$7.5 million for new affordable housing

The Warm Springs Housing Authority just received a $7.5 million grant for new housing on the reservation.

The award comes following a highly competitive grant application process. Warm Springs Housing is the only tribal organization in Oregon, and one of only 22 across the nation to receive one of the Competitive Indian Housing Block Grant awards.

The grant provides funding to build ten new single-family homes on 7.5 acres of trust land located on the reservation, on Kalama Lane.

The affordable homes will be for low-income families.

All housing units will be four- or five-bedrooms to accommodate larger families.

The new housing development will include infrastructure and roads.

Warm Springs Housing will also mitigate the threat of climate change by constructing units that are resistant to fire, extreme heat, and drought. This project is expected to be completed no later than July of 2028, said Housing executive director Danielle Wood.

Warm Springs Housing is committed to addressing the critical housing needs of the tribal community. “We have a housing shortage, which is resulting in many families living in overcrowded and substandard conditions,” Ms. Wood said.

“Being able to provide an additional 10 new larger homes for larger families will help reduce overcrowding and increase the amount of affordable housing available for low-income families on the reservation,” she said.

“This grant is a true opportunity for 10 of our families to finally be able to enjoy a home of their own. I can’t wait see families moved in and children playing in their own yards.” Ms. Wood said.

She credits the boundless efforts of U.S. Senators Ron Wyden and Jeff Merkley, who have helped secure funding to provide safe and affordable housing for low-income families living on the Warm Springs Reservation.

One of the biggest challenges facing Warm Springs is low housing stock which results in overcrowding and leads to substandard housing. These senators are listening and working to help overcome these challenges, Danielle said.

Community liaison ready for new school year

Madras High School is among the most important parts of the Warm Springs tribal community. “I want our students to feel proud to be here, to feel at home,” says Mariah Stacona Alexander, the school Native American Community Liaison. “And I think we’re moving in the right direction.”

As liaison, “The sole reason I’m here is to help the students, I work for them,” Mariah says. “So my job is different for each student. My goal is to do anything to help each one succeed, to push them in the right direction.”

Her own experiences in life make Mariah a perfect person for the job. Her childhood was not easy, growing up one of 11 children in a single-parent household, doing what they needed to pay the bills and get by. As a teenager Mariah went to Madras High School, learning and studying, while excelling at her favorite sport, basketball.

Graduating in 2015, she went to Northwest University in Kirkland, Washington on a full basketball scholarship, graduating from there in 2019 with a degree in Business Administration. Then two years ago she moved back to Central Oregon to be around family, as she and husband Heath were expecting their first child Anirah, now 2, joined last year by Sophia, age 1.

Because of her experience growing up and going to school here, Mariah connects and talks easily with students who may be having some hard time at home, at school, or with some part of life in general.

“I didn’t have a perfect life growing up but it could have been worse,” she says. “Now, I want to be a person who can make a difference in a kid’s life. If a student is in trouble or making a bad choice, I want to help them change that, to say ‘This is what’s going to happen if you go down that path. Let’s change that so you have a better life for yourself, and your family.’”

Native American students from the reservation do face some unique challenges at the high school, if only because of the commute to and from reservation. In terms of ethnicity, the school is about one-third Native American, a third Latino and one-third White, approximately. At the high school when it comes to racial or ethnic groups, “We’re all in the same classes, on the same sports teams, and I think the students here get along here,” Mariah says. “That’s very nice to see.”

Her office is in the new Madras High School Native American Student Lounge, an open and comfortable space where the Native students can feel at home while they study, visit or take part in any number learning programs. The furniture in the room is very nice—this was a primary goal in choosing the couches, chairs and tables, Mariah says—and there are four new computers available to the students.

Important health and safety message

Of the drug overdose emergency calls made to the Warm Springs Police Department over the last five years, 92 percent have been related to fentanyl use. Another 14 percent were related to other prescription or non-prescription medications.

And Warm Springs law enforcement and leadership are concerned that the fentanyl epidemic—a national and international problem—continues to escalate in the tribal community.

Tribal law enforcement and leadership urge the community to increase the awareness of the synthetic drug fentanyl, and the toll it is taking on the tribal people, families and the community as a whole.

Fentanyl is a synthetic opioid up to 50 times stronger than heroin, and up to 100 times stronger than morphine, easily leading overdose.

It is the major contributor to fatal and non-fatal overdoses in the U.S.: According to the Centers for Disease Control, many of the most recent cases of fentanyl-related overdose are linked to illicitly manufactured fentanyl, distributed through illegal drug markets.

Jaycelene Brisbois is the Opioid Prevention Coordinator with the Warm Springs Prevention Team.

The manner of drug abuse, weather with alcohol, meth or opioids, can be seen as related one to the other, Ms. Brisbois said.

“A person can be on meth for so long that the high is just not getting them high anymore, so they look for something else.

“They resort to heroin, fentanyl and pain medication,” Jaycelene says. “They resort to smoking pills and injecting pills, anything to find the high.”

With fentanyl being sold illegally, and with more drugs being laced with fentanyl, the drug is now widely used, and at the same time the most deadly. A few grains of fentanyl can kill you, and there is no way to know what is in street drugs.

Warm Springs Police encourage everyone to stay informed: Educate yourself and your family about the risks of fentanyl, and the very likely risk of overdose.

Learn to recognize overdose signs, and how to respond.

Jaycelene and the Warm Springs Prevention Team have educational information available.

Every Wednesday the team offers training on how to use Narcan, a emergency treatment, easy to administer, that can save someone’s life, if the person overdoses on opioids.

To learn more, contact Jaycelene at the Prevention Team, located in the former Warm Springs elementary gym building.

Please see page 7 for a message about the crisis from the Warm Springs Police Department, Public Safety, and the Health and Human Services Branch and departments.

School BBQ

The Warm Springs Back to School Barbecue happened Thursday, August 31 at the Warm Springs Academy. Despite rain and two power outages, the cooks and servers provided over 800 plates of food to the many who showed up; and families and students were able to gather information and swag from nearly 30 booths set up at the Family Information Fair.

Big thanks to the cooks and food servers, school staff and everyone who set up a booth, picked up trash, held a door, or were kind to someone.

The kick-off event was a huge success, as the new school year begins this week for the Jefferson County 509-J district.

The annual Back to School BBQ is sponsored by the Confederated Tribes of Warm Springs Branch of Health and Human Services.

NeighborImpact

If you have any input you would like to share with NeighborImpact, you can reach out to Dot Thurby, of Emergency Management, who maintains a NeighborImpact office here in Warm Springs. Her number is 541-777-2804; or you can email: dorotheat@neighborimpact.org port people and strengthen communities. You can learn more about their program services at: neighborimpact.org

Last week, NeighborImpact representatives heard from the Warm Springs community during a listening session at the Community Center.

They talked about issues including food box assistance, transportation to help people get the food boxes, better means of communication, and NeighborImpacts programs for weatherization and rental assistance.

The discussion included the needs for more preschool and child care options; and assistance with the application process for all program services provided by NeighborImpact.

NeighborImpact has been hosting community meetings in an effort to identify the ways they are meeting people's needs, and also hearing input on how NeighborImpact could help to fill gaps and overcome challenges for people.

Reminder: Please follow the tribes' dog ordinance

Warm Springs Public Safety has noted an increase in dog biting incidents on the reservation.

Public Safety reminds everyone that the tribes' Dog Control Ordinance No. 36 remains in effect.

Public Safety is providing the community with information about the ordinance, as necessary steps will be taken by the Warm Springs Police Department, Prosecution and Tribal Court in cases involving dog bites.

Coordinated efforts are being initiated with the Housing Authority, Fire and Safety, Fences for Fido and tribal Sanitation. Some revisions will be made but to the ordinance in the future. Meanwhile, provisions of the current ordinance apply to dog biting incidents, and enforcement continues.

It is vital that you call the Warm Springs Police dispatch for dog bites at 911, and seek emergency medical services.

Some of the important provisions of the tribes' dog control ordinance include the following: All dogs kept, harbored or maintained within the boundaries of the reservation shall be licensed—the license fee is only $1—as provided by the Tribal Court. Before any dog may be licensed, the owner shall have the animal vaccinated against rabies.

Every owner shall provide each dog under his or her control with a collar or harness to which the license and rabies vaccination tag are attached; and the dog should wear the collar when the dog is at large in the community.

No female dog in heat;

no dog of a fierce, dangerous or vicious nature; and no dog which becomes a nuisance to others when trespassing upon streets, public places, or premises of others shall be permitted to run at large, whether licensed on not.

Any person found violating any provision of the ordinance shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction shall be subject to a fine assessed in Tribal Court not to exceed $25; or 10 days imprisonment, or both.

Indigenous Peoples' Day in October

Indigenous Peoples' Day is celebrated on the second Monday of October, on October 9 this year, to honor the cultures and histories of the Native American people.

The day, as designated by the United Nations, is also celebrated across the world.

Indigenous Peoples' Day centers around reflecting on tribal roots, the stories of tragedy, perseverance and achievement.

History of the celebration

The original idea of Indigenous Peoples' Day came from the United Nations International Conference on Discrimination held in 1977.

The first U.S. state to recognize the day was South Dakota in 1989. The cities of Berkeley and Santa Cruz, California soon followed.

Passes at Mt. Hood Ski Bowl

Ski Bowl, a partner of the tribes in many ways, is honoring the October holiday with complimentary Action Passes to members of the Confederated Tribes. The passes will be good on Sunday, October 1.

The day was formerly known as Columbus Day, clearly hurtful and an insult to Native American cultures, as it seemed to celebrate centuries of colonial torture, oppression and broken promises.

Year by year over the past few decades, the movement to change Columbus Day to Indigenous Peoples' Day spreads to more and more states, towns, and cities across the United States of America.

Today, 14 U.S. states and the District of Columbia, many cities and of course the tribal nations celebrate Indigenous Peoples' Day and not Columbus Day.

In Oregon

In 2021 the federal government by presidential proclamation recognized Indigenous Peoples' Day, and in the spring of 2021 the Oregon legislature also designated the second Monday in October as a holiday, Indigenous Peoples Day.

Invasive pike another threat to native fish of Columbia

Northern Pike, a non-native predator with a voracious appetite, has been found in several systems that feed the Columbia River, and while many anglers welcome them as a hard-fighting game fish, they are giving state biologists headaches.

That is because if those pike make it into the anadromous sections of the Columbia, they could do incredible damage to the already struggling salmon and steelhead runs therein.

And, they are not too far from doing just that.

According to Jesse Schultz, the Prevention Lead for the Washington Department of Fish and Wildlife's Aquatic Invasive Species Unit, the Northern Pike is the greatest current threat to native fish in the Columbia River.

They have already shown up in several systems in the upper Columbia basin. Two areas in particular worry Schultz, the Pend Oreille drainage, and Franklin D. Roosevelt Lake, the impoundment behind Grand Coulee Dam on the upper Columbia.

“Northern Pike is one of the most dangerous invasive species we have in Washington,” Schultz said. “In the Columbia River we cannot let the pike get into the anadromous part of the river.”

Walleye pose yet another risk to native fish of the Northwest

Walleye are a prized game fish across much of the Midwest and even in the lower and middle Columbia River.

But fisheries managers on the Snake River see the toothy predator as a scourge—one whose menace is ever growing as the warm-water species continues to move upstream and deeper into salmon and steelhead territory.

Walleye were found above Lower Granite Dam for the first time in 2016. This summer, anglers are reporting catching them at Heller Bar south of Asotin, deep within Hells Canyon proper at places like the mouth of Rush Creek and even in the lower Salmon River as far upstream as Twin Bridges.

It's a problem: “I think we don't view walleye as a great fishery opportunity, especially up there in what has been the most productive habitat for salmon and steelhead,” said Chris Donley, fish program manager for the Washington Department of Fish and Wildlife at Spokane.

The Snake and its undammed tributaries like the Clearwater, Salmon, Grande Ronde and Imnaha are nurseries and spawning grounds for both salmon and steelhead, and the anadromous fish are central to Native American cultures and economies.

Tribal Opiod Summit focuses on fentanyl crisis

The synthetic and deadly drug fentanyl has been a crisis and plague across Indian Country for some years now, emerging just before the covid pandemic, which only served to make the problem even worse.

In fact since 2019—the year when the Northwest Portland Area Indian Health Board first produced their Tribal Opioid Response: A National Strategic Agenda—across Indian Country by far more tribal members have died from fentanyl than from covid; and the deaths overwhelmingly have been among the younger generation.

Last month, the NW Portland Area Indian Health Board hosted the National Tribal Opioid Summit in Tulalip, Washington. More than 1,400 people were on hand for the summit, including tribal representatives from across the nation, health workers, law enforcement, federal officials including the director of the Office of National Drug Control Policy.

From Warm Springs, a team of more than 20 people participated, from Health and Human Services, Tribal Council and Public Safety. The first day of the summit was devoted to more clearly defining the problem, with testimony from people whose lives have been effected by the drug.

“There were many stories of pain and trauma, and post-traumatic stress disorder,” said Caroline Cruz, general manager of the Warm Springs tribes’ Health and Human Services Branch. As the summit continued over the next few days, the testimonials continued, demonstrating “the grieving and hurt, and the loss in Indian Country because of fentanyl,” Ms. Cruz said.

The fentanyl crisis is somewhat different from past drug epidemics—methamphetamines, for instance—that have appeared in tribal communities. The reason for this is the deadly nature of fentanyl itself, Ms. Cruz said.

The street drug is a synthetic opioid, manufactured in illegal labs, that is 50 times stronger than heroin. Fentanyl made illegally may be cut with any number of unknown substances—horse tranquilizer, for instance—that are themselves deadly. And people selling other illegal drugs may cut the other drug with fentanyl, rendering all illegal drug sales now potentially lethal transactions.

As an opioid like heroin, fentanyl is obviously addictive. However, unlike alcohol, methamphetamines or even less potent opioids, addiction to fentanyl is in many cases not even the problem, because the drug easily leads to overdose and death.

“It shuts down the body,” Ms. Cruz explained. “The brain no longer tells the body to do its functions like breathing, and the person dies. That’s what overdosing is.”

The trauma caused by fentanyl to individuals and families across Indian Country was very evident at the National Tribal Opioid Summit. After the opening day of the gathering, when people were invited to share their mostly harrowing and heart-breaking experiences, the summit agenda called for discussion of topics such as solution strategies and policy recommendations. Much of the discussion, though, continued to focus on personal past experiences, and the trauma that continues.
