Concert Benefiting firefighters relocated to Redmond

Hosted by Indian Head Casino, ABBA tribute concert to benefit the tribes' Wildfire Recovery Fund and Thrive Central Oregon, happening in Redmond.

ABBAcadabra: The Ultimate ABBA Tribute Concert is happening this Friday, August 21 at General Duffy's Waterhole in Redmond.

The change is needed because the recent wildfires have impacted the Warm Springs community, and resulted in changes to the Indian Head Casino Summer Concert Series.

In response, Indian Head Casino and General Duffy's Waterhole have partnered to bring this fan-favorite performance to Central Oregon while providing an opportunity for the community to support local wildfire recovery efforts.

The event is this Friday with doors opening at 6 p.m. The show begins at 8. General Duffy's Waterhole is located at 404 SW Forest Avenue in Redmond.

A portion of the proceeds from the event will benefit the Confederated Tribes of Warm Springs Wildfire Recovery Fund and Thrive Central Oregon, supporting recovery and assistance efforts for individuals, families, and communities affected by recent wildfires in Warm Springs and surrounding areas.

Attendees will also have the opportunity to learn more about recovery initiatives and make additional contributions during the event.

Known for its high-energy performances and authentic tribute to one of the world's most beloved pop groups, ABBAcadabra brings the timeless hits of ABBA to life for an unforgettable evening of music, community, and giving back.

How Abby Scott became a legend, a documentary subject, and the role model her community always needed.

By James Miller, Jr.

The lights go down at the Portland Film Festival. On the screen, a young woman in a New Mexico State uniform rises above the defense, releases, and watches the ball arc through the air.

The crowd in the theater doesn't know yet what the crowd in that gymnasium already knew: that Abigail Scott, girl from the Warm Springs Reservation doesn't miss shots like that.

Not at the buzzer. Not when it matters most.

The film is called Abby Scott: A Rezball Legacy, directed and shot by LaRonn Katchia through the Filming with an Indigenous Lens Documentary Workshop—a program Katchia created with Brutis Baez to empower Native communities to tell their own stories.

Edited, colored, and sound-designed by Simone Scarpino, the film was produced by the Warm Springs Community Action Team.

By the time it reached the Portland Film Festival—after earning Official Selection honors at the Holba Pisach Native Film Festival and the NatiVisions Film Festival—audiences across the Pacific Northwest had begun to understand something that the people of Jefferson County, Oregon had known for years.

Abby Scott's story isn't just a basketball story. It's a story about what it means

Why I became an Ichishkiin teacher ~

by Regina Ricketts,
Career Counselor, Education

Lorraine Suppah is a Lead Language Teacher at the Culture and Heritage Department and has been teaching Ichishkiin since 2019. She received her BA through the 'Grow Your Own' program from George Fox University in March of 2025.

Asked why she became a Language teacher, and why she wanted to continue with her education, her answer is simple: "I was in the right place at the right time." Lorraine continues:

At the time, I was working on the SB13 project with many respected elders when the Culture & Heritage Department asked if I would be interested in applying for an Ichishkiin Language Teacher position that had just been advertised. Although I knew very little of my Ichishkiin language, the elders encouraged me to apply. They believed I could learn and grow into the role. Those elders—Atwai Arlita Rhoan, Atwai Suzie Stockish, Atwai Margaret Suppah, Atwai Orthelia Patt, and Viola Govenor—gave me the confidence to take that first step.

Once I accepted the position, I had to learn quickly because I knew only a small amount of my language. My mother, Margaret Suppah, was a fluent Ichishkiin speaker, but she chose not to teach her children our language. Growing up, she was punished for speaking Ichishkiin in school, and she did not want her children to experience the same pain. While I wish I had learned the language from her, I understand why she made that decision. Today, I consider myself a lifelong learner of Ichishkiin, and I will continue learning for the rest of my life.

I began teaching Ichishkiin seven years ago at the Warm Springs Academy. During my first two years, I taught students in kindergarten through eighth grade. The next two years, I taught fourth through eighth grades. Then I spent one year teaching kindergarten and middle school, followed by a year teaching only middle school.

Last school year, I again taught kindergarten and middle school, and this year I plan to continue teaching grades 6–8.

The elders who encouraged me to become a teacher also left me with words that continue to inspire me. I once asked them, "What do we need to do to help our children live healthy lives?"

Survey shows growing support for tribal energy projects

Nearly 150 Warm Springs community members shared their thoughts after the 2026 Tribal Community Energy Fair, with many expressing that they like where the tribe's energy work is headed, and they want to be part of it.

Warm Springs Power and Water Enterprises hosted the fair this summer. The day at the Campus Pavilion brought together neighbors with regional energy partners like 7Skyline, BrightNight, Portland General Electric, Indian Head Casino, the Warm Springs Housing Authority, the Inter-Tribal Timber Council, and many others for a day of hands-on exhibits, demonstrations, and conversation.

Here's what community members told us:

- Seven in 10 community members are very or somewhat supportive of tribal energy projects.
- 50-percent said their feelings have grown more positive, and almost no one said the opposite.
- Pelton-Round Butte, the Indian Head Casino Solar and Battery Storage project, and the Power Pathway Project were the most recognized projects.
- Lower energy bills, reliable power, and local jobs were the top benefits that respondents want these projects to deliver.

Cathy Ehli, Power and Water Enterprises general manager.

- More than 60 respondents expressed interest in the Confederated Tribes of Warm Springs Tribal Career Pathways Program, a spot at future public meetings, or a seat in a community energy focus group.

Community members shared encouraging messages including "Thank you for coming to our rez." Others called it "a great event" and said the team was "on point."

This is just the start. Power and Water Enterprises will keep the conversation going with more public meetings and continued opportunities through the Tribal Career Pathways Program. Thank you to everyone who came out, asked questions, and shared with us what matters to you.

Cathy Ehli, Power and Water Enterprises general manager.

Student success with Velocity Up!

by Regina Ricketts,
Career Counselor, Education

A new success program—called Velocity Up!—surfaced at Madras High School during the last semester. Mentored by Ms. CarlaDean Caldera, the Native American Liaison, and funded by a Bureau of Indian Education Grant, the program focuses on struggling students. The premise?

What if we paid students to achieve goals?

Various programs from kindergarten to high school have created various reward programs; some successfully, some not, while Velocity Up! was wildly successful. Students met with Ms. Caldera to work on their own self-directed goals. Their goals ranged from increasing GPAs, not being absent, getting back on the sports team, not being late, turning in all the homework and many more.

Ms. Caldera felt that since students could choose their own goals, there was a better chance of them achieving them. Plus students had to come up with a step by step plan on how they were going to achieve their goals.

Students were required to meet with Ms. Caldera twice during the semester, but what surprised her was that students just started showing up more than the requirement. They would hang out in her room and do homework or work with other students.

“ They showed wonderful initiative by coming in on their own to show their progress and their successes... ”

CarlaDean Caldera, Mentor

“They showed wonderful initiative by coming in on their own to show their progress and their successes,” CarlaDean said.

The pilot program made such a difference in how the students took control of their educational goals and produced results by getting to school—absence rate decreasing—and showing an increase in their overall grades through utilizing their study time and student support time at school, and taking care of their homework when not at school.

Twenty students signed up for the program. The only requirement was that they had to be struggling in some aspect of school. 79-percent of the students completed 100-percent of their goals, and 21-percent of the students completed 80-percent of their goals. All students completed the program and received stipend payments. The total amount of the program was $2,875 in student stipends.

When the program ended, the students were surveyed and a common theme emerged: the idea of a monetary reward kept them motivated.

One student was saving for a car, so the stipend helped him; and when he didn't feel like doing his homework, he remembered his goal of the car.

Other students shared how the incentive helped motivate them. One student was failing all his classes. Not only did he bring all his grades up, he became a regular during the study session. Students found that they had something to work for and to look forward to.

“It is great to see their successes showing on their faces as they give me updates!” Ms. Caldera says.

Velocity Up! will be back at Madras High School this fall.

Surprise honor at Shoshone-Bannock festival

Warm Springs elder Wilson Wewa, director of the Seniors program, received a surprise honor during the Ermine Cap Special earlier this month at the Shoshone-Bannock Festival at Ft. Hall.

He led the Ermine Cap Dance entrance at the beginning of the Special, only learning afterward that the gathering was in recognition of his years' of friendship, service and connection to the family and community.

Marcia Hall, with the Shoshone-Bannock Tribes Adult Protection Services, spoke about Wewa's contributions to Indian Country, including his participation in national conferences such as the annual Elder Adult Abuse Conference hosted in Fort Hall, where he has shared his knowledge and experiences with others.

Ms. Hall described Mr. Wewa as not only a friend and mentor, but family, noting his connection to her family through her grandmother.

She expressed her appreciation for Wilson and his willingness to help whenever called upon, saying he has always been someone they could count on. She also reflected on his sense of humor and the special relationships he has built over the years with the local community.

Wilson expressed his appreciation for the recognition, and spoke about the emotion of the songs, dancing and prayers shared during the special.

He also talked about the significance of the ermine cap and the honor of wearing it, saying it was the first time he had worn it in many years. He explained that the cap is mostly used during prayer, as he is a leader in the longhouse. And as Marcia mentioned, Wilson continues to look for ways to help others.

Meet our latest
to your health.

Please welcome Dr. Nathaniel Cheney and Dr. Patrick Roach, who have joined St. Charles Family Care in Madras as resident physicians for the next two years.

Nathaniel Cheney, MD

A Central Oregon native, Dr. Cheney was drawn to rural family medicine by the opportunity to provide broad-spectrum care for patients of all ages and backgrounds. Outside of work, he enjoys spending time with his wife, cooking, playing music, hiking and playing pickleball.

Patrick Roach, DO

Dr. Roach's passion for family medicine is rooted in helping strengthen the health of rural communities while caring for patients through every stage of life. He hopes to make Central Oregon his home after residency. In his free time, he enjoys spending time outdoors with his wife and children and hopes to one day own a ranch.

Abby Scott: A Rezball Legacy ~

On a February night in Scott City, Kansas, with the score tied and seconds dissolving off the clock, Abby Scott took an inbounds pass, dribbled to the corner, and drained a 20-footer at the buzzer to lift the New Mexico State Aggies to a 66-65 victory in the Classic Shoot-Out.

It was the second time in three years she had done something like this for the Aggies. The local newspaper ran her photo on the front page of the sports section under a headline that said everything and needed nothing else: ‘Great Scott.’

Great Scott

“I was really just trying to clear my mind and go up for the shot,” Abby said afterward. “I made sure to get my shot because I’ve worked on that shot that Carrie Banks has.”

Modest words from a player who was anything but ordinary. That same sophomore season, on January 16, Abby walked into a game against Chicago State and did something no player in the history of the Western Athletic Conference had ever done: she made 11 three-pointers in a single game—on 20 attempts—finishing with 36 points and 4 assists. It broke the WAC Conference record. It broke the New Mexico State program record. It earned her WAC Player of the Week honors. Two days later, still in the same week, she dropped 25 more in a win over Kansas City.

Those numbers belong in a highlight reel. What they don’t capture is where they came from.

Rezball

To understand Abby Scott, you have to understand Rezball.

Basketball on Native American reservations is more than a sport. It is ritual, identity, aspiration, and release—all compressed into 94 feet of hardwood.

On the Warm Springs Reservation, where Abby grew up as a member of the Confederated Tribes of Warm Springs, the game was woven into the fabric of daily life. You learned it young. You played it everywhere. And if you were good—really good—the whole community knew your name before you were old enough to drive.

Abby was that good.

By the time she reached Madras High School and pulled on a White Buffaloes jersey, it was already clear she was something special.

As a freshman, she was turning heads at the varsity level. By her junior year, she was averaging 12.2 points, 5.6 rebounds, 3.8 assists and 2.6 steals per game, helping lead Madras to a 21-8 record and a trip to the Oregon 4A State Semifinals—earning First Team All-Tri-Valley Conference and All-State Second Team honors in the process.

Then came her senior season. The one people in Jefferson County still talk about.

She averaged 22.4 points, 8.9 rebounds, 3.0 assists, and 3.3 steals per game. She led Madras to a 25-3 record, the Tri-Valley Conference championship, and a second consecutive Oregon 4A State Semifinals appearance.

In one February 2012 game against Seaside, she dropped 37 points. She was named Class 4A All-State First Team, Oregon State Championship Tournament First Team, and Tri-Valley Conference Player of the Year. And before the season was over, she was nominated for the McDonald’s All-American Game—one of the most prestigious recognitions in high school basketball.

ESPN’s HoopGurlz recruiting website ranked her the No. 38 wing player in the entire country. Scholarship offers arrived from Oregon State, San Diego State, SMU, Pepperdine, University of San Francisco, Santa Clara, Portland, and Utah State.

She chose New Mexico State University, signing with Coach Mark Trakh’s Aggies in the fall 2011 early signing period. Her recruiting class—Abby, Sasha Weber, and Shay Young—was ranked among the Top 20 mid-major recruiting classes in the nation by ESPN HoopGurlz.

The Aggie years

Over four seasons in Las Cruces, Abby appeared in 119 career games for New Mexico State, averaging 6.8 points, 2.1 rebounds, and 1.0 assists per game while shooting 78 percent from the free-throw line. She finished her career among the program’s all-time leaders in made three-pointers—144 career threes—ranking 8th on the all-time list when she graduated. She was ranked nationally in the top 10 percent for blocked shots and blocks per game.

She played in the NCAA Tournament twice, in 2015 and 2016, helping the Aggies claim two WAC regular-season championships and two WAC tournament championships.

In 2017, she graduated with a degree in Individualized Studies. Senior Night at New Mexico State was the kind of evening that reminds you why college sports matter beyond the stats and standings.

The Pan American Center crowd honored a player who had given them buzzer-beaters, record books rewritten, and four years of watching a girl from the Warm Springs Reservation compete at the highest level of the college game. NDN Sports—the nation’s leading platform for Native American athletics and a longtime chronicler of Abby’s career—was there to mark the moment. Their tribute was characteristically direct:

Then came the harder question. The one every athlete faces when the final buzzer sounds on their playing career: Who am I now, and where do I go?

For some, the answer takes years. For Abby Scott, the answer had probably been inside her all along. She just needed a little road before she could find her way home.

The road home

She didn’t go straight back to Oregon. First came a stint as Recreation Department Supervisor for the Arikara, Hidatsa and Mandan Tribal Nation in Newtown, North Dakota—leading youth basketball programs, designing fitness activities, investing in the lives of young Native people in another corner of the country. Then came a position as Recreation Department Leader for the Hoopa Valley Tribe in Hoopa, California, doing the same.

She was good at it. She understood these kids in a way that outsiders couldn’t easily learn. She knew what it felt like to be a young Native person who needed to see someone who looked like you doing extraordinary things. She had been that kid once, searching for that mirror.

But the pull of home—of the reservation, of the community that had raised her, of the mountain air and the high desert and the hallways of the school where she had first learned to dream big—was stronger than she could resist.

In 2019, Abby Scott walked into the Warm Springs k-8 Academy as a Special Education teacher. She had come full circle.

The hallway

There is a photograph that captures something no résumé can adequately describe.

Abby Scott stands in a school

hallway—the hallway of Warm Springs Academy, the very reservation school where she once walked as a student. She is tall, unmistakable, her curly hair pulled back. And she is surrounded by children—small arms reaching around her, heads tucked in against her, a tangle of kids who simply do not want to let go.

She is laughing. Or something very close to it. The kind of smile that only comes when you know—in the marrow of your bones—that you are exactly where you are supposed to be.

Brian Gallagher has taught at Warm Springs since 1994. He had Abby in his third-grade class. Decades later, he watched her walk those same halls as a colleague, and wrote about it with the plain certainty of a man who has seen a lot and knows the real thing when it crosses his path.

“Abby is one of those people whom you will never forget once you meet her,” he wrote. “Not a day goes by that I don’t see her in the hallway connecting with any grade level of student who smile and visibly brighten up when they see her.”

“She knows what it is like to face the obstacles our Native students face and how to persevere through those obstacles and to not only succeed but to be successful in a way that most people only dream of achieving. We need people like her to be in our schools and communities to model and demonstrate what any person can achieve—especially our native students.”

A rezball legacy

In 2022, Abby transitioned to Madras High School—the same school where she had averaged 22 points a game and earned a Division I scholarship. Now she teaches Special Education there, and she serves as Assistant Girls Basketball Coach for the White Buffaloes.

The players she coaches may not know every detail of her story yet—the WAC records, the buzzer-beaters, the film festivals, the

Exceptional catalog for historic show

The Museum at Warm Springs published a 96-page lavishly-illustrated, full-color catalog celebrating the current exhibition, Lillian Pitt: Art, Memory, Home.

The catalog is on sale now through October 10 in the museum gift shop; and available at a wholesale price to retail outlets, including museums and other gift shops.

The catalog retails for $40 plus shipping and handling. Through October 10 it is on sale for $30 in the gift shop. Museum members will receive an additional 10-percent discount.

The wholesale price for all retail outlets, including museums and other gits shops, is $15 plus shipping and handling through October 10; and $20 plus shipping and handling after October 10. To place an order, call 541-553-3331, extension 409.

Filled with historic, cultural and artistic insight from fellow artists, friends and relatives who know Lillian best, the catalog is both intimate and scholarly, and will stand as an important and lasting tribute to the life and works of one of Oregon's most beloved Indigenous artists.

Edited by Anne Keala Kelly, the catalog includes essays and perspectives by prominent Native contemporary artists, art historians and scholars, including Phillip Cash Cash, Rebecca Dobkins, Alfred 'Bud' Lane III, Toma Villa, Donald J. Stastny, museum architect and board member; and Elizabeth Woody, museum executive director, former Oregon Poet Laureate, and Lillian Pitt's niece.

"The scope of my Aunt Lillian's influence on the breadth of Indigenous Pacific artists, Native Americans and Polynesians reaches across oceans and generations..."

"She transforms people into resourceful power and kindred forces before they know what has happened—as only tricksters, changemakers and creative artists can," said Woody.

The majority of photographs in the catalog were shot by Dennis Maxwell with additional photos by Joe Cantrell. Maxwell and Cantrell are longtime friends of Pitt. The catalog was designed by DeeAnn Glazier, senior graphic designer at XPress Printing Inc. in Sisters.

Lillian Pitt: Art, Memory, Home is currently on view at the museum through Saturday, October 10.

Yvonne Carol Stevenson, 80, passed away on May 19, 2026, at St. Charles Medical Center in Bend.

Yvonne and her husband of 57 years, Brian Stevenson, raised their family on the Agency Plains.

Yvonne began her nursing career in 1985 after attending Central Oregon Community College. She worked for Madras Medical Group.

She later worked for Mountain View Hospital after becoming a Family Nurse Practitioner in 1991. In 1994 she became a Certified Nurse Midwife and began providing women's health and obstetric care as well.

In 1998, Yvonne and Brian moved to Alaska, fulfilling a lifelong dream they had shared.

There, she worked for SouthCentral Foundation at the Alaska Native Medical Center and traveled across 30 remote communities throughout the Aleutian Island chain.

In 2015, Yvonne accepted a part-time position with the Indian Health Service in the Portland Area, providing care across six clinics in Oregon, Washington, and Idaho.

In 2018, she transitioned to a full-time position at the Warm Springs Health and Wellness Center, where she continued caring for patients until her retirement in May 2026.

During her life, Yvonne touched countless lives in the Warm Springs, Madras, and Alaska communities through her compassion, service, and unwavering commitment to others.

Yvonne was a devoted wife and mother, a dedicated healthcare provider, a farmer, an adventurous scuba diver, and a treasured friend. She will be deeply missed by all who knew and loved her.

Wildfires, data centers, sea lions, other vital topics at Northwest fisheries gathering

Tribal leaders from the Northwest Indian Fisheries Commission and the Columbia River Inter-Tribal Fish Commission met recently to discuss issues of shared importance across the region.

Some of the major concerns of discussion are the threat of wildfires to treaty-protected resources, and the unregulated expansion of data centers.

Other topics included updates about the new USDA Office of Seafood; and proposed legislation to amend the Marine Mammal Protection Act to better protect salmon from pinniped predators.

Thank you to the Columbia River Inter-Tribal Fish Commission commissioners and staff who joined us at Little Creek.

Umatilla leader honored at PSU

Antone Minthorn, a Cayuse leader and former Board of Trustees chairman of the Confederated Tribes of the Umatilla Indian Reservation, has received an honorary doctorate of humane letters at Portland State University.

Mr. Minthorn accepted the degree during PSU’s 2026 commencement this summer at the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences ceremony in Portland.

After university leaders awarded the honorary doctorate, Mr. Minthorn took the stage and delivered a heartfelt speech to graduates, families and faculty.

“As you prepare to graduate from an institution whose very motto is ‘Let knowledge serve the city,’ I ask you to think deeply about what service means,” he said to the crowd.

“Service means listening before you act. It means honoring the history of the places you will shape. And most importantly, it means using your education to lift up communities that have been historically left out of the blueprint.

“Whether you are entering corporate boardrooms, public office, or community activism, remember that the best plans are those rooted in empathy, sustainability, and respect for those who came before you.”

Becoming a Language teacher

(from page 1)

Lorraine continues:

I asked the elders: “What do we need to do to keep the students from alcohol and drugs, prevent suicide, and help them graduate from high school?”

They told me that for our children to have pride, they must learn their culture and traditions. At the center of learning our culture and traditions is learning our language.

Whenever I think about stepping away from teaching, I remember those words. They remind me why this work matters and give me the strength to continue. I often tell my students, “You are the next generation that will keep our language alive.”

I became interested in the Grow Your Own program when the 509-J School District and the Culture & Heritage Department introduced the opportunity. The program combined language immersion, the chance to earn a bachelor’s degree, and teacher certification. It inspired me to dream bigger about expanding our language program and helping students become speakers of all three of our tribal languages: Warm Springs Ichishkiin, Wasco Kikshat, and Paiute Numu.

The Grow Your Own (GYO) program provided the funding that allowed me to attend George Fox University and earn my bachelor’s degree in Education. I graduated on April 27, 2026. I am deeply grateful for the GYO grant because I would not have been able to complete my degree without that financial support.

The journey was not easy. I lost my mother a little before I started the program, and during my studies I was also preparing for her memorial. In our culture, memorials are an important part of honoring our loved ones, and carrying those responsibilities weighed heavily on my mind. At the same time, I was completing 600 hours of student teaching in a Warm Springs Academy kindergarten classroom while continuing to teach and prepare lessons for my middle school Ichishkiin classes. It was one of the most challenging periods of my life, but it also strengthened my commitment to becoming the best teacher I could be.

Earning a bachelor’s degree had always been one of my lifelong goals. Years earlier, I completed an associate’s degree through Central Oregon Community College, and those credits transferred toward my bachelor’s degree. Reaching this milestone fulfilled a personal dream, but it also strengthened our language program. My education has given me additional knowledge and skills that benefit my students and support future grant opportunities that will help sustain and expand our language programs.

Going through the GYO program transformed me as an educator. I learned new teaching strategies, gained confidence in my classroom, and developed many ideas for strengthening my Ichishkiin instruction. I have seen my students successfully learn the language, and now I can combine my classroom experience with what I learned in college to create even stronger lessons.

My number one goal is to help my English-speaking students become confident speakers of Ichishkiin. From the day I became a teacher, my purpose has been to help our children reclaim and preserve our language. I am not a fluent Ichishkiin speaker, but every new word, phrase, question, or expression I learn, I share with my students. As I continue my own lifelong journey of learning Ichishkiin, I hope to inspire my students to become lifelong learners as well.

Together, we are ensuring that our language will continue to live through the next generation.
