

Community update

On Monday of this week, the Indian Health Service reported 12 new cases of Covid-19, from 70 tests conducted on Friday.

There were 29 people with reported active covid on the reservation, and 55 close contacts receiving daily monitoring.

- As of Monday, IHS has conducted 15,910 covid tests. Of the total, 1,063 have come back positive.

- An additional 151 positive tests of tribal members have come from outside facilities, for a total of 1,214 cases of Covid-19 among the tribal community since the pandemic began. Anyone who wants a Covid-19 test can go to the front gate at the clinic and get tested.

Vaccinations

If you haven't already been vaccinated, please get the vaccine: Vaccines are saving lives and they are keeping people out of the hospital.

Vaccinations are the primary way to bring the covid pandemic under control.

- Warm Springs IHS has given 3,009 primary doses of the covid vaccine. IHS has given another 2,544 secondary doses. People who qualify are now receiving their third, or booster dose.

- Nineteen young people of the community, between the ages of 5-11, have received the covid vaccine.

Vaccinations for young people are based on recommendations by the Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices, the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, and the Western States Scientific Safety Review Workgroup.

You can call to schedule a vaccination anytime at the Warm Springs Health and Wellness Center at 541-553-2131.

Precautions

Community members are asked to please use all covid precautions, as approved by Tribal Council upon recommendation of the Response Team:

Wear a face mask and maintaining distance from anyone you do not live with. Understandably, this is especially challenging to use those protocols when interacting with family and friends.

If you have covid symptoms, or if you have tested positive:

Stay home and avoid others. Don't go to the grocery store, the casino, the longhouse or work.

Do not go to sporting events or school activities, birthday parties or meetings. Stay away from celebrations, funerals and any public areas.

Hospitalizations

St. Charles Health Systems hospitals are at 86.7 percent occupancy.

The St. Charles intensive care unit is at 75 percent occupancy.

There are 48 St. Charles patients with covid 19, and nine people are in the ICU with covid.

(Covid case demographics for the tribal community are on page 3 of this publication.)

New infrastructure law to help with water system

The $1.2 trillion federal infrastructure law, approved this week, includes funding for tribal water systems.

The law includes $1 billion specifically for Oregon. And of that amount, $250 million is targeted for drinking water improvements for tribal communities of the state.

The Oregon federal legislative delegation sponsored this aspect of the legislation, in large part because of the situation on the Warm Springs Reservation, though other tribal communities are in similar circumstances.

Last summer especially, as Covid-19 was still a new and less understood illness, the tribes faced a prolonged water crisis. There was a boil-water requirement for several months, and some instances of no water at all for a number of residents. This past summer saw another boil-water situation, though not as prolonged.

Some of the infrastructure funding will be used for near-term projects. Larger needs, such as a new treatment plant to replace the current one, will take some years to complete. Still, with funding in place there is the real chance that some solution is at hand.

Passage of the bill now allows

Utilities and Council to plan for an overhaul that may eventually cost tens of millions of dollars.

Another aspect of the infrastructure law is $65 billion that will go toward connecting rural parts of the country to broadband internet: $100 million is for Oregon's rural communities, like the reservation. This too has become a priority since covid began, as schools have developed more online learning options.

District bond will add new Academy classrooms

The Warm Springs Academy will have new classrooms following the recent passage of a school district 509-J bond measure.

Of the total $24 million in the bond, $4 million goes to projects at the Academy. Along with the six new early learning classrooms, the bond will also fund a new key-access, safety control system at the Academy.

At the various schools of the district, the bond will address health, safety and security matters.

At the Bridges High School, $935,000 goes to four new classrooms, gym floor improvements and new flooring on the lower level.

Madras High School work will include a new roof and insulation; upgrades to the Career and Technical Education area; heating, cooling and ventilation improvements; a new soccer concession and restroom area, and facility and field lights. This is the first school district bond measure since 2012. That bond paid for half of the construction of the Warm Springs Academy, as the tribes funded the other half.

Extra help with EMS at W.S. Fire and Safety

As some of you may have noticed, there are some new faces in town. Warm Springs Fire and Safety has been experiencing an all time low in staffing.

We reached out to FEMA—the Federal Emergency Management Agency—for help, and were able to get a group of contracted emergency medical technicians, EMTs, and paramedics from Favorite Healthcare Staffing.

They are a wonderful group of people who are well trained and professional and are here to do whatever we need. This help is, however, temporary. We have them until November 22 with a possibility of an extension. An extension for some of the Favorite staff could be into January.

We are working to get some permanent people hired, but it is tough right now.

And keep in mind, only a few of the temporary people have any fire training. So we need to be extra careful and strict on preventing fires. It's getting cold now and I know all those wood stoves, space heaters and furnaces are firing up.

Please make sure your chimneys are cleaned and that were keeping things away from those heat sources.

We have done our best to try to orientate the new Favorite Healthcare staff, but keep in mind only one of the 12 has ever been to Oregon. We have people from Florida, Tennessee, Texas, and Georgia to name a few.

I am asking that the community welcome these medics and be patient with them while they are learning our culture and our reservation.

There are several factors that created this dilemma, one being an overall shortage in healthcare workers.

Covid also put a halt to several programs around the nation, making it difficult for students to complete their training.

Hospitals were put on lockdown, making it impossible for students to get the clinical time that's required. Also, overall numbers for these programs were reduced in both 2020 and 2021.

On the other hand, covid created many other jobs, because other ambulance and health care companies were getting busier. These other jobs were paying outrageous wages, and some offered signing bonuses that we could not compete with.

Academy: ‘A thank-you to district voters’

The 2012 measure also funded the Madras Performing Arts Center at the high school.

The overall bond vote this month was 1,870 in favor; and 1,341 against.

For taxable property of the district, the approved bond measure is not estimated to increase the current tax rate due to savings from refinancing previously issued bonds and old bonds retiring.

In addition to the $24 million voter bond, the district has qualified for a $4 million matching grant from the Oregon Schools Capital Improvement Matching program.

A thank-you goes to voters of the Jefferson County School District, said district board chairwoman Laurie Danzuka.

“This is a critical moment for the future of our district and for our students,” Ms. Danzuka said.

“The district will now be able to improve the health, safety and security for all students. We are beyond grateful for our community for believing in this bond measure and supporting our current and future students.”

“This bond measure will allow the district to make critical health and safety improvements and upgrades to all of our schools,” said school district superintendent Jay Mathisen.

“It will truly allow our students to flourish in 509J and get better every day.”

He added, the $24 million bond measure will allow the school district to protect the community’s investment by improving the health, safety, and security in all of the district’s buildings, repairing and updating aging facilities and expanding vocational and early learning opportunities.

The bond will also allow the district to make much needed improvements at the Madras High School Soccer Fields. The district will soon be releasing information about the Citizen Oversight Committee in the coming weeks.

The committee is an independent, volunteer, citizen-led committee established to oversee the use of bond funds.

Jefferson County School District will plan to issue bonds in early 2022 with bond projects estimated to begin in the summer of 2022.

The Good Road for students

The Good Road programs at Central Oregon Community College are college-prep courses offered at Madras High School that prepare Native American students for success in high school, college and beyond.

Each class allows students to earn a college credit. Through the curriculum, the Good Road I and II emphasizes academic success strategies, leadership development and cultural knowledge and pride. The classes also introduce students to college resources, scholarship writing and financial literacy for success in college or wherever their paths may lead.

The goal of the Good Road is to encourage Native American youth to graduate from high school and pursue higher education, and ultimately, obtain a rewarding career and contribute to the community. Students come out of the Good Road with confidence to succeed in the college setting, COCC notes.

The programs offer a hands-on curriculum that integrates leadership, college preparation and culturally-relevant themes for Native American students.

Personal responsibility: By completing written assignments, group work, and research projects, students learn to be responsible for themselves and become aware of their role as individuals in a group environment.

Scholarship writing and financial literacy: Students learn how to develop a personal narrative, apply for scholarships and become familiar with the financial aid process.

Cultural pride: Through hands-on projects and culturally-relevant programming, students are encouraged to celebrate and explore their heritage and take pride in what they have to offer as Native students.

Students who complete the Good Road I are eligible to participate in the Good Road II, earning both high school and college credit. Students are also encouraged to participate in STRIVE on the COCC Bend campus during the summer.

Roadway work continues

The Highway 26 Safety Corridor project is scheduled for completion at the end of this month.

The project began about nine months ago, in March, while November 30 is the target date for completion.

The Warm Springs Construction Route 3 project will go into the early part of next year, with the paving being a large part remaining for completion.

Regarding the Highway 26 project: The completion day at the end of the month will mark the successful conclusion to a project that Tribal Council and state officials began planning more than three years ago. A year delay, last year, happend because of covid.

The features are the extended roadway paving from above the Kah-Nee-Ta Junction for eight miles through Warm Springs to milepost 111.2; and the safety pedestrian pathway, now mostly complete. A rock-fall mitigation aspect is still going on along the hillside by The Eagle Crossing Restaurant.

The Highway through Warm Springs sees a traffic volume in the range of 6,700 vehicles per day. The pedestrian pathway was an essential addition to the community.

Wet fall in region so far

The Northwest, including the reservation and Central Oregon region, is seeing above average rainfall this month. More rain showers are forecast for this Thursday and Friday.

Bringing all of the rain to the Northwest are “atmospheric rivers,” extending from Washington State to California.

In some areas this is causing debris flows, heavy mountain snows and mudslides.

Flood watches have been in effect west of the Cascades.

The National Oceanic Atmospheric Administration is predicting a stormy winter across the northern U.S., and mild, dry weather elsewhere.

Region posts highest covid rate in the state of Oregon

The three counties of Central Oregon, as of late October, had the highest rate of new Covid-19 infections in the state.

The Oregon Health Authority report lists the total number of cases, the cases per 100,000 residents and positive test rates of all counties with a population over 2,000.

A key indicator is the per capita number—the rate of cases per 100,000 residents—allowing for a comparison between counties of different sizes.

At the end of October, Jefferson County had the highest per capita: 542 new cases per 100,000 people.

Crook County had 469 new cases per 100,000 people; and Deschutes County 401 new cases per 100,000 people.

For comparison: The statewide rate was 192 cases per 100,000 people.

Sherman County—the state’s second least populous county—had a rate of 791 cases per 100,000.

Since late June, the delta variant drove infections, hospitalizations and deaths to new records for the pandemic that first reached Oregon in February 2020.

The Oregon Health Authority reported the variant attacked the unvaccinated. While breakthrough cases of Covid-19 have risen somewhat during the spike, those who have received immunization account for less than 5 percent of cases requiring hospitalization and under 1 percent of deaths.

The spike peaked just after Labor Day and then began a steep drop, but at a rate slower than public health officials had initially forecasted.

The Deschutes County numbers in the risk report issued Monday are significant in that they are so high for a county with a large population. The 2020 U.S. Census put the population at 198,253.

While the per-capita rates are higher in Jefferson and Crook counties, both are in decline. Deschutes County cases were rising.

All three Central Oregon counties have test positivity rates above 10 percent over the past week—twice the rate that state officials have said can be controlled by public health measures.

The state average was 7.3 percent, but falling.

Diane Pittock Perkins ~ 1942-2021

Diane Pittock Perkins passed peacefully at her home in Fairbanks, Alaska, on October 27, 2021. She overcame two tumor surgeries in her 70s and was lively until recent months, when her heart started to fail. The family is very grateful to Fairbanks Memorial Hospital and especially the hospice care she received in her last weeks.

Diane was born February 19, 1942, in Portland. She graduated from Portland’s Lincoln High School in 1960, where she starred in tennis and golf. Always active and adventurous, she raced and rallied sports cars as a member of the Cascade Sports Car Club.

She worked for Joie Smith’s Ski Shop and Alpine Towing in Rhododendron, where Diane participated in mountain rescues and assistance by road and horseback. While working in the Cascades, Diane was given the honorable position of dog sitter for Timberline Lodge’s famous St. Bernards. Additionally, her beloved dog Kosi was a gift from the Warm Springs Reservation.

The Warm Springs tribe also let her participate in tribal fishing near Celilo Falls, a great honor for someone who was not a member of the tribe. Diane will be greatly missed by all who knew and loved her.

Community covid demographics

Since the covid pandemic began in the spring of 2020, a total of 27 members of the tribal community have passed away due to the illness, according to the latest Community Health demographics report.

Ninety-one people have been hospitalized with covid. At the time of the recent report, November 10, there were no hospitalization due to covid.

The most recent covid death was on November 6.

Cumulative Cases

Portland IHS Area sees lowest covid percent

The national office of the Indian Health Services updated its coronavirus data through November 9: According to the data, 277,984 tests have returned positive for Covid-19 across U.S. Indian Country.

That represents an increase of 0.8 percent from the number of IHS diagnosed cases from the two days before.

Altogether, IHS has conducted 3,291,974 coronavirus tests across all of Indian Country. That represents an increase of 0.7 percent from two days prior.

Since mid-October of 2020, the IHS has been providing additional information about the spread of the coronavirus within the system.

These numbers represent the totals since the pandemic began last year.

Based on the cumulative percent positive, the highest rates have been seen in five areas. Two of them include the state of Arizona, indicating a disproportionate toll of Covid-19 in the state. The high numbers are as follows:

Navajo Area, 13.7 positivity percentage rate. The Phoenix Area, 12.6 percent.

The Oklahoma City Area, 12.3 percent. The California Area, 10.3 percent. The Albuquerque Area, 9.7 percent.

The seven-day rolling average positivity column offers a more contemporary look at the impact of the coronavirus. The data shows where covid cases have been increasing recently.

Based on the seven-day rolling average positivity, all 12 IHS areas are seeing high covid rates, marking yet another instance of surges across every region of Indian Country. The numbers by IHS area are as follows:

The Albuquerque Area, 14.7 percent. Navajo Area, 14.3 percent. The Bemidji Area, 14.3 percent.

Tucson Area, 13.9 percent. Phoenix Area, 9.6 percent. The Great Plains Area, 8.8 percent.

Billings Area, 8.3 percent. Alaska Area, 7.8 percent.

California Area, 7.8 percent. Oklahoma City Area, 6.3 percent. Nashville Area, 6.1 percent. The Portland Area, 5.5 percent.

Notably, the seven-day rolling average positivity for the Alaska Area has steadily grown in recent weeks. The region recorded its highest-ever rate with the release of data in October, and the rate has stayed consistently high.

Throughout most of the pandemic, the Alaska Area had seen the lowest rate of covid cases within the IHS.

Overall, 9.0 percent of IHS tests have been positive since the onset of the pandemic, the data shows. Meanwhile, the seven-day average stands at 9.6 percent following a long period of far lower rates in the spring of 2021.

The data, however, is incomplete. While 100 percent of facilities run directly by the IHS are reporting data, only 33 percent of tribally managed facilities and 44 percent of urban Indian organizations are doing the same, the agency has said.

Oregon coastal tribes hope to bring back sea otters

More than a century ago, sea otters were hunted to near extinction along the West Coast.

The animals have been reintroduced along the Washington, British Columbia and California coasts, but an attempt to bring them back to Oregon in the early 1970s failed. A local nonprofit is advocating for another attempt.

The lives of sea otters were once intertwined with those of the coastal tribes in Oregon. But when fur traders discovered the value of the warm, waterproof pelts, a global trade led to the near extinction of the animals. Now, local Native Americans are hoping to bring them back.

Peter Hatch, a member of the Confederated Tribes of Siletz, began learning about the relationship between his people and the otters when he and his father built a boat and needed a name for it.

“My dad happened across elakha, for sea otter, in a Chinook jargon dictionary,” Mr. Hatch said.

Hatch and his father delved into the history of otters and became interested in bringing them back.

“We survived and the sea otters didn’t,” Hatch says. “That leaves us with a level of responsibility to undo the wrongs that all people, whatever their particular background—we’ve had our own small part in committing.”

His father founded the Elakha Alliance about 20 years ago to advocate for returning sea otters to Oregon. The older Hatch has passed away, but today the Alliance has the blessing of three coastal tribes. Hatch is the group’s secretary.

“It is about restoring that relationship,” he says, “about bringing back a relative.”

The Elakha Alliance has commissioned a feasibility study looking at the biology, ecology, economics and cultural impacts of reintroducing otters. An unanswered question is why the 1970 effort to move some Alaska otters to Oregon failed. But during the long years otters have been away, a shellfish industry has grown lucrative in the very waters where the otter restoration would take place.

More than 800 people in Oregon and California hold commercial permits for Dungeness crab and they employ many others who also rely on the fishery. Sea otters eat up to 15 pounds of shellfish a day, a potential conflict with the industry.

For tribal treaty rights

The U.S. government is announcing a set of memoranda from 18 federal agencies, regarding tribal treaty rights.

The memoranda of understanding are from the departments of Agriculture, Defense, Commerce, Education, Energy, Homeland Security, Housing and Urban Development, Interior, Justice, Labor, Transportation, Veterans Affairs, State, and the Environmental Protection Agency, Office of Personnel Management, the Advisory Council on Historic Preservation and the Council on Environmental Quality.

The agencies are ordered to issue reports on their efforts to strengthen treaty protections within the next 180 days.

The following is a statement from Judith LeBlanc (Caddo), executive director of Native Organizers Alliance:

“The President’s announcement comes after a journey thousands of miles across Indian Country, and countless prayers offered from Native peoples across the nation, that the federal government do more to protect our most sacred places. Our people have spoken across Indian Country, saying enough is enough. Our sacred sites must be protected and our treaty rights upheld.”

More than 85,000 people signed a petition calling on the President to direct federal agencies to uphold the treaties and gain the consent of tribes in infrastructure and development projects.

“We urge each agency to craft a memorandum that not only respects treaty rights but acknowledges the great harm done when tribes and Native peoples are not given the opportunity to consent to projects affecting their lands, waters, and resources,” Ms. LeBlanc said.

“It is not enough to check a box to ‘consult’ with tribes with projects like dams, mines, and oil pipelines. The treaties demand that tribes give their consent to these projects. This failure of agencies to gain the free, prior, and informed consent of tribes is a violation of treaty rights and a flawed process that leads to the desecration of our sacred sites.

“For generations, the federal government has failed to follow through on its commitment to tribes. This failure has led to the destruction and desecration of our sacred lands, waters, and resources. Promises were made to our ancestors but never kept. We are hopeful that today’s announcement directing federal agencies to strengthen treaty protections is a critical step towards upholding our tribal treaty rights.”

Judge in Nevada rules against tribes trying to protect land

Two Native American tribes have failed again in their bid to persuade a federal judge in Nevada that a lithium mine planned near the Oregon line is on sacred lands where their ancestors were massacred in 1865.

U.S. District Judge Miranda Du ruled last week that additional historical accounts the tribes submitted still fall short of evidence needed to temporarily block digging.

She refused a request by the Oregon-based Burns Paiute Tribe and the Reno-Sparks Indian Colony to reconsider her earlier ruling denying their bid to block an archaeological survey.

Nevada Lithium Corporation’s construction is scheduled to begin next year about 230 miles northeast of Reno.

Court to hear case of destruction of sacred site

A federal appeals court is hearing a case of major significance to Native American tribes this week after the U.S. Federal Highway Administration bulldozed a longstanding sacred site near Mount Hood in 2008 to add a turning lane to a nearby highway.

Members of the Confederated Tribes and Bands of the Yakama Nation and the Confederated Tribes of Grande Ronde say the government broke numerous federal laws by bulldozing their sacred site, including the Religious Freedom Restoration Act, the Free Exercise Clause of the Constitution, and several environmental laws. Hereditary chiefs Wilbur Slockish and Johnny Jackson, and elder Carol Logan, alerted the federal government to their use of the site before construction began.

But their pleas fell on deaf ears, and the government destroyed the site anyway.

In response to their lawsuit, the government says it has complete authority to destroy sacred sites located on federal land, and the trial court agreed.

This week’s argument comes shortly after the Ninth Circuit heard oral argument in a similar case, Apache Stronghold v. United States.

There, the lawyer represents the Apaches whose sacred site, Chi’chil Bildagoteel, or Oak Flat, is on the brink of being obliterated by a foreign-owned copper-mining company.

In both of these cases, the destruction of the indigenous sacred site would end longstanding Native American religious practices forever.

The lawyers in the cases are asking the Ninth Circuit to protect the ability of Native Americans to continue their traditional faith practices.

Warm Springs Head Start is closed to children the week of Thanksgiving. But parent-teacher conferences will still take place.

2021-2022 CTWS Hunting Seasons

Off-Reservation and Reservation hunting regulations have been approved. Please login to tribal website <https://hunting.warmsprings-nsn.gov/login> or order by email (wildlife.tags@ctwsbnr.org) or phone (5415532001) permits requested by phone come by Natural Resources office to pick up your permits and regulations.

Please take advantage of off reservation hunting tags, these opportunities take hunting pressure off the Reservation due to fire closures, which help improve wildlife populations. Please make sure off reservation hunting takes place on public (unclaimed) lands. It is the HUNTERS' responsibility to know where they are hunting, where they are allowed to hunt, what weapons they are allowed to use and what the bag limit is. For questions regarding hunting please contact the Natural Resources Department at 541-553-2001.

ON RESERVATION HUNTING
NO DESIGNATED HUNTERS OR TRANSFER OF TAGS IS ALLOWED.
Reservation Hunt	Open Season	Bag Limit/Regulations
Buck Deer	Oct. 2 – 17	Open to buck deer with visible antler. One tag per lead hunter or head of household. Limit of only one (1) buck deer.
Bull Elk	Nov. 13 – 28	Open to bull elk with visible antler. One tag per lead hunter or head of household. Limit of only one (1) bull ek.
Bighorn Ram: (2 tags)	Oct. 2 – Nov. 28	One bighorn per tag. Tags will be awarded to 3 Tribal members through a public drawing.

Black bear	Sept. 1 - Dec. 31
Cougar	Open season
		Either sex; excluding cubs less than one year & sows with cubs.
		Either sex; excluding spotted kittens or female cougars with spotted kittens.

Off-reservation hunting is designated for OFF-RESERVATION public open and unclaimed lands (USFS, BLM, & State Lands w/ hunts open in common with tribes). Illegally harvesting wildlife on the Reservation using off reservation tags or harvesting the wrong sex can have great long-term negative impacts to the Tribes wildlife populations. Overharvesting wildlife and illegally harvesting females reduces wildlife population numbers for multiple generations. Please help protect the Tribes wildlife resources by reporting poaching violations to 541-553-2033 or 541-553-1171.

Cougar	Open Season	Either sex; excluding spotted kittens or female cougars with spotted kittens.

There is mandatory reporting of all hunter harvest. Failure to report harvest results for off reservation and reservation hunts will result in a loss of hunting privileges for subsequent tags. Please be honest with your hunter reporting! If you are issued a tag, you have the right to hunt and harvest an animal. Harvest and hunting information are important for the wildlife department in determining wildlife population sizes, herd compositions and hunting pressure. In addition, this information helps us determine where there are and are not animals, which helps focus our habitat restoration efforts on the Reservation. Your continued support and participation with hunter reporting are greatly appreciated. Thank you for your participation!

North Unit looking at possibly using Lake Billy Chinook for irrigation water Lake Billy Chinook between Jefferson County and the Warm Springs Reservation.

Farmers in the county have contended for years with persistent drought.

As a possible solution, the North Unit Irrigation District is studying possibly using water from Lake Billy Chinook.

The proposal would draw water from the lake from April 1 through October.

This year North Unit ran out of water in August. By then the source of water, Wickiup Reservoir in Deschutes County, was virtually dry.

Farmers in Jefferson County at times had to leave parts of their land vacant due to the water shortage.

Lake Billy Chinook could be a sustainable source for farmers, according to the irrigation district study. The district is also assessing whether use of the lake water could provide environmental benefits.

A pumping project from the lake would, however, be expensive: An initial estimate puts the price around $400 million to $500 million, not including ongoing operation and maintenance.

Due to the cost and scale of the project, the federal government would have to be a source of funding.

Interesting history notes

The Wickiup reservoir covers an area on the Deschutes River that was known as the Wickiups. It was a camping area for Native Americans during the fall.

Billy Chinook was a chief and member of the Wasco tribe.

Among other details of his interesting life, Billy Chinook was a guide for John C. Frémont and Kit Carson, who explored Central Oregon from 1843 to 1844, and from 1845 to 1847. Mr. Chinook also served as First Sergeant, U.S. Army Wasco Scouts during the Snake War.

ested state with limited resources to battle major blazes. While the insurance coverage runs from April to April, Gersbach said all but a fraction of fires and costs occur between late spring and mid-autumn.

Senator urges fishery disaster declaration

Oregon's U.S. legislative delegation is urging the Department of Commerce to grant a catastrophic regional fishery disaster declaration for the state of Oregon, after three consecutive years of drought and changing ocean conditions have severely harmed salmon populations in the Pacific Northwest.

U.S. Senator Jeff Merkley is leading members of the Oregon delegation, including U.S. Senator Ron Wyden and U.S. Representatives Peter DeFazio, Kurt Schrader and Suzanne Bonamici.

"The value of salmon to Oregon cannot be overstated. In addition to the economic activity generated by this industry, salmon are an important part of the cultural heritage of Pacific Northwest tribes, generate recreational activity, and are a treasured natural resource across the state," the lawmakers wrote in a letter to Secretary of Commerce Gina M. Raimondo.

"However, the challenging impacts of climate change, increased drought, and changing ocean conditions complicate the recovery of salmon populations in the Pacific Northwest."

From 2013 to 2017, the commercial value of Chinook salmon was around $6.3 million annually for Oregon fisheries. But with the impacts of climate chaos impacting salmon populations, the economic value has dropped precipitously—down to $2.3 million in 2018, $2 million in 2019, and $1.4 million in 2020.

"Federal support for this industry is critical while local, state, and federal partners continue to work toward long-term solutions," the delegation wrote.

Controversial water deal at The Dalles

The Dalles City Council has approved an agreement to deliver an undisclosed amount of groundwater to Google, which plans to build new data centers in the city.

With the city's unanimous vote, the tech giant has secured another key piece of its plan to expand its operation in the Columbia River Gorge. The city and Wasco County in October approved a separate agreement to significantly reduce property taxes on new Google developments.

The agreements have been the subject of rigorous debate in recent months. The water deal in particular has drawn intense scrutiny from public officials and area residents seeking to protect an increasingly precious resource.

City officials have refused to reveal how much water Google is requesting for the proposed data centers, which has been the primary frustration for area residents.

The company considers water use at its facilities a proprietary trade secret and forbids disclosure.

Why does Google need so much water?

Google built its first data center in The Dalles back in 2005. It was the company's first big corporate data center anywhere and Oregon's first, too.

Since then, Facebook, Apple and Amazon have all built large data centers in rural parts of the state, and Google has expanded.

Data centers are very resource intensive, typically using as much electricity as a small town to power their computers and substantial volumes of water to keep the computers cool.

Google says it may build two more data centers in The Dalles, but it needs more water. The company won't say just how much more, but the city is near its maximum capacity of 10 million gallons a day.

So Google has offered to pay $28.5 million to upgrade the city's water system, increasing capacity by about 50 percent.

Google and the city say that would be enough to meet the company's needs with additional water left over for other users.

No organized opposition has emerged to the city's agreement with Google, but rural property owners, farms and environmentalists have all expressed concern about committing water to an industrial customer during a prolonged drought.

Rare wildfire insurance claim

Oregon will likely file a claim on its one-of-a-kind wildfire insurance policy with Lloyd's of London.

The claim could be an estimated $19 million claim, according to the Oregon Department of Forestry.

The policy with the 335-year-old British risk insurance pool will help pay for fighting fires that burned 225,007 of the 16 million acres protected by ODF.

ODF has purchased the insurance since 1973 as a hedge against firefighting costs that could overwhelm the budget of a heavily for-

Road work for meadow restoration

The Branch of Natural Resources is working on an erosion control project at the Log Springs Meadow.

This is a large multi-phase project, and important to prevent erosion and sediment build-up that damages salmon and steelhead habitat downstream in Beaver Creek.

"I'm sure the fleet of trucks and large stockpile of rock has raised some questions as to what is happening on the 410 Road," said Scott Turo, habitat manager with Natural Resources.

"In support of the Log Springs Meadow Restoration project, the 410 Road will be graded from Highway 26 to BIA Route 3 to safely and efficiently transport heavy equipment to the meadow, as well as approximately 21,000 tons of crushed rock."

Over the past two years, the Log Springs Meadow Restoration team has been working with Edward Heath and Jay Suppah of the Branch of Natural Resources Roads Department.

They have identified certain areas that will be receiving the crushed rock to improve drainage and protect some culverts.

In total there are 14 areas that will have rock imported to cover exposed culverts, improve drainage, and improve water quality in runoff areas.

Of the approximately 12 miles of the 410 Road, less than 2,000 feet will be rocked with approximately 250 cubic yards of material. The rest will remain as a native surface, seasonal road system.

The rock being hauled by the contractor will be stockpiled at the staging area at Log Springs Meadow to be used in the upcoming restoration work.

Recent wet weather has created unfavorable conditions to complete this phase of the project.

The contractor will winterize the project site to prevent further erosion and work will resume when conditions allow in the spring.

A new woodcutting map is available at the Forestry main office. For anyone cutting firewood, please be aware that much of the burned areas are off limits for cutting; however, the Timber Committee has opened a few locations in the closed fire area.
