2020 Census

The Confederated Tribes are working toward a 100 percent response rate to the 2020 U.S. Census. Last week the number was at 41 percent; then on Monday the tribal Complete Count Team reported a 79 percent response rate.

Depending on the Census cutoff date—as of Tuesday the date was not yet known—the tribes could approach the 100-percent number. This compares very favorable to the 2010 response rate of 37 percent.

Because of the Covid-19 pandemic, and the catastrophic fire season, the 2020 Tribal Census Team was able to participate in the byproxy response method.

One month into Distance Learning

A month into the 2020-21 school year, students are using the online platforms in pursuing their education. While clearly less than ideal, "Overall this is going well," said Ken Parshall, 509-J district superintendent.

Teachers and staff over the summer went through intensive training in the best use of Google Classroom and other interactive software. Meanwhile, students are studying and working their regular school schedules from home. "Having that normality in the day—students knowing what to expect from class—is helpful to everyone," Mr. Parshall said.

Students who needed a computer received one from the district at the start of the school year. An unavoidable issue has been ensuring internet access for all students. A few families in outlying areas are required on school days to drive to an area with access.

This has been an inevitable inconvenience—among others, like no team sports—during the start of a school year that is unlike any other.

Still, despite no in-class learning, there are some aspects of the Comprehensive Distance Learning that could prove to be uesful, and could carry over to normal school days when Covid-19 is gone.

A good example of this is the Community update

There were two additional cases of Covid-19 on the reservation between Friday, October 2 and Monday, October 5.

As of Tuesday of this week, there were 18 active cases of covid on the reservation. The individuals are being monitored by Warm Springs Public Health.

Since the pandemic began in March, Warm Springs IHS has conducted a total of 3,616 Covid-19 tests.

During that time on the reservation, there have been 365 positive cases. Of those:

Forty people were hospitalized, all of them are now discharged.

Nine people of the reservation community have passed away as a result of the virus, according to IHS. The state overall has seen a total of 572 covid-related deaths since March.

A reminder from Tribal Council: Tribal law requires individuals to follow the quarantine and isolation regulations.

At the Community Center on Saturday, the Burlington Northern Santa Fe Railroad, the Peacekeeper Society of Yakima; Warm Springs Emergency Response and partners distribute supplies to households of the reservation. Quanah Spencer, tribal relations director with BNSF, Dan Martinez, director of tribal Emergency Response. As many as 600 tribal households showed up for the drive-through distribution.

Relief funds for museum

The Museum at Warm Springs has received a $140,147 grant, as compensation for losses due to Covid-19. Another $53,736 went to other cultural programs of the Confederated Tribes, such as Education

The pandemic forced the museum to close for many weeks, and the essential fundraisers have not possible during the pandemic.

The Oregon Cultural Trust announced the grants last week. The museum at the tribes were among 261 cultural organizations in Oregon facing losses due to Covid-19.

The Coronavirus Relief Fund Cultural Support grant awards totaled $25.7 million statewide.

In Central Oregon, $998,668 went to Deschutes organizations; $271,715 to Jefferson County and the tribes; and $22,220 to Crook count organizations.

The museum is now open Tuesday through Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Safety precautions are in effect. Coming up on October 30 will be the Twenty-Seventh Annual Tribal Member Art Show.

Tuesday is last day to register to vote

Native American tribes have always practiced self-governance from time immemorial. As a legacy of this sovereignty, the Confederated Tribes of Warm Springs has the government-to-government Treaty with the United States; the tribal Constitution and By-Laws, Tribal Council and court system, enrollment criteria and jurisdictional sovereignty.

The tribal membership every three years votes in the leadership of the Confederated Tribes: This is a guaranteed right practiced and protected. For Native Americans, however, the right to participate in all federal, state and local elections has not always been a guaranty. Instead, this right had to be fought for and won—And for this reason must be practiced whenever possible. This is especially true now with the potential 'election of a lifetime' is coming up on November 3. From the electoral tribal historical perspective:

One-hundred and fifty years ago in 1870 the Fourteenth Amendment to the United States Constitution guaranteed the right to vote to all U.S. citizens regardless of race. This did not apply to Native Americans, though: It was not until 1924 when the federal government finally admitted that all Native Americans born in the United States are also citizens of the United States.

Furthermore: Even after passage of the 1924 Snyder Act, individual states were able to prevent Native American residents from voting in federal, state and local elections. A law in Arizona, for instance, prevented Native residents of that state from voting until 1948, when the law was struck down as clearly unconstitutional.

As of this printing there are six days remaining for new voters to register to vote on November 3. Change of address situations—for those already registered but who have moved and may not have received their ballot in the mail—can be addressed up until Election Day.

Fall 2020 hunting season regulations

The tribes largest hunting season—any legal weapon, buck deer—opened Saturday. General season hunts on the reservation for black bear, bull elk, bighorn sheep and mountain lion begin this fall as well.

Last year, 201 tribal hunters participated in the fall season hunts.

If you are requesting a designated tag—for elders or disabled—you still go through the request process: Submit a request online, or pick up the form, fill and submit to the Fish and Wildlife Committee—Designated hunting for deer only.

Much of the reservation lands, as well as parts of various public lands forests, are still closed due to Oregon's unprecedented wildfires. This includes parts of the Willamette, Mt. Hood and Deschutes national forests.

The hunting closure encompasses some buffer areas around the main fireline, and also includes critical big game habitat.

The closure is effective by order of the Fish and Wildlife Committee, who report directly to our Warm Springs Tribal Council. If found hunting in the closure areas, tribal members will be cited for violation of the Tribal Hunting and Trapping Code: 350.210 subsection 18.

The closure area map can be accessed on the tribes' hunting website. Or talk with the Branch of Natural Resources, 541-553-2001.

You are required to report your harvest even if you did not fill your tag: This is important data for the future of game management.

Off rez hunts

Hunters need to check with public lands where they intend to hunt for the latest on access and fire restrictions before hunting. Access can change quickly, so check back often. This information is online at:

A tribal fishery opened Monday, and end at 6 p.m. this Wednesday, October 7. The open area is all of zone 6. Allowed gear is set and drift gillnets with an 8-inch minimum mesh restriction. Allowed sales are salmon, steelhead, shad, yellow perch, bass, walleye, catfish and carp.

Lionshead fire update

The latest estimated full containment date of the Lionshead fire is October 30. Since igniting in September, the blaze has burned across more than 200,000 acres, including about 96,266 on the reservation.

Interior burning to the northeast will continue to generate smoke for the next few days, but that burning is far less intense than the extreme fire behavior seen in September.

The acreage that burned on the reservation represents millions of board feet of timber.

Tribal employees will begin developing a salvage plan later this week. On a more positive note:

"We didn't lose any structures at all," said Robert Brunoe, general manager of the tribal Branch of Natural Resources. "We were lucky," Mr. Brunoe said.

Upcoming work of firefighters will be to leave the reservation in the best condition possible, when the fire is fully extinguished. For example, an archaeologist will conduct a cultural survey of close to 60 miles of dozer line and 10 miles of handline.

Fire crews dug the lines during the suppression effort, to be followed by the rehabilitation work. Water tenders assigned to the fire will be helping the tribe with road repair and grading work.

Last weekend, monitoring crews hiked out to assess fire activity within islands of unburned vegetation in the northeastern corner of the fire, reporting it is at least 3,000 feet within the black—a fire term for previously burned ground. Areas of active burning are also being monitored in the north part of the blaze.

Also recently on the fire: Helicopters dropped water on several visible smoke spots to the southeast of Mt. Bruno.

Aviation also provided a Burned Area Emergency Response reconnaissance flight, and is coordinating with various power companies conducting infrastructure assessments.

2 charged with fraud against tribes

Two men have been charged with federal fraud crimes against the Confederated Tribes of Warm Springs. A grand jury in Portland returned a six-count indictment charging Roderick Ariwite, age 65, resident on the Fort Hall Reservation in Idaho; and Thomas Adams, 48, a resident of the Warm Springs Reservation.

The charges include conspiracy and theft/misapplication of funds from the tribal organization. The indictment charges Ariwite and Adams with conspiring to misappropriate $93,700 of tribal funds, and with five counts of substantive misappropriation of tribal

In a separate indictment, Ariwite is charged alone with Interstate Transportation of Security Taken by Fraud. This indictment alleges interstate transportation of a $23,000 check Ariwite obtained by fraud from a board member of a tribal business entity.

According to the indictments, Ariwite was chief executive officer of the Warm Springs Economic Development Corporation, known as Warm Springs Ventures.

Ventures operates as the management organization for a number tribal business interests. One of these interests is the Warm Springs Construction Enterprise.

Construction bids on and executes construction projects such as building roads and commercial buildings. Thomas Adams was manager of Warm Springs Construction, under the supervision of Ariwite, according to the U.S. Attorney's Office, District of Or-

The indictment alleges that beginning in October 2017, Ariwite and Adams created their own construction company called Warbonnet Construction Services. Thereafter, and on tribal time, while drawing tribal salaries and travel reimbursements, they engaged in work projects for Warbonnett. The indictment alleges that in one instance Ariwite and Adams used $48,900 in tribal funds to hire a subcontractor for a Warbonnet construction project.

The indictment also alleges Ariwite and Adams hired REDD, a consulting company Ariwite operated, for two projects that gave no benefit to the tribes.

Ariwite and Adams paid REDD $9,800 to create a statement of qualifications—a marketing brochure—for Warm Springs

Ariwite and Adams jointly created the statement of qualifications and they allegedly included false and fabricated information about Construction. For instance:

Most of the construction projects the statement of qualifications said Construction had worked on were in fact projects by a private construction company Ariwite and Adams worked with through Warbonnet, according to the U.S. Attorney's Office report.

Additionally, some of the supposed Construction professional staff the statement of qualifications profiled were employees of the private construction company, the report says.

Ariwite and Adams submitted the false and fabricated statement of qualifications to Construction and allegedly enriched themselves with $9,800 of tribal funds, according to the report.

Ariwite and Adams also paid

REDD $28,000 in tribal funds to create and submit to the U.S. Small Business Administration what is known as an 8(a) application. The Small Business Administration operates a business development program for small, disadvantaged businesses, and an 8(a) certification gives preferences to bid on government contracts. REDD never produced an 8(a) application. In this way, Ariwite and Adams allegedly misapplied $28,000 in tribal funds enriching themselves with these funds. The separate indictment against Ariwite alleges that in May to June 2018, Ariwite defrauded a Warm Springs Ventures board member, and transported the $23,000 fraud proceeds, in the form of a check drawn on the board member's personal bank account, from Oregon to Idaho.

The FBI investigated this case with assistance from the Warm Springs Police Department.

The case is being prosecuted by Seth D. Uram, Assistant U.S. Attorney for the District of Oregon. An indictment is only an accusation of a crime, and the defendants are presumed innocent unless and until proven guilty.

Pandemic conversation

Responding to a Pandemic: An Indigenous Perspective.

Indigenous communities in our region have been hit disproportionately hard by the Covid-19 pandemic.

Join Emily Washines, Yakama scholar, and Chuck Sams, deputy executive director of the Confederated Tribes of the Umatilla Reservation, to hear first-hand stories of the different ways tribes have responded.

This conversation will go beyond statistics and headlines to consider the daily lives of Native people as they confront what, for them, is the most recent pandemic. Presented in partnership with Sense of Place.

The talk will be at 7 p.m., October 21 on the Confluence Project Facebook page; and on Youtube. Colin Fogerty, Confluence project director.

Jail matter

In order to quell any rumors spreading in the community about the jail, the Warm Springs Tribal Correctional Facility will continue to temporarily hold individuals who are under investigation, or on a hold awaiting transport to the Wasco County Jail, in The Dalles.

The Warm Springs Tribal Correctional Facility has not been condemned, but our function has been limited due to multiple maintenance issues that are the responsibility of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, and that need to be addressed in the general housing areas to regain full function.

The inmates being lodged in the facility will not be placed in an environment that would be detrimental to their well-being, and are supervised by Corrections officers. We want to assure the public that the jail was not closed due to inmates committing suicide, or the facility being fundamentally unsafe.

The Warm Springs Tribal Corrections Facility will continue to serve the Warm Springs community in a professional manner, with the public safety in mind.

LET'S STAY STRONG AND HEALTHY TOGETHER

A background on law voiding the 1865 document

Congress has now passed a bill that would recognize the 'treaty of 1865' as a void document. This historic accomplishment has been a project of the Tribal Council and Governmental Affairs for decades now. The federal legislation is called "A law to nullify the supplemental treaty between the United States of America and the Confederated Tribes and Bands of Indians of Middle Oregon, concluded on November 15, 1865."

The following is the executive summary from tribal Governmental Affairs, introducing the research that helped bring about the recent Congressional action to officially void the 1865 document:

On June 25, 1855 the Tribes and Bands of Middle Oregon, who lived along the Columbia River and its tributaries, signed a Treaty with the United States establishing the Warm Springs Reservation. The Treaty required the Tribes to move to the Reservation and cede to the United States title to 10 million acres of their aboriginal homeland. However, in the Treaty the Tribes reserved off-reservation fishing, hunting and gathering rights which were essential to their survival and without which the Indians would not have agreed to move to the Reservation.

Ten years later an unscrupulous Indian agent by the name of Huntington fraudulently obtained a "supplemental treaty" with a small number of the Indians which purported to relinquish off-reservation rights secured by the 1855 Treaty, and to confine the Indians to the Reservation.

Tribal members would be subject to punishment if they left the Reservation without the written permission of the government.

Courtesy the National Archives

From its inception the purported 1865 treaty has been recognized as a fraud by both the Indians and the United States, and neither party has ever recognized or enforced it. For the last 165 years tribal members have exercised their 1855 Treaty rights to hunt, fish and gather roots and berries at their usual and accustomed stations and on unclaimed lands, in common with citizens of the United States.

The state of Oregon has not attempted to enforce the provisions of the fraudulent 1865 document, even when presented the opportunity to do so in litigation over the 1855 Treaty fishing rights.

The Tribes have always viewed this treaty as a historical stain and approached Senator Hatfield (in the 1990s) about possible legislative action to clear the record by legislative nullification of this fraud. Senator Hatfield sought to correct this injustice as the last legislative act of his Senate career, and introduced legislation to nullify the 1865 document and officially declare it of no force or effect.

Time was short and Senator Hatfield sought rapid introduction and passage of this legislation. In a move that surprised both the Tribes and Senator Hatfield, state of Oregon officials took the position, contrary to all historical evidence, that the state had in fact relied upon the fraudulent treaty in the past, and that passage of Senator Hatfield's legislation would have grave impacts on the state and its citizens. To our knowledge this was the only time that the state of Oregon sought to preserve and rely on this fraudulent document. The state's strong objections to S.2102 prevented Senator Hatfield from moving forward with the legislation.

A great deal of incomplete, misleading and false information was widely distributed by the state in its efforts to stop the legislation.

(Note: This article is the first in a series based on the 1865 document research provided by tribal Governmental Affairs. Additional note: The governor of Oregon during the time when the state opposed Sen. Hatfield's legislation was John Kitzahaber, who later resigned from office facing a criminal investigation.)

Grant to fund 2 WSPD highway safety officers

The Warm Springs Tribal Police Department in September received a federal traffic safety grant, to fund the hiring of two full-time highway safety officers.

These officers will be charged with patrolling the major roadways crossing the Warm Springs Indian Reservation, said Warm Springs Police Chief Bill Elliott

This year, there have been a number of fatal and serious non-fatal vehicle accidents on Highway 26 and other reservation roadways. One recent tragic accident took the life of a 4-year-old child.

"The Warm Springs Tribal Police Department is dedicated to providing for the public safety of all of its citizens, and those visiting or travelling through the reservation," Mr. Elliott said.

If you have Columbia fisheries law enforcement or safety concerns, please contact Columbia River Inter-Tribal Enforcement in Hood River at call 1-800-487-3474 or 541-386-6363.

Moving forward with chronic pain

by Alicia Oberholzer

Physical Therapist

W.S. Holistic Health

Twenty percent of the U.S. population lives with chronic pain, according to a report from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Persistent pain can cause frustration, exhaustion, and decreased movement tolerance. Balancing appropriate amounts of activity is difficult.

While overdoing it can lead to painful flares, being inactive can cause loss of strength and increased disability. In order to move forward, it is important to set goals and establish a pacing program geared towards living the life you desire.

Step one

Determine a meaningful activity that you feel limited from due to pain.

What brings you joy and makes you feel alive? Make a goal centered around this passion.

Example: John used to love his daily walks. He remembers a day when he would walk everywhere. This was his moving meditation, thinking time, and most consistent form of exercise.

John makes a goal that over the next two months, he will progress his walking tolerance to 30 minutes daily,

Step two

5 days per week.

Recognize your baseline. This is how long you can perform an activity comfortably. While it is normal for symptoms to vary with good days and bad days, your determined baseline should reflect an average of your tolerance.

Example: If John walks more than 20 minutes, his back pain is so severe the next day that he cannot complete his chores or run errands. If he walks for 15 minutes, he feels some soreness in his muscles from being more active but can still get through his daily activities without difficulty.

Step three

Repeat your baseline. Take your baseline activity and make it part of your daily routine. This will help your body adapt and > build tolerance to your chosen activity. While taking a day off to rest is okay, the more consistent the better.

Example: John walks 15 minutes daily for five days in a row. The mild soreness in his legs is tolerable. He looks forward to his new morning routine. On the sixth day, he decides to rest. He replaces his 15 minutes of walking with some light stretching.

Step four

Now it is time to move forward. Appropriate progressions are one of the most important aspects of a pacing program. Research suggests that increasing activity by 10 percent per week is a safe and effective way to challenge the body and advance towards your goals.

days; If the child or staff has symptoms of diarrhea, vomiting, headache, sore throat or rash; If the child or staff member has been exposed to someone with a current presumptive or positive Covid-19 case; If a child or staff member develops these symptoms while at the facility, or learns they have been exposed to a positive case while at the facility; and If a child or staff member has a household member with symptoms of Covid-19 that is not confirmed or preseumptive.

The Yakama Nation has been battling Yakima County and Granite Northwest, which seeks to expand its gravel mine from 26 acres to more than 160.

Yakima County officials have twice approved the expansion, which the Yakama Nation appealed twice and then sued the county and the mining company in

The case could spend several more years in court because of the complexity and cutting edge nature of the cultural resource protection laws being debated, said Ethan Jones, the Yakama Nation's attorney in the case.

The case dates back years before the lawsuit. In 2015, the Washington state Department of Archaeology and Historic Preservation notified Yakima County that the area contained talus pits and human burials, which Granite Northwest's contracted archaeologist also recognized.

Based on three visits to the site, in 2000, 2008 and 2016, the contractor testified that a biface fragment and two flakes—prehistoric tools—had been found in the quarry and later lost during excavation.

"This is a groundbreaking case of sorts, and because it's groundbreaking, we don't have 40 other cases to point to where they've already made these arguments and been successful," Jones said.
