

District meetings this week

The district meetings for the 2024 proposed tribal budget are starting this week. The Seekseequa meeting, at first planned for this Tuesday, was being rescheduled at press time for this publication. The Simnasho District meeting is this Wednesday evening, October 18 at the Simnasho Longhouse; and the Agency District meeting is this Thursday evening, October 19 at the Agency Longhouse.

Tribal Council posted a proposed general fund tribal budget for 2024 on the first of this month. The proposed budget has a projected increase of $2.234 million from the 2023 approved tribal budget. The change in revenue from the 2023 budget includes increases from Indian Head Casino, Power and Water Enterprises, a Kah-Nee-Ta fee, and cannabis tax. Decreases are seen in timber revenue; the American Rescue Plant Act (ARPA) revenue loss request; and from Composite Products. As stated in the budget statement:

The 2024 proposed budget will provide for the following categories: Operations, community assistance, debt service, enterprises (quasi), capital projects, and transfers to other sources for the tribal government organization.

When the Tribal Council takes action to finalize the 2024 tribal budget, proposed expenditures will not increase beyond this proposal. The Tribal government will balance the essential community needs with the revenue base, and will continue services to tribal members.

School district meeting at Academy

A public meeting of the Jefferson County School District 509-J is coming up this month in Warm Springs.

The meeting will be at the Warm Springs Academy to discuss the evaluation of current programs and plans for future educational programs. The gathering will be at 5:30 p.m. on Thursday, October 26. Dinner will be served with the meeting to follow from 6-7 p.m.

The district annually affords its patrons, specifically Native American parents and guardians, the opportunity to offer comments and make recommendations relative to the District programs, District outcomes, and offer feedback for all programs.

If anybody wishing to attend the meeting has a disability requiring assistance, please advise Tessa Bailey at 541-475-6192 about specific arrangements that may accommodate your participation in this meeting.

Clinic at 30 looking to the future

The Warm Springs Health and Wellness Center is in its thirtieth year of operation, having opened in 1993. Working with the tribes, the clinic is now looking toward a major expansion, and renovation of the existing facilities.

The expansion part of the project includes construction of a new building on the vacant area between the existing parking and Kot-Num Road. With the additional building, there will be a renovation of existing space for better efficiency of health service and patient convenience.

After three decades so far,

“We’ll be ready for the next 30 years,” said Hyllis Dauphinais, clinic chief executive officer. This work will also include a drive-through for the Pharmacy, and a separate and better delivery roadway area, so trucks and emergency vehicles avoid going through the parking lot, among the improvements.

The planning for this began a few years ago, interrupted for a time by covid. In 2021 the clinic conducted the initial public outreach, collecting community input on the proposal, regarding design and location, for instance. The project now is about 30-percent through a final design and development phase, and input is still welcome.

From the IHS Power Point on the project.

The overall plan: The top section is the pod C floor plan for specialty care, imaging and lab services. At left, pod D plan for the pharmacy. And at right pod E for primary care.

Most recently, Mr. Dauphinais has been working with Tribal Council and Land-Use toward a new 20-year lease to include the expansion site, a requirement before moving forward with final design and construction contracting.

Tribes join OSU-Cascades for Native people's celebration

Oregon State University-Cascades at the Bend campus this month recognized Indigenous Peoples Day. In part the event was to recognize the significance of the university's 'Land Acknowledgement,' the OSU statement for which says:

“Oregon State University recognizes the impact that its land grant history had on Indigenous communities in Oregon. Through the Morrill Act of 1862, which established land grant universities in the U.S., the federal government seized nearly 11 million acres of land from 250 sovereign tribal nations, with little or no compensation.

The October Indigenous People's Day events at OSU-Cascades were in partnership of the Confederated Tribes of

Turf floor for new pavilion

The new Health and Wellness pavilion is getting closer to a grand opening, with the turf flooring now installed. The pavilion, on campus by Wasco Street, is 11,520 square feet in size. The building will be ideal for many kinds of events, activities and trainings of Health and Human Services and others wishing to use the facility.

The pavilion will have electricity and lighting, a movie screen, bathroom facilities, and added nearby parking. TJ Foltz, Warm Springs Prevention manager, has been coordinating the project with the Health and Human Services Branch.

Study to look at new W.S. jail issues

An important initial question in the building of a new Warm Springs Jail will no doubt be related to infrastructure, specifically related to sewer and water at the current preferred building site.

A feasibility study considering the preferred site is under way, with the review of public comments from earlier this year. When the report is released, the team working on the plan, Tribal Council and the community will have a chance to consider the issues identified in the study.

The preferred site is at the Warm Springs industrial park, where buildings rely on septic, as there currently are no sewer connections.

The jail feasibility study will be a conclusion of a first phase of the project; and addressing the issues in the report will be an initial step in the next phase. When the issues are worked out, construction funding will be available for the project, as the Department of Interior, and Department of Facilities Management and Construction Indian Affairs Office announced in 2021.

A question may be whether or not to have the new jail connected to a wastewater system, or rely on septic.

There may be some infrastructure aspect needed for the new site, in the case of a sewer hookup for instance, that may require an additional funding source beyond the jail funding itself. Final decisions will ultimately be up to the tribes in considering the options, said Brenda Bremner, BIA Agency superintendent.

In the meantime, the tribes and BIA continue to contract with the Northern Oregon Regional Corrections Facility, or Norcor, for housing tribal inmates. This is about a 70-mile drive each way. BIA funds the housing of the Warm Springs inmates at Norcor.

Clinic: expansion and renovation

Hyllis Dauphinais/IHS

Work this year has included a new roof for the clinic.

The plan is for a ground-breaking in spring or early summer of next year, Hyllis said.

The new project will be a great improvement for the health services to the community, and all of this has been done in partnership with the tribes, Joint Health Commission and the Health and Welfare committee as IHS and the Confederated Tribes work to improve health outcomes.

As the new project moves forward, also this year the clinic has seen improvements to the existing clinic, including a new roof on the building. Meanwhile, Rusty Marcum, grounds maintenance, and Brent Graybael, facilities manager, and crew put in new and brighter LED lighting for the parking lot, with a new coat of paint on light poles. Rae Ewing, behavioral health specialist, is working with a youth group on a Zen rock garden for an area behind the clinic, yet another example of community health and wellness projects happening these days at the clinic.

Covid vaccines at clinic

The Warm Springs IHS clinic has received a limited amount of the new covid vaccine. The clinic began administering the vaccines last week.

First priorities for vaccinations at this point are elders 65 and older; and anyone with a health condition that makes the person vulnerable to serious illness from covid. Underlying health conditions include such conditions as organ transplants, immune compromised, diabetes, and cardiac disease.

As the clinic receives additional quantities, the vaccines will be available to all. This week the clinic is providing vaccines to priority individuals, as described above, during open vaccine hours: 10 a.m. to 12 noon, Monday, Tuesday, Thursday, and Friday; and also 1 to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Report critical of election districting

Close to 400 members of the Confederated Tribes of Warm Springs live in the Madras area. The members who live on the reservation are often their family members and friends. At the same time, many tribal members who live on the reservation shop in Madras, work there, go to school, etc.

The reservation and Madras share enough, from a tribal equitable voting perspective, that the two areas should vote within the same district when electing state representatives, for instance. That is the opinion of voter equity advocates like Jaylyn Suppah of the Confederated Tribes; and also the conclusion of a recent national report by the Coalition Hub for Advancing Redistricting and Grassroots Engagement, or Charge.

In 2021, the Oregon Legislature redrew the voting districts in the state. Up to that point, Warm Springs and Madras were part of the same voting district. By the new redistricting map of 2021, though, Warm Springs became part of the larger rural District 57.

Ms. Suppah advocated, at the state, and before the Affiliated Tribes of Northwest Indians, for instance, that separating the reservation from the tribal association with Madras dilutes the voting equity of the Confederated Tribes.

This same conclusion is reflected in the recent Charge ‘Report Card’ on redistricting, giving a grade to all 50 states on their voter redistricting maps.

Oregon earned a C-minus, mainly because of the tribal equity issue. To quote the report under the ‘Inadequate incorporation of feedback’ category:

“Not all advocates believed that public input was adequately incorporated into the final maps. A community organizer and member of the Confederated Tribe of Warm Springs (Jaylyn) believed that legislators tokenized tribal input rather than truly listening to it.

“For example, many pieces of public testimony stressed that, while the proposed (and final) maps technically kept tribal lands together, they split the Warm Springs Reservation from the city of Madras.

“While Madras is not within the confines of the reservation, it is a city in which many tribal community members live, shop, and go to school. Further, in the previous official map, the two were kept together.” The new Oregon redistricting map was finalized in the fall of 2021, applied in 2022, and will apply again in the General Election of 2024.

River dams and salmon

Since time immemorial, for many thousands of years, long before any European explorers set foot on the Americas, the Native American civilizations were already here, and in the Northwest salmon fishing was always a way of life. All of the river tribes’ cultures have an important First Salmon ceremony. Then in the year 1805 the Lewis and Clark expedition were at the Columbia River and documented the fast free flowing Snake River and the Indian fishers catching large numbers of salmon.

There is one stock of Chinook salmon only Native to the Snake River that is the largest run of the biggest Chinook salmon in the world. In fact, this species weighed 100 pounds each and some were over 100 pounds. In the Lewis and Clark expedition era, the rivers were natural and fast. The smolts’ down migration to the Pacific Ocean was fast and short. It took three weeks to reach the ocean, that was the natural flow way before the special interest dams and reservoirs on the Snake River.

Some dams blocked the adult salmon’s migrations up river. Some salmon stocks became extinct. Some were listed as endangered or threatened. The large number of dams on the Columbia River and on the Snake River made the rivers no longer fast. They are now slow. The slack water above the dams has caused the salmon smolts down migration to be longer. It now takes about six weeks or more instead of the original three weeks.

Another danger is predator fish like the Northern pike minnow, and transplanted predators such as bass, walleye and now regular pike and carp, which all thrive in slack water around the dams. A high percentage of smolts are killed as they pass through the many high speed turbine blades at each dam. Also they are killed by gas super saturation from the spillways. In 1981 the Snake River tributary, the Grand Ronde River stock of coho became extinct. Then in 1986 all Snake River coho became extinct.

The dams kill salmon. The four lower Snake River dams need to be breached.

tunity for coverage, this is your chance to sign up for health coverage, supplemental insurance coverage, flexible spending account, and 401K, etc.

HealthComp is the tribe’s plan administrator for health insurance. The Hartford is the supplemental insurance carrier. Allegiance is for FSA flexible spending (childcare and medical). Bok Financial manages the 401K, and RV Kuhns is the investor of 401K.

Paper enrollment forms for HealthComp and Allegiance flexible spending accounts must be returned to the Compensation and Benefits Department in order to enroll no later than November 30. Comp and Benefits manager is Lisa Lomas, and the Comp and Benefits administrator is Monica Arthur. You can email to: Comp_benefits@wstribes.org

Online enrollment is available at CTWS.EASE.Com

If you haven’t already logged in or need a password reset, please contact Comp and Benefits.

Tyler Moore works with the Confederated Tribes of Warm Springs on managing most employee benefits. He shares the following:

“One pretty significant change to the medical plan this year is that the provider network will be changing. For the past 15 years or so the Tribes have used First Choice Health Network for the provider network. Starting January 1 of 2024 they will be changing to Signa. Signa has a robust network in Central Oregon as well as the Portland area. This move will create significantly deeper discount for employees so should be a win-win for everybody. Coming up toward the first of the year – you should check and make sure your providers are part of the new network.”

This change plus more about Health Insurance, Life Insurance, Flexible Spending, 401K and more will be covered this week at the employee benefits open enrollment meetings, Wednesday through Friday.

For MHS Ag

The Jefferson County School District is developing an Agricultural Science and Technology Lab. This will offer 509-J students real world experiences in agriculture.

The Land Lab will be on 35 acres of land in Madras near the high school. The lab will allow students to engage in practical studies on soil quality, composition, nutrient content, water quality; and the identification of native, invasive, and noxious weeds and pests.

Over the next three years, the district plans to update the facilities on the property, provide accessible parking lot and restroom facilities and provide livestock housing and working facility. All while students are working to farm, irrigate, plant, fertilize, and upkeep the land.

Madras High School FFA utilized the Land Lab for a District FFA Soil Judging Competition. Nearly 70 students from multiple Oregon school districts converged to assess and judge soil samples in three different pits on the 35 acres, further showing the potential and significance of the property.

Language learning

The National Science Foundation Research Experience Site for Undergraduates at the University of Oregon Linguistics is accepting applications: The subject of study is increasing American Indian and Alaska Native perspectives in field and experimental linguistics.

The Research Experience for Undergraduates Site is an eight-week summer program fully funded by the National Science Foundation.

Students participating in the program will work closely with faculty on a hands-on research project and will receive funding for travel, on-campus housing, and a weekly stipend.

The program is hosted by the Department of Linguistics at the University of Oregon in Eugene.

Applications are due on November 15. The program begins June 10 and ends August 2, 2024. The first week is remote; the rest is in-person.

Eligibility: The program is open to students who are U.S. citizens or permanent residents; and will have completed at least their first year in college or community college. Also:

Identify as Native American-Alaska Native or have a family-cultural connection with American Indian or Alaska Native peoples. Also: Have at least one semester of undergraduate course work remaining before receiving their baccalaureate. This program has no minimum GPA requirement.

How to apply: Applicants are asked to fill out an online application form via blogs.uoregon.edu/reuling/application/

And submit the following supporting materials:

Statement of Purpose explaining why you are applying for this opportunity. Unofficial university or college transcript. Two letters of recommendation.

You may upload your submission (PDF or .doc file) or copy and paste your letter when prompted. For more information about the program, visit our website at blogs.uoregon.edu/reuling/

Columbia Treaty talks

The U.S. and Canada conducted the nineteenth round of Columbia River Treaty negotiations this month in Portland. Through these negotiations the U.S. negotiation team continues to press forward with the visions laid out by the U.S. and Canada to fulfill the vision laid out by the countries, as they note:

The Columbia River is a vital shared resource that underpins many lives and industries on both sides of the border and the watershed requires our attention and prompt coordination.

The U.S. leads a negotiating team consisting of representatives from the BPA, the Army Corps of Engineers, Department of the Interior, and NOAA. The U.S. delegation also included expert-advisors from the Coeur d’Alene Tribe, the Colville Tribes, and the Confederated Tribes of the Umatilla Indian Reservation.

The tribal government will work closely with tribal enterprises on plans to increase revenues to the tribes into the future; and understand the importance of essential services to each tribal member, and making every effort to minimize budgetary impacts on services.

Tribal employment is important and will strive to continue to bring tribal members into the organization; and will be working towards improving program and service effectiveness and efficiencies.

The proposed 2024 budget will not be finalized until tribal member input for the budget through tribal district meetings. The input is very important in the budget process for Tribal Council.

Robert A. Brunoe, Secretary-Treasurer/CEO.

$27 million claim over lamprey killed by dam work

Oregon officials are seeking more than $27 million in damages over dam repairs they say killed more than half a million Pacific lamprey fish in what they’ve described as one of the largest damages claims for illegal killing of wildlife in state history.
In a claim filed in Douglas County Circuit Court last week, the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife said that recent repairs to Winchester Dam in the southern part of the state resulted in the death of at least 550,000 juvenile Pacific lamprey, a First Food of Northwest Native American tribes. The fish is also listed as a protected species in Oregon.

“The North Umpqua River’s diverse fish populations are unique within Oregon and are of considerable social, cultural, and economic importance locally and regionally,” the Fish and Wildlife Department said in a news release. “The damages claim seeks reparation for the loss of a valuable public resource.”

The complaint was filed against the Winchester Water Control District along with TerraFirma and DOWL, companies that were contracted, respectively, for dam repairs and fish salvage operations.

U.S. to help restore sacred site destroyed by road project

The U.S. government has agreed to help restore a sacred Native American site on the slopes of Oregon’s Mount Hood that was destroyed by highway construction, court documents show, capping more than 15 years of legal battles that went all the way to the U.S. Supreme Court.
In a settlement filed with the high court Thursday, the U.S. Department of Transportation and other federal agencies agreed to replant trees and aid in efforts to rebuild an altar at a site along U.S. Highway 26 that tribes said had been used for religious purposes since time immemorial.
Members of the Confederated Tribes and Bands of the Yakama Nation and the Grand Ronde said a 2008 project to add a turn lane on the highway destroyed an area known as the Place of Big Big Trees.
The Place of the Big Trees was home to a burial ground, a historic campground, medicinal plants, old-growth Douglas Firs and a stone altar.
In court documents dating back to 2008 when the suit was filed, Carol Logan, an elder and member of the Confederated Tribes of Grand Ronde and Wilbur Slockish, who is a hereditary chief of the

Confederated Tribes and Bands of the Yakama Nation, said they visited the site for decades to pray, gather sacred plants and pay respects to their ancestors until it was demolished.

Dam removal spurs hope in Klamath Basin

By the end of next summer, four dams will be gone: the JC Boyle dam, the Copco dams 1 and 2, and the Iron Gate dam.

Their removal is both a source of hope and anxiety throughout the basin, as it will eliminate some awesome summertime whitewater and drain the reservoirs where people currently enjoy living and recreating on lakes.

But it will also reopen hundreds of miles of salmon habitat that could be a lifeline for the threatened fish that are vital to Native American cultures throughout the Klamath Basin.

It will also restore thousands of acres of land, some of which could be returned to Native American tribes such as the Shasta Indian Nation, whose members were displaced by dam construction more than 100 years ago.
