls you hurtful or degrading names, insults you or criticizes you.
- Acts extremely jealous or possessive of you.
- Humiliates you in any way, or shames you.
- Isolates you from your family, friends or community.
- Blocks you from making new friends or joining social groups.

- Ignores your presence for several hours, days or weeks.
- Refuses to listen, speak or respond to you—the silent treatment.
- Explodes in anger toward you or is constantly angry at everything you do.
- Pressures you to commit and becomes angry or sulks when you don’t commit.
- Threatens to hurt you or themselves, or uses weapons to scare you.
- Threatens to hurt your children, family members or pets.
- Threatens to take your children away from you or call child protective services (CPS) on you.
- Repeatedly lies about where they are, what they’re doing or who they’re with.
- Calls you “crazy,” “too sensitive,” or denies abuse is happening when confronted.

- Cheats on you or flirts with other people to intentionally hurt you.

- Accuses you of cheating in the relationship.

Likely to escalate

When emotional abuse is present in a relationship, you may feel off-balance, like you’re walking on eggshells, or question your judgment more than usual.

This is because an abusive partner uses harmful behaviors like the tactics above to manipulate and control their partner so they feel powerless.

That’s why it is so important to trust your instincts when your partner does or says something that doesn’t feel right to you.

Emotional abuse is extremely dangerous and detrimental to a person’s wellbeing and often has lifelong psychological effects.

An abusive partner’s behavior is likely to escalate as time goes on, and they will often use emotional abuse in combination with other abuse types and tactics to obtain and maintain power in the relationship.

People in abusive relationships tend to blame themselves for the abuse or believe they must have done something to deserve the criticism or attacks.

No one ever deserves to be abused. And no matter the abusive partner’s reasoning for the abuse, domestic violence goes against our traditional ways as Native people.

It is never acceptable to hurt a partner or spouse in any way.

Is arguing abusive?

In every relationship, partners can expect to disagree from time to time. Arguments are a normal part of any relationship, but abusive behavior is not.

In a healthy relationship, each partner must commit to being honest, communicating, and trusting the other person.

Each partner must work to maintain healthy communication and avoid hurting the other person emotionally, spiritually and physically.

Above all, each partner must show respect in the relationship, especially when disagreements arise.

In an abusive relationship, any disagreement can escalate into emotionally or physically abusive behavior. Remember, there is never an excuse for abuse.

Getting help

Recognizing the signs of emotional abuse is the first step to getting help.

If you or someone you know is being hurt in your relationship, know that you are not alone.

There are people who want to support you, including advocates at the StrongHearts Native Helpline.

By calling 1-844-7NATIVE (762-8483), you can connect anonymously with a Native advocate who can offer a listening ear and support with whatever is happening in your relationship.

You can share as much as you feel comfortable, and our advocates will listen without judgment or blame.

The StrongHearts Native Helpline is available daily from 8 a.m. to 11 p.m.

Advocates also offer crisis intervention, assistance with finding ways to stay safe, and a connection to Tribal and Native domestic violence resources, if needed. We can also assist concerned friends or family members with ways to help a loved one who is being abused, as well as people who are worried they might be abusing their partner.

It can also be incredibly helpful to lean on family members and your cultural roots for support.

Never forget that you have the strength and courage of your ancestors, too, who dreamed of a world where every one of their relatives would live in safety, happiness and in harmony.

You deserve to feel safe in your relationship, no matter what.

OnTrack resource for students

Gordon Scott is the school community liaison for the OnTrack program in Warm Springs.

OnTrack, an education program of the Oregon Health Sciences University, is about helping young people learn about careers in health care.

Warm Springs OnTrack at first focused mostly on high school students.

The program now begins working with students at the Warm Springs Academy.

“The goal of the program is to grow, and get new students into the program,” Gordon says.

The Tribal Health Scholars internship is one of the important components of the program.

Warm Springs OnTrack hosts community outreach projects. Gordon will be meeting with students at the Warm Springs Back to School Barbecue, for instance.

OnTrack works with students every step of the way in the pursuit of education and a health care career. The help is from grade school though high school, college and beyond.

Gordon’s office is on campus, in the trailer next to the Children’s Protective Service building. Warm Springs OnTrack has a Facebook page, and information is available at ohsu.edu

Students are encouraged to contact Gordon with any questions about OnTrack.

Tribal Health Scholars

Some comments on this summer’s OnTrack Tribal Health Scholars:

“St. Charles Outpatient Rehab in Madras, Prineville and Redmond had an incredible opportunity to parter with EC Works to provide invaluable observation experiences for two young women—Lynden Harry and Kaliyah Iverson—who are Tribal Health Scholars, looking to pursue career paths in health care.

“This partnership allowed the women to experience all aspects of rehabilitation and several other medical lines of services within the St. Charles Health system.

“There is no greater education experience than direct observation with clinical specialists. We wish Lynden and Kaliyah all the best in their studies, and hope they return to join our team, serving all of community members and helping us provide better services for those who reside in Warm Springs.”

— Courtney Parea, St. Charles Prineville Outpatient Rehabilitation

OnTrack: Promising careers in health care

“I wanted to get away from Warm Springs. I think everyone should leave the reservation at some time. You get to experience so much more.”

During their first years at college, Lynden and Kaliyah kept in contact with Katie Lenahan at OHSU OnTrack, keeping her up to date as to the particular medical fields they were interested in.

As it turned out, Katie was able to get them positions this summer with St. Charles Medical Center. East Cascade Works added their resources, in partnership with the Central Oregon Inter-Governmental Council, allowing for a full summer program.

As mentioned earlier, Kaliyah is interested in the specialty of Pediatric Oncology, and Lynden in Physical Therapy. So their summer programs were geared to these specialties.

Lynden spent time at Physical Therapy units at St. Charles Madras, Redmond and Prineville: There are many kinds of Physical Therapy—neurological, orthopedic, speech, etc.—and she wanted to compare different approaches.

Kahlia spent her time specifically at St. Charles Madras. She wanted to witness the full hospital experience: From when the patient checks in, to trauma and ER, administration, billing—“everything, to see how it all comes together,” Kaliyah says...

As they get ready now to go back to college, Lynden and Kaliyah wish to thank OnTrack, OHSU, St. Charles, and everyone who has given support. Asked what advice they may have for younger students wondering what to do in life:

“If you see an opportunity, take it—You just never know what doors will open.”
