Kah-Nee-Ta Village talk at Council

Tribal Council last week heard a promising idea for future use of the Kah-Nee-Ta Village. A central element of the proposal is for use of the Village as a hydrotherapy center.

Chris James, his associate Eric Fristensky, and Dr. Edward McEachern gave the presentation. Mr. James, attorney, is a long-time advocate of the idea, as he has personal experience in seeking good quality hydrotherapy for a family member.

The hydrotherapy service his family used during this episode was contained wholly within a hospital building, in a foreign country. The family did not leave the building for weeks—rendering the experience even more unpleasant.

Having similar services at the Village—with sunshine and clean air along with the hydrotherapy pools—would make for a unique facility. There would be the heated hydrotherapy pools, plus lodging for the patients and families, and related support services. And there would be access to all the outdoor activities at Kah-Nee-Ta.

Good health is the most important thing in people's lives, and always will be, Mr. James said. For this reason the need for services at the Village would be "forever with no end to the market."

Dr. McEachern spoke with Council by speaker phone. The doctor is the Chief Medical Officer with Pacific Source Health Plans. Dr. McEachern confirmed the assessment that a hydrotherapy center at the Village has great potential.

Ms. James presented a revenue projection for the project through 2022, and the numbers are positive. Operation of the lodge would have to be a separate enterprise, he said.

Tribal Council members showed interest, and support for the proposal. Kah-Nee-Ta operated for 47 years, said Council Chairman Raymond Tsumpti, "And it was a good run. We now have to look at where we are today."

The hydrothereapy center has potential, Chairman Tsumpti said, "but we do have to shore this up with the membership."

Toward Tribal Vital Economies

Allen Nygard has spent 20 years studying tribal economies, over time working with 150 Native communities. "I'm not a consultant, I'm a student," Mr. Nygard said. Over time he has learned that "every tribal community is different, having developed over thousands of years."

My Nygard is now working with the Warm Springs Community Action Team on the team's Vital Tribal Economies project.

The Northwest Area Foundation—dedicated to reducing poverty in communities of the region—is a supporter of the Warm Springs Action Team. Last year the foundation provided an economic advancement grant to the action team.

The purpose of the two-year grant is to conduct a comprehensive study of the reservation economy, and develop a comprehensive economic development strategy, in partnership with the community.

Mr. Nygard, member of a North Dakota tribe, is helping with the assessment of the Warm Springs economy, the needs and assets. He spoke last week with Tribal Council, initially explaining the Vital Tribal Economies survey of earlier this year.

The survey is to get a picture of the strengths of the local situation, and areas in need of attention and improvement.

With two decades of experience studying tribal communities and economies, Mr. Nygard now realizes that every community—each one being different—begins the economic development journey from different places.

Yet there are some aspects that exist—to one extent or another—in all communities. These include qualities such as trust within the community and leadership, on the positive side; versus aspects such as the degree of lateral oppression and trauma among the members, for instance.

Some tribal communities have more to overcome on the negative side, while others start with more to work with on the positive side.

In the case of Warm Springs, he said, there is a good level of positive aspects in the community—trust, helpfulness, leadership, etc.

Based on his research, Warm Springs is given a good assessment, Nygard said; so the community is already prepared to change for the better in terms of the local economy. "You already have a lot going for you," Mr. Nygard said.

In time the answer will not be just more money, he said. Sometimes an influx of a great deal of money can actually have an adverse impact.

Reports at Council on Willamette Falls projects

Willamette Falls is one of the significant traditional fisheries of the Confederated Tribes of Warm Springs, especially for eeling. The Falls is a usual and accustomed fishing place of the tribes from time immemorial.

Developments at Willamette Falls are of obvious importance to the tribes; and at the present time there are three separate projects happening there. Representatives of these projects met with Tribal Council last week, updating Council, the Branch of Natural Resources and legal counsel.

The projects are the Willamette Falls Heritage Area, the Willamette Falls Locks, and the Willamette Falls Legacy Project.

One aspect of developments at the Falls is the Blue Heron Mill property, now owned by the Grand Ronde tribes.

The mill closed in 2011, after nearly a century of operation. The mill property, adjacent to the Falls, is a central part of the Legacy Project—the potential "new home of the riverwalk"—the planned public access to the Falls, said Brian Moore, project manager of the Legacy Project.

The Grand Ronde purchased the mill property this year, with an agreement to cooperate in cleaning the site.

The Legacy Project involves Oregon City, Clackamas County, Metro and the State of Oregon, working with the site's private owners, the community, tribes and others. A plan with Legacy is to create a public riverwalk alongside the Willamette River, leading in time to potential new Oregon City downtown development. The plan envisions a $35 million investment into this project.

A separate project is the Willamette Falls & Landing Heritage Area, involving 56-river-miles of the river. Jon Gustafson, president of the area coalition, described the Heritage Area last week at Council:

The goal is to share the history and culture of this area of river with the public. Again, clearly, the tribes have a significant interest in this program.

The third component presented last week at Council is the Willamette Locks Commission. The Oregon legislature created the commission this term, with Senate Bill 256.

The goal of the commission is to advise state, local and regional government agencies on development and implementation of a plan for repair, reopen, operate and maintain the Willamette Falls navigation canal and locks.

These had been operated and maintained by the Army Corps of Engineers, who closed the locks as "non-operational" in 2011, after operating and maintaining them since 1873. Boat traffic through the locks under the Corps of Engineers was free.

The locks commission is considering options for future maintenance and operation, and this may involve a user fee for some watercraft, such as tour boats and commerce transport.

In a worst case scenario, abandonment of the locks could be harmful to fish, another aspect of importance to the tribes, said Robert Brunoe, general manager of the tribal Branch of Natural Resources.

Tribal Council, committees and staff said they plan to be actively engaged as these three projects progress.

New building idea for Early Childhood

The Early Childhood Education building has experienced recurring repair problems in recent years. A leaky roof is an example, and problems with the ECE kitchen are another.

Policy makers for ECE are now considering the option of having a new building for Head Start, Early Head Start and day care.

Recent work to keep ECE open and safe for children and staff has been expensive, and more work is needed. A roof repair, for instance, is an estimated $100,000, funded through a grant.

Meanwhile, there are at least two federal grants that could help fund a new facility, said Casandra Moses, director of the Early Childhood Education Center.

One of the grant sources would be the federal Head Start program itself, and another is the Children's Care and Development Fund, Ms. Moses said.

Staff and the Policy Council have been weighing the options for the past several months, working also with Jefferson County School District 509-J. Site options for a new building may involve the school district, while another option may involve the Health and Human Services Branch.

Rather than continue to expend resources on repairs at the existing ECE facility, the long-term practical solution could be a new facility, Ms. Moses said. Funding sources become increasingly reluctant to continue putting money into the older building, she said.

She met last week with Tribal Council, joined by Alvis Smith III and Tamera Coffee of tribal Utilities.

In other news from ECE, shared recently with Tribal Council:

Through another grant through the Central Oregon Disability Support Network, ECE is contracting with a speech and language specialist.

This will provide students at ECE, and at the Warm Springs Academy, access to these services without the need of parents having to drive them to Redmond or Bend, as is currently the situation.

Highway project for safer walking

Up to 7,000 motor vehicles a day travel through Warm Springs on Highway 26 every day.

Meanwhile, the highway is also popular with pedestrians, walking or on bicycles.

Clearly, the situation is dangerous.

"It's especially dangerous at night, and particularly in the winter when there's snow on the side of the road," said James Halliday, the tribes' Land Services director.

The Oregon Department of Transportation is planning a major construction project for Highway 26, from the Shell station down past Indian Head Casino and the Museum at Warm Springs.

The plan is for the contract to go to bid in the spring of 2020, said Robert Hardie of ODOT.

The work should be done by the end of next year, Mr. Hardie said.

Mr. Halliday commented, "It's going to be nice for people to have more area to walk in, off the highway in a designated pedestrian zone." ODOT was in Warm Springs last week, meeting with residents and outlining the safety corridor project.

The specific segment of Highway 26 that will see the improvements is from milepost 103 to milepost 112.

"This project originated in 2015, when the Confederated Tribes of Warm Springs received earmark funding as part of House Bill 5005, for approximately $1.3 million," said Alia Burck, ODOT community affairs coordinator.

Additional funding will come from ODOT enhanced funding. The money will pay for safe pedestrian sidewalks, and bike path connections for residents in the area.

During the construction period, traffic will be limited to one lane.

In addition to the pedestrian and bike path work, the project includes rock fall mitigation. Site of this work is just past the old mill site.

The work will also include "rectangular rapid flashing beacons" at some crosswalks.

The ultimate goal is safety, and letting drivers know that they are passing through a community.

Evergreen Longhouse award for Plateau cape lessons

The Evergreen State College Longhouse advisory board chose Warm Springs traditional artist Aurolyn Stwyer as recent grant recipient. The award will allow Aurolyn to continue teaching the art of Plateau cape making.

Aurolyn is the owner of the Red Skye Trading Post. “The grant is great news,” Aurolyn said, “as the holiday season brings an increase in gift buying.”

She says, “Last year I taught eight tribal members to make a Plateau cape, and we had about two dozen on the waiting list.”

Aurolyn is lead artist of the Native Artist Mentor Fellowship, 2018-2019.

She will be teaching the beadwork-Plateau cape lessons at the Museum at Warm Springs, and at the Crow’s Shadow Institute of the Arts at Pendleton.

In announcing the $5,000 grant award, Laura VerMeulen said to Aurolyn, “Your applications was so strong, and everyone recognized that right away. It is an honor to work with you.”

rector.

Aurolyn sets out some of the project standards:

This project has a requirement for at least two people to work on their capes, as family heirlooms. Also:

There will be monthly meetings for six months, including a meal, and local master beadwork artist as speakers.

The first assignment is to develop a goal sheet for the project, and to interview the Elders in the family to determine the family designs, color schemes, and other information about their family traditions.

“It’s been my experience that the local tribal families prefer the color blue,” Aurolyn says, “because that is the color of N’Chi-wana, the Big River.”

With the capes complete, “There will be fashion show in about a year,” Aurolyn says.

Nearly all of the grant award is to budget for supplies, travel to gather the supplies, and the meals. If you would like information on the Plateau cape lessons, you can reach Aurolyn by stopping the Red Skye Trading Post at the Warm Springs Plaza. Or by phone at 541-615-0278. KWSO survey seeks input on NPR news broadcasting KWSO 91.9 FM is conducting a listener survey. The survey is to hear feedback about adding five-minute National Public Radio (NPR) newscasts weekday mornings.

Currently, KWSO does six local newscasts during the Morning Routine from 6 to 9 a.m.

KWSO News and the Community Calendar are focused on local, statewide, northwest, and Native news and information. The Pew Research Center published an article in September that stated:

“In 2018, thirty-four percent of U.S. adults said they preferred to get news online, whether through websites, apps or social media. That’s compared with 28 percent in 2016.”

Television remains the most popular source of news, with 44-percent of Americans citing a preference for TV. The article also shared that:

“Americans are skeptical of the information they see on social media. Even as they regularly turn to social media for news, a majority of those who often get news on social media—57 percent—say they expect the news they see on these platforms to be largely inaccurate.

“Concerns about the inaccuracies in news on social media are prevalent even among those who say they prefer to get their news there.”

The Warm Springs community has limited access to free broadcast TV in favor of satellite TV or increasingly, TV services via internet connection. Access, however, is dependent on ability to pay.

KWSO is interested in filling the gap in the availability of national and world news for the Warm Springs community, and the station is looking for your feedback.

There is an online survey that you can access by going to kwsu.org

Or you can complete this paper survey and return it to KWSO at the Warm Springs Media Center.

Here are the survey questions:

Where do you typically get national/world news? (check as many as applies):

Radio. TV. Online. Social Media. Newspaper. Nowhere.

Question: On a scale of 1-5 (1 being low and 5 being high) how interested are you in keeping up on national and world news?

Question: Should KWSO add a 5-minute NPR newscast weekday mornings?

Question: If KWSO offered a 5-minute NPR newscast in the morning, What time should it be?

6 a.m. 7 a.m. 8 a.m. or 9 a.m.

Heritage Month continues at COCC

There are 400 Native American students enrolled at Central Oregon Community College. Celebrating these students— the diversity and all they bring to the school— COCC has hosted a number of events in November honoring Native American Heritage Month.

This month there were screenings—at COCC Madras and the COCC Bend campus—of the acclaimed documentary Navajo Code Talkers of World War II. Then Clem Picard of Warm Springs gave Native flute performances at COCC Madras and Bend.

Events continue this Friday,

November 22 with a performance by Warm Springs performer Blue Flamez.

Scott ‘Blue Flamez’ Kalama will perform Friday at 6 p.m. at the COCC Bend campus, at Willie Hall. The event is free and open to the public.

Scott is an award-winning music performer. He also now works as Prevention Specialist with the Warm Springs Behavioral Health program. Mr. Kalama is a Certified Prevention Specialist in the State of Oregon.

Native Child Protection Act up for first hearing

The House Subcommittee for Indigenous Peoples of the United States is holding a legislative hearing this Wednesday, November 20. The Native American Child Protection Act, H.R.4957, is the only item on the agenda.

The bipartisan bill updates the Indian Child Protection and Family Violence Prevention Act, which first became law in 1990 to help tribes and the federal government address child abuse in Indian Country.

The National Congress of American Indians the largest inter-tribal advocacy organization in the U.S., is welcoming the bill.

“The National Congress of American Indians firmly believes that American Indian and Alaska Native children are the future of Indian Country,” said CEO Kevin Allis, who is a citizen of the Forest County Potawatomi Community. “Tribal governments are responsible for protecting, teaching, and guiding their youth, providing services to families, and creating supportive environments where children can flourish.” “The federal government has a solemn trust responsibility to ensure the protection of the most vulnerable members of Indigenous communities: children,” said Rep. Ruben Gallego (D-Arizona), the chairman of the subcommittee who introduced H.R.4957 last month.

“Despite this, there are extremely limited resources for tribes to develop culturally-specific child abuse and neglect treatment, investigation, and prevention programs. That is why I am proud to introduce the Native American Child Protection Act to ensure that Indigenous communities have the resources they need to keep Native American children safe and healthy.”

“Indian Country has lacked adequate resources to identify and address violence towards children for far too long,” added Rep. Paul Cook (R-California), who is the top Republican on the subcommittee and an original cosponsor of H.R.4957.

“This bipartisan legislation will provide funds to ensure that tribes have the resources they need to protect children from neglect and abuse.”

Tribal Access to Homeless Assistance Act advances

A bipartisan bill that would help tribes address homelessness in their communities is due for passage in the U.S. House of Representatives.

H.R.4029, the Tribal Access to Homeless Assistance Act, does something rather simple. The bill makes makes tribes and tribal housing entities eligible for the same types of grants that are already available to other communities.

“To say the least, the rate of homeless among Native Americans living on tribal lands is alarmingly high,” Rep. Denny Heck (D-Washington), the sponsor of the measure, said at a markup session.

The data indeed is staggering. According to a recent report from the Department of Housing and Urban Development, between 42,000 and 85,000 American Indians and Alaska Natives living on tribal lands are experiencing homelessness, which often leads to overcrowding, another major issue in Indian Country.

The report, Housing Needs of American Indians and Alaska Natives in Tribal Areas, noted that tribes can tap into existing funding streams to provide housing for their people. But they are not eligible for the McKinney-Vento Homeless Assistance program, which is in fact the government’s largest homeless assistance program.

“Making tribes eligible recipients of these homelessness assistance is a step toward fixing tribal housing issues and solving the hidden crisis of homelessness on tribal lands,” said Rep. Patrick McHenry (R-North Carolina), the senior-most Republican on the House Committee on Financial Services.

Standing Rock seeks hearing to deny DAPL bid to double oil flow

LINTON, N. D. – In submissions for a hearing November 13, the Standing Rock Sioux Tribe asked the North Dakota Public Service Commission to deny Dakota Access Pipeline (DAPL) operators’ request to double the flow pressure in the fracked oil conduit.

“Doubling the throughput of a pipeline that already poses a grave threat to the water the tribe drinks, the sacred sites where tribal members pray, and the hunting, fishing, and plant gathering practices that are integral to the tribe’s way of life would have a profoundly adverse impact on tribal members,” Standing Rock said in a brief.

The pipeline company seeks permission to double its capacity to 1.1 million barrels a day by adding five 6,000-horsepower electric-motor pumps at its station five miles west of this town in Emmons County, just across the Missouri River from the Standing Rock Sioux Indian Reservation.

“A few miles upstream from the Emmons County pump station is the DAPL crossing at Lake Oahe. The waters of Lake Oahe are critical to the welfare of tribal members,” the tribe said. “The DAPL Oahe crossing imperils tribal welfare, and the DAPL capacity expansion will dramatically exacerbate that peril,” it said.

Applicants, who transport oil from North Dakota’s Bakken Formation to Illinois, state that the capacity expansion “will not alter the existing maximum operating pressure of the DAPL,” or Dakota Access Pipeline.

However, surges, or changes in pressure, commonplace on hazardous liquid transmission lines such as this, can cause them to burst, and the company has provided no surge analysis in its application, the tribe’s engineering consultant Richard Kuprewicz warned.

DAPL capacity expansion would result in actual flow velocities within the 30-inch mainline pipe in excess of 15 feet per second. “This is an extremely high velocity for crude oil, especially for a large diameter pipeline such as DAPL,” Kuprewicz testified.

Such high velocities can rapidly cause prohibited surge overpressures of more than 110 percent of maximum operating pressure within microseconds, he noted.

Another tribal witness, pipeline safety expert Donald Holmstrom, pointed out that Dakota Access corporate parent, Energy Transfer LP, has the worst hazardous liquid safety record in the industry over the past 13 years.

In recent months, its pipelines have caused a number of high-profile release incidents, prompting unprecedented government enforcement actions, shutdowns and remedial actions, according to Holmstrom.

As of December 3, 2018, DAPL had experienced 12 spills of more than 6,100 gallons of Bakken crude oil in its less than two years of operation. But that is just a small fraction of the many hazardous liquid incidents across Energy Transfer LP’s pipeline portfolio, he noted.

Seminoles continue to hire employes for casino expansion

The Seminole Tribe continues to hire more employees at its recently expanded casino in south Florida.

The tribe recently completed a $1.5 billion expansion of the facility, where the most striking feature is a 638-room hotel in the shape of a 450-foot tall guitar.

“The Guitar Hotel will attract visitors from throughout the nation and around the globe,” said Jim Allen, CEO of Seminole Gaming and Chairman of Hard Rock International.

Seminole tribes' new Guitar Hotel.

“They will experience a world-class entertainment, gaming and dining destination.” The hotel officially opened to the public in October.

The Seminole are originally from Florida. Today, they principally live in Oklahoma with a minority in Florida, and comprise three federally recognized tribes: the Seminole Tribe of Oklahoma, the Seminole Tribe of Florida, and Miccosukee Tribe of Indians of Florida, as well as independent groups.

2020 Census initiative in Indian Country

The U.S. Census Bureau is recognizing the unique challenges of conducting the census as accurately as possible in American Indian communities.

To accomplish this goal, the Census is reaching out to those communities in advance to build awareness.

This work includes coordinating closely with tribal governments to accurately count tribal populations on and off reservations.

The 2020 Census is now recruiting people from Indian Country to assist with the 2020 Census count.

You can learn more by calling 1-855-JOB-2020. The pay is very competitive, and the hours are flexible.

In the spirit of the Holidays full time tribal employees who are present and normally scheduled for a full day of work on Wednesday November 27, Tuesday December 24, and Tuesday Dec 31, are authorized for early shutdown starting at 12 p.m.
